The correspondent of the Daily News asserts that the commencement of hostile operations against Gaëta on the one side is thought to be at hand, as orders have been sent for the gunboats at Ancona to leave immediately for Naples, and the ships of war stationed at Genoa and Spezzia have been sent in the same direction. Considerable quantities of provisions have been despatched from Rome to Gaëta.

A decree dated Naples, 20th Dec., calls out the classes of the last four years.—These classes are to assemble at the end of February.

King Victor Emmanuel held a reception of the nobility at Naples on the 24th, which was numerously attended. An enthusiastic demonstration in favor of His Majesty took place in the evening. The army would quit Naples on the 27th, after attending the ball to be given by the National Guards.

The garrison of Gaëta has been diminished in numbers by the dismissal of a portion of the Royal Guard whose fidelity was doubtful. The remaining defenders were in a deplorable state, but resistance could be carried on still for a considerable time.

GAËTA, Dec. 24.—The bombardment continues day and night. The firing is reported to by the besieged.

AUSTRIA.

The Times correspondent at Vienna, is confident that nothing but brute force can induce the Austrian Government to quit the Quadrilateral.

There was a report in England that France had come to an understanding in regard to Venetia, and that a joint commission will shortly be sent to Venetia, urging the cession of Venetia without any territorial recompense.

It is stated that Austria had opened negotiations with Rome to complete the Concordat.

Accounts from Hungary are very unsatisfactory. No taxes were being paid.

A telegram from Vienna states that the Emperor had continued the resolutions of the Conference of Gran, and resolves upon executing the Rescripts dat. for February next.

VIENNA, Friday, Dec. 28.—The official Wiener Zeitung contains two Imperial decrees. The first orders that in view of the present extraordinary state of things the forced currency of Bank notes in Lombardy-Venetia shall be maintained. The second order that the payment of the interest of the national loans shall be effected in bank notes.

CHINA.

The Coins combined and Lord Elgin were expected to leave early in the year. Two regiments were about to leave and twelve men-of-war were the coming hosts.

The fate of the entire party of prisoners taken by Capt. Brabazon remains a mystery. The death of Capt. Brabazon occurred on the 1st, and he was saved much of the suffering which others underwent; he was beheaded by order of the Tartar General. The Abbe de Lua was beheaded some time since. The news intelligence Lord Elgin delayed about signing the Convention, the more alarmed the Chinese Government became.

It was resolved that the summer palace of the Emperor should be burned to the ground, as the spot whence most of the atrocities towards the prisoners had been perpetrated. The gardens, palaces, temples, and pagodas, occupied a space of six or seven miles in extent. Two days were required effectually to set fire to and destroy all the buildings. The property destroyed exceeded two millions sterling, exclusive of the buildings.

The Chinese were brought to terms on other points by a proclamation from the Emperor to his subjects, declaring that the Barbarians had conquered the Celestials.

On the day named the Allied Troops with-—HOW THE PRINCE STOOD IT!—Almost every body wondered, and so did we; but there will be no more wondering what is best to take for Coughs and Colds, or for the cure of Rheumatism, Pleurisy, Neuralgia, Tooth Ache, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Bowel Complaints, &c.

The Canadian Pain Destroyer now takes the lead everywhere, for such complaints, and is entirely eclipsing all other preparations of the kind.

"MONTREAL WITNESS"
FOR 1861.

THE "MONTREAL WITNESS" is non-sectarian in religion, though very decidedly Evangelical in its tone and influence. It is free from party politics, though strongly in favour of truth, justice and freedom. It spares no pains to keep up with the news of the day, and is a reliable commercial record. It also devotes much space to literature suitable for family reading, and altogether is designed to be equally interesting to young and old of both sexes. The Minister, the Merchant, the Farmer, and the family, will, it is hoped, find it alike interesting. Of this paper three editions are published as under:—

The Daily Witness, containing 4 pages, is published every Forenoon, and sent by the evening mails. $4 per annum. The city is supplied by news-venders.

For all subscribers out of Canada, half-a-cent a number is to be remitted with and in addition to, the subscription price.

CHALLENGE!

To all whom it may Concern.—It is a proved fact that all Worm Medicines fall into Complete contempt compared with McKenzie's Deaf Nuts Worm Confections. It is the universal opinion of those of every class. It gives most rich and rapid relief to the fretful, emaciated and sickly child—it not only eradicates every species of worms, but it destroys the whole system from all impurities. The extensive sale of this Worm Candy is sufficient proof of the efficacy. There are scores of Worm Medicines in Canada, but it has been conquered, and the public convinced, that the sale of the Deaf Nut Worm Candy exceeds one-third more than all the others combined. It is sold by every dealer in medicines for 15 cents; and is guaranteed to be the best Worm Medicine in existence. Beware of the silver Coated Nuts in another column.

ALBION HOTEL,
MONTREAL.
L. W. DECKER, Proprietor.
IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST. PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed in the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

Poetry.

THE LAND OF THE THISTLE AND BROOM.

There are lands far away in more sun-favored climes,
Where, round the dark cypress, the myrtle entwines;
But far dearer to me is my infancy's home,
The land of the blue-bell, the thistle, and broom.

Though Spain may exult in her orange-clad bowers,
And Italy boast of her delicate flowers;
Yet sweeter to me is the wild hawthorne-bloom
That waves in the land of the thistle and broom.

Though their mornings be radiant—their evenings serene,
And sunshine unclouded in any gladden the scene,
More pleasing to me is the shadowy noon,
In the land of the blue-bell, the thistle, and broom.

Then hurrah! for the land of the fleet-footed roe!
The cliff-nestled eagle that fears not a foe!
The cloud-kissing mountains, enshrouded in gloom,
The land of the blue-bell, the thistle, and broom.

Hurrah! for the land of the crag and the rock,
The deep-rushing torrent, the loud cataract!
The hearts-sounding ocean that dashes in foam
Round the shores of the land of the thistle and broom!

Hurrah! for the land of the soul-stirring song,
Whose cadence the echoes of ages prolong;
And bid the bright deeds of her heroes illume
The land of the blue-bell, the thistle, and broom.

Hurrah! for the land of the free and the brave,
The home of the martyr, the patriot's grave!
Who for liberty fought 'neath the bonnet and plume,
And died for the land of the thistle and broom!

The Massacre of Wyoming.

The terrible massacre of Wyoming, which has been recorded by historians and sung by poets, is familiar to the general reader, but the subjoined thrilling sketch of some of the incidents connected therewith, from the lips of a venerable old man who "sleeps with his fathers," will doubtless prove interesting to all classes.

"I was a mere infant (said the aged narrator) when my father sold his farm in Connecticut and together with several of his neighbors, removed to the beautiful valley of Wyoming, in Pennsylvania. This was in the year 1767, and at that time it was believed by our people that this valley of Wyoming belonged by right of charter to the colony of Connecticut, but the settlers from different portions of Pennsylvania contended it was theirs by right of purchase from the Indians, and so the two factions got into a bitter quarrel, by which considerable blood was shed on both sides.

"My earliest recollections are of this feud, and the violent animosities thus engendered; and of being at times shut up in the fort, hearing the rattle of musketry, and seeing men, all bloody, stretched on litters and pallets, some living and groaning, and some dead, cold and ghastly. These sights and sounds of deadly contention my young senses had in some measure become accustomed to; but still I cannot say I was prepared for the horrible scenes which followed a few years later.

"The beginning of the war of the Revolution put and end to our civil strife in the valley, and, I may say, united the two factions against a common foe. Why contend among ourselves for a few acres while a foreign enemy was laying waste the whole country, and taking all our lands and rights from us? Nowhere, I believe, did the fires of patriotism burn brighter than in our late contentious valley, from which went forth all the able-bodied men that could be spared, and who proved themselves heroes on many occasions.

"It was while our brave soldiers were away that the infamous tory commander, Colonel John Butler, conceived the inhuman design of marching an overwhelming force upon the defenceless settlement, and taking a fiend's revenge in the murder of the weak and innocent. For this purpose he collected four hundred British tories and seven hundred Indians, descendants of the Susquehanas, and captured and took possession of a couple of forts at the head of the valley.

"Never shall I forget the terrors excited by the appearance of this armed body of white men and savages, for we knew ourselves defenceless, and that we could expect no mercy from such an enemy. Here were several hundred women and children, a few hoary-headed and trembling grandsires, too old to bear arms, a few stripling youths, too young for the war, with a sprinkling of men in the prime of life, the remnants of train-bands which had gone to join the army of Washington. Of old and young that could bear a musket to the field, we could scarcely raise a force of four hundred to oppose eleven hundred, and not a single fort, out of several in the valley, that could withstand for an hour the assaults of the enemy. What could we expect, therefore, but a horrible and indiscriminate butchery, or a still more horrible captivity among brutal savages.

"Oh! the agony that almost burst my young heart, as my poor, dear mother, with glaring eyes and pallid features, threw her head across around myself and younger sister, and strained us to her bosom! praying, amid choking sobs, that God in His Providence would preserve us and suffer us to escape the impending death. She was now our only hope, and we her only solace—for my father was away with the army, and had not been heard from for several months.

"There chanced at this time to be in the valley a few experienced officers, the most prominent of whom was Colonel Zebulon Butler; and by unanimous desire he took command of our deroted little band of defenders, and led them forth to the sacrifice. Young as I was, being only between nine and ten, I asked permission to go with them and meet my fate with the rest—but my mother would not permit me out of her sight for a moment. Along with a great many other women and children, she had taken refuge in one of the stockade forts; and there, trembling, quivering, and praying together, we all awaited the terrible result. The sounds of the conflict began between four and five o'clock in the afternoon; and from that time till near dusk, when the yells of our savage enemies announced that they had gained the victory, we all stood clinging to one another in breathless hope and fear,—the silence with us only broken by smothered groans and short ejaculations; but now, when we felt that all was over and lost, every breath seemed to be sent forth with the most indescribable anguish. A few minutes later a man, almost covered with blood, burst in through the gate, and groaned out, as he fell dying to the ground:

"'All is lost! all is lost! Fly to the mountains and save yourselves!'

"With a wild cry of terror and anguish, my mother caught up my little sister in her arms, seized me by the hand, and darted forth through the rear gate and toward some trees that grew upon the bank of the river.

"It was not yet dark, and in the dim light we could see figures running in every direction—some were in flight and some in pursuit.

"One man who was only a few paces before us, was pursued by a fleet-footed savage, who soon overtook him and thrust his spear through his back; and as we altered our course to avoid the latter, I saw him bending over his victim for the purpose of taking his scalp.

"A woman on our right, with an infant in her arms, and who was evidently making for the same point as ourselves, was caught by a savage, and both were brained within twenty feet of us. The monster stopped to secured the scalps of both, which gave us time to reach a little thicket on the bank of the river, within which my mother secreted herself and us, and whispered us not to speak or scarcely breath.

"All around us now were the screams and shrieks of women and children, the triumphant and appaling yells of savages, and the occasional reports of muskets, as here and there the enemy shot down a fugitive in cold blood. Shortly after, a lurid glare fell upon us, and looking out through the bushes, we saw the flames bursting from a window of the nearest cabin, and a group of dark figures collected around it.

"'Oh, merciful God! is there no hope for us?' groaned my mother, straining us convulsively to her heaving breast.

"'They will soon see us here,' said I, 'it gets so dreadfully light.

"My mother shook all over with maternal anguish as she added:

"'And now it is too late to fly,—for the moment we stir from here, we shall be exposed to a hundred eyes. Gracious Heaven!' she added, catching her breath convulsively, "there is a party coming this way. Oh, God! my poor children! oh, God! my poor children!'

"My little sister gave a long, choking sigh, and pressed her bloodless face against my mother's bosom, as if to shut out the sight. I looked and saw the men advancing straight toward us. There were five of them, the centre one seeming to be forced forward by the others.

"'I do not think they have seen us,' said I, hurriedly, 'let us go down into the water; it is better to be drowned than to fall into their cruel hands.'

"'Oh, yes!' gasped my mother; 'anything rather than that. Keep still, my children while I try the water.'

"The bank at this point was providentially overhanging and the water not deep; and as my mother quickly and silently lowered herself into it, she announced with an expression of heartfelt joy which I shall never forget, that through the blessing of God we might be saved. She drew us silently after her, and we all crouched down under a shelving bank that completely screened us from the view of anyone standing on the ground above; and though by this arrangement the water came up above our waists, we only rejoiced that it so much the more added to our concealment and safety.

"'The men we had seen approaching came to the bank of the river, a few paces below our concealment, and then a coarse, gruff voice said:

"'Here it was, John Aikens, under this very tree, you pledged your love to Margaret Stanley; and I took an oath then that you should die here.'

"'Mercy, William, mercy!' pleaded a trembling voice.

"'I'm a loyal heart and you a rebel,' replied the other; 'and you needn't look for mercy from him you call a tory. If Margaret lives I'll have her; but you shall die at any rate!'

"With these words there came a report like that of a pistol, followed by a sort of gurgling groan and the sudden plunge of a heavy body into the water. I could feel a shiver run through the frame of my delicate mother and sister, as they all clung together in silent horror at this cold-blood murder—perpetrated, not by a savage, but by a man who was akin to him he slew.

"We did not actually see any more of the cold-blooded attrocities of that terrible night, but we heard them all around us—Cries, screams, yells, and reports of muskets, still resounded. By the light of the burning buildings, fugitives were constantly being routed from their places of concealment, and were then shot, stabbed, or tomahawked—no quarter being given in any case, and only here and there one making his escape. The plain, and the whole stretch of the river along the plain, was a scene of atrocious butchery. In one case, sixteen men were placed in a circle round a rock, and each held by an athletic Indian, while a squaw, armed only with a knife and tomahawk, walked coolly around, and stabbed or brained them one at a time. In another instance, nine others were served in the same manner. Of the four hundred gallant fellows who went forth to defend their homes only sixteen escaped from that field of slaughter; and when to these we add the women and children that were slain in every direction, while others who died of fright, fatigue, and starvation in the wilderness, we swell the list till the heart of humanity fairly sickens at the contemplation.

"We remained in our last place of concealment, unseen and unmolested, till the fires had burned down, and savage thirst for blood had been so far been satiated as to bring sleep to the eyes of those human demons; and then we (tremblingly crawled forth, and chafed our water-benumbed limbs, and stole away among the shadows of the trees, passed here and there a ghastly corpse, and so escaped to the mountains, where overta-ked nature forced sleep upon us just as another day was dawning upon the world.

"It would take me hours to describe the scenes of hardship, peril and suffering which occurred even after our escape from the field of massacre.

"On awakening from our brief but troubled sleep, we were joined by a party of three women and seven children, who had been concealed among some rocks over night, and had commenced their toilsome march at the break of day. One of these women was a young, fragile creature, carrying an infant less than a week old. Her husband and brother had been slain in the battle, and she had risen from a sick bed and fled, to save the life of her child rather than her own. She soon after fell from exhaustion, and died while we were trying to revive her. We were obliged to leave her without burial, and hasten on to save ourselves. My mother took the babe and carried it for several hours, but during the day it went into convulsions and died also.

"As we continued on we overtook parties who had become exhausted, and had sat down to rest, perhaps never to rise again. One white-haired old man we found reclining against a rock. My mother took hold of him gently, and spoke to him kindly, thinking he was merely dozing. She started back with a shudder, for the old man was dead.

"The first night following our flight we slept on a bare rock, in a wild, gloomy place in the mountains, having had nothing to eat since our escape. Long before morning my little sister became feverish and delirious, and began to call for her father. My mother sat up hold her in her lap the rest of the night; but it almost broke her heart to see her in that condition without being able to do anything for her, and to hear her calls for him who might even then be filling a soldier's grave.

"As soon as it was light, we set forward again—my mother, though scarcely able to stand, carrying my sister in her arms. I plead to be allowed to relieve her, but she would not consent to it. On reaching a running stream, she made a cup of leaves and gave my sister as much water as she could drink, and bathed her in it besides. This acted like a charm, and broke the fever, which did not trouble her again.

"Before noon we came upon a large field of whortleberries, of which we all ate ravenously; and these I think saved our lives; for without some subsistence, I am certain we could not have held out another day. This day two women gave out and were left behind; their fate I never learned.

"Another night and another day in that awful wilderness; and then, joy unspeakable; we reached a settlement, and were saved.

"A month later my father joined us, and such a happy reunion I never saw.—We had lost all our worldly goods, it is true; but we had all met again on earth, and that under the circumstances was a blessing to thank God for the rest of our lives."

"Alas! how few of all the once happy hearts in the beautiful valley of Wyoming could join with us in our thanksgiving!"

AN AWFUL FEAT.

On the road, amongst the Himalaya Mountains, I beheld a species of tight-rope performance, which might bring the colour to M. Blondin's cheeks. The rope extended from an eminence on the hill side above the village, over a ravine and down to a green knoll in the fields below, and was drawn as tight as several hundred men with their united strength could effect.—They had just finished stretching it when we arrived, and I could scarcely believe a man was actually going to slide down it, the feat appeared so utterly impracticable with any chance of safety. Imagine a rope extended from the top of a rock at least 500 feet high, to a pole some 2000 feet from its base, and some idea may be formed of the undertaking. A great concourse of people of both sexes were assembled, all in their holiday garb, and the man who was to slide was swinging round at the end of a long plank fixed on an upright pole as a pivot. Every few moments he called some person amongst the crowd by name, and swinging around several times to the individual's honour, received from him a trifling gratuity. He so sooner noticed me than I was included in the category, and having been told it was in no way a religious ceremony, I gave him a rupee. When this was over he was escorted to the eminence above, amidst the loud lamentations of his family and the discordant music of the village band. With the glove I saw him placed on a kind of saddle on the rope, two individuals busy fastening something to his legs, which I saw afterwards were kept fitted with earth. The spectators amongst whom I stood, were assembled in groups near the pole to which the lower end of the rope was attached, all intently watching for the descent. Presently he was let go, and came down several hundred yards with terrible velocity, a stream of smoke following in his wake. As he approached us, the ladies being evidently disinclined, the career was less rapid, and became slower and slower towards the end, when the rope being sufficiently near the ground he was taken down amidst the shouts and congratulations of the villagers.—Rambles in the Himalayas.

AN AFRICAN MONARCH.

Late European papers have informed us that the present King of Dahomey, Western Africa, has been exhibiting his grief for the death of his predecessor, King Guezo, and his respect for his memory, by a human sacrifice involving many hundred lives in the holocaust. As little is known respecting Dahomey, that realm of darkness, mystery and horror, we have thought that some authentic details of its manners and customs might prove acceptable to our readers, as well from their novelty as their intrinsic interest. We accordingly avail ourselves of the journal of Lieut. Bouet, who visited Dahomey in 1851, with credentials and presents from the French government. This account has never before appeared in English.

The caravan of Lieutenant Bouet, consisted of a large number of persons, including an armed escort or guard of honor, made up of natives equipped and drilled in the European fashion, furnished by the French fort on the coast. Without meeting with any special adventure, they accomplished their journey, and were finally received as follows into Abomey, the royal capital:

"A frightful clamor of cannons, blunderbusses, carbines, tomtoms (huge drums), bells, trumpets, and other musical instruments, announced the arrival of the procession which came to meet me to lead me to the square where the king sent to me his first eunuch, bearing the great staff of honor to inform me that I could enter Abomey, and that the king awaited me in the palace square. I mustered my band and marched. As soon as I had cleared the gates of Abomey, over a wretched bridge made of the trunks of trees, I got into my hammock and made my way through a crowd of people and warriors, amidst the detonations of artillery and musketry, to the great square of the palace. I found the king under the apatang, or great gallery of his palace, surrounded by three or four thousand of his Amazons, clad in glittering costumes, and bearing the richest arms. A broad space separated this crowd of female warriors from the soldiers of the other sex. The square was decorated with a thousand banners, and over the apatang waved the royal flag of Dahomey—a fawn-colored lion crouching in the centre of a red field. I passed the king in review several times, escorted by troops, whom I ordered to fire a salute.

"Melom next made his appearance,—the great minister of the interior, of commerce and the navy,—a man of extraordinary activity for his age (about eighty) and of great dexterity and intelligence, who has held his offices for more than thirty-five years. Whatever favor is sought of the king must in the first place be solicited of him.

"Melom prostrated himself before the king, at a hundred paces distant, making a sign to me to uncover myself and approach his majesty. I replied to him through my interpreter, a young black of Whydo, who had been brought up in France by one of Mr. Riggin's fosters, that when he had sent me a parasol to shelter myself from the rays of the burning sun which was darting down on us, I would take off my hat but not before. Almost immediately two slaves came running up with an immense umbrella covered with gilding, and I approached the king, standing and bareheaded. It might be imagined that I did not look at him alone—I gazed with the most eager curiosity on the richly attired female warriors who surrounded him. The greater part were young and pretty.

"King Guezo is about fifty or sixty years old, with a very intelligent and striking face. He was wrapped in a rich silk robe and reclining on cushions of velvet and brocade. He immediately arose, and made inquiries after his friend, the "King" of France (he could not be made to understand the change of government,) and manifested a warm pleasure at the arrival of one of his ambassadors during his reign, in short, did the amiable in his best manner.

"I replied as well as I was able, and gave him with great ceremony the satin bag containing the letter which the government had ordered me to present to him, and which bore these words, uttered in pearls on the outside envelope—"To his Majesty Guezo, King of Dahomey." He received the bag with the greatest joy, and begged me to read the letter to him. Having sent afterwards for some magnificent waiters of solid silver loaded with flasks of European liquors and wines, he offered to drink to the King of France. I accepted the pledge; but as soon as he raised the glass to his lips, a terrific tumult rose in the square, and among his Amazons. His principal women rushed towards him, surrounding him with a great veil of silk, and all warriors, women and people, prostrated themselves, turning their heads away, and crying, in the language of the country—"It is night!" while the pieces of artillery thundered out a deafening salute. When this ceased, the first Amazon-guard gave in his house on behalf of the King of France, was ended, the people rose, crying, "It is day!" I was lodged, and quite comfortably, in the house of Melom, the prime minister.

"The people of Dahomey are exceedingly cruel—prisoners taken in war are tortured, impaled and put to death. The daily and jaw-bones of animals constitute the palaces, the musical instruments and even ornaments.

"I must not omit to speak of the Minguet. He is the first dignitary of the kingdom, and even takes precedence of Melom. He administers justice, and when tumult executes condemned prisoners, desiring to fetch executioners from the east. In these executions, particularly in the night time, the "executioners" preceded by tomtoms and bells, begin, a little before sunset, to make the tour of the palace. At this well-known sound the inhabitants fly into their houses, terror stricken, for each inhabitant is forbidden, on such a night, to be out of doors. Soon cries and groans are heard in the silence of the night. In the unfortunate prisoners who are being pursued by torchlight about the palace, and subjected to all sorts of fortunes before [illegible] death. Sometimes, on hearing these distant and fearful cries, I wished to rush out of the house and try to be a hidden witness of some of these horrible mysteries, but I was forced to renounce my project. In fact, I myself should have paid the penalty of my life for this criminal infraction of the laws of the kingdom, but for the chiefs placed near my person to accompany me, protest me, and warn me of the customs of the country.—Some time before daybreak, the grim cause—a sign that all is over; and next morning fresh heads are stuck in the squares or on the walls. Then this veil of terror which seems to cover Abomey is lifted; each one breathes again, and the inhabitants begin to go out, not without anxiety, and scrutinize silently in the street that winds around the palace, the long traces of freshly-spilt blood which mark each halt made by the victims and the executioners. I was assured that in these executions, the hatred against prisoners of war was weak, that warriors or Amazons solicited the favor of striking them down, and then drank their blood in a sort of furious intoxication. This only happens to prisoners of war taken from their oldest enemies, the Segots and the Mequis.

"I went to pay a visit to the Minguet at his house, and I could not help laughing at the fright of my hammock-bearers, and all the people who accompanied me, when we had entered this formidable mansion. This was easily explained, since Meloom himself never enters it except when compelled to do so. The old villain, who has more than one peccadillo on his conscience, is never sure of coming out of it with a whole skin. The house of the Minguet is a vast inclosure, comprising many dungeons and subterranean retreats, whence groans and cries issued to the great terror of my men. The Minguet is of nearly the same age as the King. He is tall, and of a robust constitution, and his countenance is quite an open one. I should never have taken him for the ferocious man, who, for thirty years, has taken so much pleasure in shedding human blood. He was suffering from a species of leprosy, which had almost stripped his right hand, and I could not help regarding it as a visitation of God. I never saw my hammock-bearers lift me more speedily or run more quickly with me than when I left the Minguet's house to return to my lodging.

"I obtained, with considerable difficulty, permission from Guezo to visit, on my return to Cana, his palace and the tombs it encloses. I could, therefore, penetrate with my whole band the sacred enclosure. A numerous company of Amazons in full dress were posted in the court of tombs, which were nothing but a range of low huts, at the entrance of each of which stood an old retired Amazon. The roof of each hut was covered with rich silk, surmounted by a red flag, and by large allegorial figures in massive silver. On each side of the entrance doors rose two sort of reddish mounds, paved with the skulls, shin-bones and jaws of the unfortunate persons sacrificed annually here in honor of the royal dead. In the interior of the huts are the tombs, constructed like those of Europe, and said to be very fine, but it was impossible to see the interior. When I attempted to do so the Amazons, the old women, and my own people, set up a horrible outcry. All arms were raised to heaven simultaneously, and I exclaimed, internally, "Confound this country! whither all is mystery and terror." I returned to Whydo without inconvenience, and after a short stay in this town, went on board the government steamer Espadon, which took me to Gaboon."

Such is a portion of Lieut Bouet's account of these terrible, remarkable people. We presume that a trip to Dahomey will never be included in the programme of a fashionable tour.

THE PERIL OF THE CREVASSE.

Stories of Alpine adventure have, we believe, a fascination for all classes of readers; for those who would like to be the heroes of the perils they read about, and for those who prefer enjoying them simply in imagination. A writer in "All the Year Round" sketches some of the agreeness of travel in the mountain-tops: I remember well the first glimpse I had into one of these terrible crevasses which intersect glaciers. Getting a guide to hold my hand, I leaned over the yawning brink and gazed carefully into the fathomless abyss. The two perpendicular walls of ice appeared to join together about three feet down—an appearance resulting from the convexity of the crevasse. Usually, I believe, a great split ends only where the glacier touches the ground beneath. No one who falls into one of these ever comes out alive, said one of the guides. "Yes," said another, "a man once escaped, and lives still at the Grindelwald; he was a chamois hunter, and when coming home above over the glacier, his foot slipped and he was precipitated into a crevasse. His fall was broken by projecting ledges and blocks of ice, which, however, gave way as he clung to them. After falling three hundred feet, he reached the bottom of the glacier, with a leg and an arm broken. He found a hollow space between the ice and the ground, through which a stream of water ran. Instinctively he followed its course, despite the great pain he endured, and after crawling along for three hours, found himself friend from the glacier." Ordinary crevasses may from three to eight feet wide at the top, but the sides approach each other rapidly, so that a man would be nudged in between two walls of ice long before he could reach the bottom, and then, unless there should be room for a hand hold enough and strong enough, what an awful death! An extraordinary instance of perhaps more than a crevasse only four yards deep, but connected to death, the loss of his body ever melting the ice, he ever sinking deeper and deeper into his dreadful grave.

God made the world in six days—it takes man ecumenically six months to find fault with it.

There is said to be living in Winchester a man who is pensioned off "with a perpetual memory," that he was employed by the various benevolent societies to remember the INFLUENCE OF FEMALE SOCIETY.

It is better for you to pass an evening once or twice in a lady's drawing room, even though the conversation is slow, and you know the girls sing by heart, than to a club, tavern, or the pit of a theatre. All amusements of youth to which virtuous women are not admitted, rely on it, are deleterious in their nature. All men who avoid female society have dull perceptions, and are stupid, or have gross tastes, and revolt against what is pure. Your club swaggerers, who are making the tour of billiard rooms all night, talk female society insipid. Poetry is insipid to a pedant; history has no charms for a blind man; music does not please a poor beast who does not know one tune from another; and as a true epicure is hardly ever tired of water, simply and brown bread and butter, I protest I can talk for a whole night talking to a well-regulated, kindly woman, about her last evening's entertainment. One of the great benefits a man may derive from womanly society is that he is bound to be respectful to them. The habit is of great good to your moral man, depend upon it. Our education makes us the most eminently selfish men in the world. We fight for ourselves, we push for ourselves, we yearn for ourselves, we light our pipes, and my wife won't go out; we prefer ourselves and our ease; and the greatest proof that comes to a man from a man's society is, that he has to think of somebody besides himself, somebody to whom he is bound to be constantly attentive and respectful.—Thackeray.

THE GULF OF SPEZZIA.

The Bay, or, as it is commonly called, the Gulf of Spezzia is capable of encountering all the fleets of Europe, and to henceforth to become the great naval arsenal of the new kingdom. The town, standing just at the head of this deep inlet, reminds one in point of situation, of Boston; but instead of having behind it the Hems, it is closely hemmed in by mountains—a bold ground which figures better upon canvas than set up well in ledgers. Approaching the place at night, one would fear that its prosperity commences must be very limited; but in the morning, as you begin to unravel them bills under the rays of the early sun, you find what mountains they are! All the riches of the plain flourish on their sides, and like an audience to an amphitheatre, not only the more impressive for the elevation. As the road winds up scientifically, down comes peasant girls in their blue petticoat and red bodices, and now and then a straggling mountaineer, with a living lamb slung over his back, striding strait down the hill by short paths to the town.

When one has reached the elevation of a few hundred feet, there one receives repeated bursts of admiration. The opposite ridges, with their upland woods and villages, the valley at your feet, with its flowering trees and glistening town, the glorious bay stretching away to seaward, with its wild coast, and also around you the ruins of garden mansions and mountain grandeur, altogether form a spectacle almost worth going to Spezzia to see.

LIVING FOR ONE'S EASE.

Henry Ward Beecher says of those men who have no care or thought for others, but are contented with looking after their own ease and enjoyment, that they ought to be put in a coffin, for their life's work is ended.

"When God wanted sponges and oysters he made them, and put one on the rock and the other on the sand. When he made man he did not make him to be a sponge or an oyster; he made him with feet and hands, and a head and heart, and vital blood, and a place to use them, and said to him, 'Go work!'

"But I tell you if a man has come to that point where he is content, he ought to be put into his coffin, for a contented live man is a stem. He runs just come to that state in which he says, 'I do not want to know any more,' he is in a state in which he ought to be changed into a mummy. Of all baleful things, mummies are the most baleful; and of mummies there are the most baleful that are running about the streets and talking."

DONALD AND THE COCKNEYS.

Two youths from London, while enjoying themselves viewing the heather in Argyllshire came upon a dudeet looking shepherd reading on the top of a hill. They thumbed him by remarking:

"You have a fine view here; you will see a great way."

"Oo aye, ferry great way."

"Ah! then you will see Annesley Park here?"

"Ferror dem that," said Donald.

"Ah! how's that?"

"Oo, just vait till the mist gangs awa' an' ye'll see the neeps!"

A SINGULAR STORY.

A singular story is told of an apple-tree planted over the grave of Roger Williams. This tree had pushed downward one of its main roots in a sloping direction, and nearly straight across, towards the precise spot that had been occupied by the dust of R. Williams. There, meeting a rock in the circumference, the root deviated from the line of the limb-bone to the knee, and then divided into two branches, each one following a leg-bone to the hand, which they both closely spread to the extremities of the ends of the skeleton. One of the roots formed a slight crook at the part occupied by the knee-joint, thus producing an increased resemblance to the outlines of the skeleton of Roger Williams, as it existed when first deposited, considering a very imperfect representation of the state in which the remains of the body is [illegible] entirely absorbed.—Providence Herald.

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE.

MONTREAL, SATURDAY MORNING, JANUARY 25, 1861.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The yearly meeting of the Corporation of the City of Montreal was held in the Council Chamber, on Monday last, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of receiving the Auditors' Report, and the election of Officers for the ensuing year.

The following gentlemen were appointed Auditors:—

James Foley and Christopher Barton were appointed Auditors.

Moved by Mr. McHugh, seconded by Mr. Dick,—That Messrs Grover, Cotlange, Hodgson, Ingram and the mover be a Special Committee to draft a memorial for both houses of the Legislature praying for the enactment of a stringent Usury Law, and also for the abolition of the present law of distress, which is productive of great injustice to the tenant and to the community at large.

Moved by Mr. McHugh, seconded by Mr. Dick,—That this Council, in view of the fact that the Corporation of the City of Montreal is the largest landed proprietor in the City, and that the Corporation is frequently called upon to pay large sums for the opening of streets, squares, &c., thereby greatly increasing the value of property adjacent thereto, and that the Corporation receives no benefit therefrom, this Council is of opinion that the Corporation should receive a portion of the increased value of property, and that the Committee appointed to draft a memorial to the Legislature on the subject of Usury, be instructed to embody in such memorial a request that the Corporation may be empowered to levy a tax upon property benefited by the opening of streets, squares, &c., and that the Committee report thereon at the next meeting of the Council.

Moved by Mr. Ingram, seconded by Mr. Grover,—That the Committee on Fire Engines be instructed to purchase a new Fire Engine, to be placed in the Point St. Charles Ward, and that the Committee be authorized to call for tenders for the same.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Dick

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

(From the London Times, January 1.)

Anxiety reigns in every Foreign office in Europe. Every Exchange is conscious of an uneasy influence, and vibrates like the needle before a magnetic storm. The political world feels sensitively, for this day Napoleon III., Emperor of the French, will address the Diplomatic Body, and the policy of a great military empire for the coming year may be revealed.

The Emperor has at his gates the Austrian Empire in process of dissolution or transformation, while the people of Italy are laboring with more or less of energy to achieve the independence of their country. The Turkish Empire may soon again demand attention; even the North of Europe is not entirely free from disquiet through the feud which rages between the Danes and Germans. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the French Emperor will not add to the existing elements of disquiet by language of menace, or warning — which coming from his lips is the same as menace. And yet there is a great temptation. To have such power and such opportunities and not to use them will show much self-denial or caution. To-day the Envoys of a dozen courts will attend at the Tuileries with the apprehension that they may chance to hear their fate from the mouth of the Potentate who receives them. The affairs of Italy, and in some degree of Austria, are entirely in his hands. He may tell the Nuncio that it is the mission of France everywhere to protect the interests of religion, and that the venerable Head of the Church may depend on his protection, or he may suggest that the march of events and opinions has made the temporal power of priests an anachronism, and that his holiness will do well to accept the position of the first Italian Bishop, with the appanage of the Vatican and a garden. The hopes of Sardinia may be fostered or crushed with equal ease. Should Francis II. still have a Minister at Paris, a word or a look would agitate the councils of Gaeta. Austria is not a casual nor an obliged friend, and she may prove once more a stubborn foe, but she can hardly fail to look for some hint as to the events of the year that has begun. Is she to do battle for the last provinces which she holds on Italian ground, or do the stipulations of Villafranca still bind the consciences of the French Emperor?—Even Prussia, though the demonstrations of Germany and Belgium have given new scrutiny to the Rhine, cannot be regardless of the schemes of one who is the representative of French ambition. England alone may look on with calmness, certain that, though European troubles may tax her resources and stay her domestic progress, yet her safety and honor are secure so long as her affairs are directed by a temperate government, supported by a patriotic people.

—HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—An indisputable fact.—Costiveness of the Bowels.—Many diseases which afflict mankind originate in the sluggish nature or impaired functions of the stomach and viscera, namely, indigestion, headache, nervous disorders, piles and cutaneous eruptions, for which cathartics are usually prescribed. These may relieve the bowels for the time but will not reach the active cause of the complaint. Ordinary purgatives create a necessity for repetition, until eventually the bowels become powerless. Holloway's Pills not only seek the seat of the disorder, but after evacuating the depraved humors from the stomach and intestines, so renovate and invigorate them as to prevent a future recurrence. Read the advertisement elsewhere.

SPEED OF WHALES.—A boat attached to a sperm whale, in the Pacific, was drawn 32 miles an hour, and the probability is that a whale will go at the rate of 70 miles an hour. The most pleasant speed we know of is that of Byran's Pulmonic Wafers, which cure a cough, hoarseness, sore throat, etc., in a few hours. 25 cents a box, and sold by all druggists.

EVERYBODY uses it and all agree that the Canadian Pain Destroyer is the best medicine for the instant and permanent removal of pains from the system, ever yet discovered. It acts as a general alterative, thereby removing the cause of disease and renovating the action of the system.—For the purposes for which it is recommended, it has no equal. Truly it is a "good thing." See advertisement.

CHALLENGE!

To all whom it may Concern.—It is a positive fact that all Worm Medicines fails into insignificance compared with McKenzie's Dead Shot Worm Candystick. It far surpasses the expectations of every one. It gives new life and vigor to the fretful, emaciated and sickly child.—It not only eradicates every species of worms, but it cleanses the whole system from all impurities. The extensive sale of this Worm Candy is sufficient proof of its efficacy. There are scores of Worm Medicines in Canada, yet, it has been ascertained, on reliable information, that the sale of the Dead Shot Worm Candystick is one-third more than all the others combined. It is sold by every Dealer in medicine for 15 cents; four packages for half-a-dollar.—See advertisement in another column.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY CHARLES ARNOLD, OF CHARLESTON, C. W.

PART III.

[illegible] and I have selected a location as near perfection as possible, the first and most important consideration is to have it cultivated and cultivated well, otherwise [illegible] the farmer. I hope the reader will bear with me in treating it at considerable length.

Good fences are absolutely necessary to good farming, and in order to construct a good fence three things are required, viz: cheapness, durability, and neatness. The question forces itself on our notice, "How shall we best secure these requisites now and provide for a continued supply of material for the same purpose in time to come."

Hitherto Canadian farmers have depended almost exclusively on the primitive forest for a supply of timber for fencing purposes, and if there were no prospects of this becoming exhausted there would be no need of looking for another, but when we consider the rapidity with which our Forests are being cleared up; and the immense quantities of the best rail timber annually destroyed by fire, it is evident that in a very few years this kind of material, if some means are not adopted to preserve it, will be almost impossible to obtain, so that it deserves our earnest consideration how we shall use the present supply to the best advantage and at the same time adopt such means as will provide a substitute to be available when the present supply is exhausted. Let us first consider the best method of constructing fences with our present means that they may not only be most efficient but endure for the greatest length of time.

The surface of a large portion of Canadian soil when first brought under cultivation is thickly covered with boulder stones which must be removed before the land can be thoroughly cultivated. These should by all means be converted into fences as far as they go, but I do not approve of the plan generally pursued of building a wall for a part of the fence and finishing with one or two boards nailed to posts set in the stone wall. My objection is that the boards need constant attention to prevent their dropping off, and even with all the care that can be given they are not sufficiently permanent, and the posts being set in the wall will prevent it being built as solid as where there is nothing to interfere with the building of the stone. Of course these are not very serious objections, but they are not counterbalanced by any advantages.—It is asserted by some that sheep will not jump a fence of this kind so readily as one built entirely of stone. I answer that a sheep that will jump over either a stone or any other fence over three feet high should never be tolerated about the premises of any man who aspires to the position of a thriving farmer. I am of the opinion that it would be a much better plan to build the stone fence high enough to answer the purpose without the addition of boards, say 4½ to 5 feet high, and 4 feet wide at the bottom, and I believe if properly built of these dimensions, and the ground be dry, it is certainly to be preferred to any other kind. But on a majority of farms there is only sufficient stone to construct a small portion of the fences required and recourse must be had to wood. For the greater part there is no doubt that cedar is the best sort of timber for that purpose, although black ash is scarcely less durable. Where these are not to be had pine, white ash, white oak, or rock elm, make good fences. I think the common worm-rail fence is decidedly preferable both as regards durability and efficiency. It is objected by some that it is easily blown down or thrown over by animals, but these casualties are almost invariably the result of improper construction. To construct a thoroughly good rail fence procure cedar rails if possible, if not any of the above-named timbers will do; let the rails be of uniform length and let them be as near the same thickness as may be, let them be at least six inches thick; 12 feet is the most convenient length. Set a row of stakes for each side of the proposed fence, the width of which should be such that when the fence is laid the rails will cross each other at the corners at right angles. This is the best rule to adopt whatever be the length of the rails; a fence constructed by this rule and of 12 foot rails, will occupy a strip of about 9 feet in width; it is this we noticed with that is the main cause of rail fences blowing down. After the stakes are set and everything ready, commence at the lowest ground and lay up hill; it will be observed by examining a fence that the rails will be more level, which is of great importance as regards the strength of the fence during the process of erection. Great care should be exercised to keep the corners at one equal height by putting the largest rails on the lowest corners and also to carry the corner up perpendicularly. It would be an improvement to place each corner on a flat stone about 6 inches thick, and the space thus left between the ground and the bottom rail may be filled up with stones which will prevent the bottom rails from rotting. Never put on what are called lockers; they are only a useless incumbrance. A fence put up in this manner and 6 feet high, if laid on the ground will be about 6½ feet high or if on stones 7 feet, and I venture to say will not only keep all four-footed "domestics" on their own side, but will require less labor than is [illegible] in repair than any other sort of worm fence, and will (if made of sound cedar rails) last 100 years.

CHOP CRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient, with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 10 to 25 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by cast-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired at a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there any one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which genders in the blood, depresses the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently, vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all our people are scrofulous; their powers are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from the system we must renovate the blood by an alterative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in the most effectual remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this every where prevailing and fatal malady. It is combined from the most active remedials that have been discovered for the expurgation of this foul disorder from the blood, and the rescue of the system from its destructive consequences. Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as ERUPTIVE and SKIN DISEASES, ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, ROSE, or ERYSIPELAS, PIMPLES, PUSTULES, BLOTCHES, BLAINS and BOILS, TUMORS, TETTER and SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, RINGWORM, RESTLESSNESS, NERVELESSNESS and MENTAL DISORDERS, DROPSY, DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, and, indeed, ALL COMPLAINTS ARISING FROM VITIATED OR IMPURE BLOOD. The popular belief in "impurity of the blood" is founded in truth, for scrofula is a degeneration of the blood. The particular purpose and virtue of this Sarsaparilla is to purify and regenerate the vital fluid, without which sound health is impossible in contaminated constitutions.

AYER'S
Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC.

are so compound that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the bowels which in turn are driven with health or physical debility is established to heal his health or purity restored by a remedy at once so simple and living.

Not only do they cure the everyday complaints of every family, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases that were supposed to be beyond the reach of medicine. Indeed, so perfect is their control over the disorders of the stomach, liver, and bowels, that a few doses will restore them from the most distressing derangement to health, strength, and soundness of action. Consumption, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in the Stomach, Colic, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, Dysentery, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Ulcers, Piles, Blotches, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Syphilis, Mercurial Disease, Female Complaints, Liver Complaints, Dumbness, Fever, Ague, and Intermittent Fevers, Fever and Ague, Bilious Fever, Typhus Fever, Canker, Worms, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Consumption, and for Purifying the Blood, they have no equal. Their sugar coating renders the taste pleasant, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per box; Five boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent men of every profession in life, have voluntarily certified to the public the unrivalled excellence of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. Pamphlets containing the certificates, with full directions for the cure of all the complaints to which they are liable, and the testimony that should be read by the skeptical, may be had gratis of the agents below named.

We do not publish the names of certificates in the newspapers, as other medicines do, but prefer to furnish them to the individuals who call for our pamphlets.

Who Murdered Downie?

About the end of the eighteenth century, whenever any student of the Marischal College, Aberdeen, incurred the displeasure of the "Humane Society," he was solemnly cited before the Quadrat, "Who murdered Downie?" Reply and rejoinder generally brought on a collision between the town and gown; although the young gentlemen were accused of what was chronologically impossible.

People have a right to be angry at being stigmatized themselves, when their ancestors have probability on their side; but the "taxing off" of Downie screened when the gownsmen, so maligned, were in swaddling clothes.

But there was a time, when to be branded as an accomplice in the slaughter of Richard Downie, made the blood run to the cheek of many a youth, and sent him home to his books thoughtful and subdued.

Downie was a tailor or janitor at Marischal College. One of his duties consisted in securing the gates by a certain hour; previous to which all the students had to assemble in the common hall, where a Latin prayer was delivered by the principal.—Whether, in discharging this function, Downie was more rigid than his predecessor in office, or whether he became stricter in the performance of it at one time than another, cannot now be ascertained; but there can be no doubt that he closed the gate with austere punctuality, and that those who were not in the common hall within a minute of the prescribed time, were shut, and were afterwards reprimanded and fined by the principal and professors. The students became irritated at this strictness, and to k every petty means of annoying the sacristan; he, in his turn, applied the screw at other points of academic routine, and a fierce war soon began to rage between the collegians and the humble functionary. Downie took care that in all his proceedings he kept within the strict letter of the law; but his opponents were not so casuist, and the decisions of the rulers were uniformly against them, and in favor of Downie. Reprimands and fines having failed in producing due subordination, castigation, supension, and even the extreme measure of expulsion had to be put in force; and, in the end, these prevailed. But a secret and deadly grudge continued to rankle against Downie. Various schemes of revenge were thought of.

Downie, in common with teachers and pupils, enjoyed the leisure of the short New Year's vacation. Pleasure being to some extent the object of the many who, on that occasion, betook themselves to the country, Downie, with his family, was spending a few days with his friends at Kintore, when, at length he found himself in a large apartment hung with black, and lighted by a number of candles. Persons after persons, whom he well knew, dressed in black cloaks, the badge of mourning, and carrying white wands in their hands, entered the room. Downie, with his family, was informed that a gentleman at the door desired to speak with him. Downie, with considerable trepidation, left the room, and was conducted by the persons in black to a hearse, in which he was desired to enter. He was then driven to the Marischal College, where he was conducted to the Quadrat, and placed at the bar of the Humane Society. Here he was charged with the murder of Richard Downie, and, after a mock trial, was found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged. Downie was dead!

Bright had killed him as effectually as if the axe of a real headsman had severed his head from his body.

So much tragedy for a jest. The excited students tried to appease pain, but all was over; and the conspirators had now to bethink themselves of safety. They now in reality swore an oath among themselves, and the indignant young men, carrying their disguises with them, left the body of Downie lying in the hotel. One of their number told the landlord that their entertainment was not yet quite over, and that they did not wish the individual that was left in the room to be disturbed for three hours. This was to give them all time to make their escape.

Next morning the body was found.—Judicial inquiry was instituted, but no satisfactory result could be arrived at. The corpse of poor Downie exhibited all mark of violence internal or external. The ill-will between him and the students was known; it was also known that the students had hired apartments in the hotel for a theatrical representation—that Downie had been met for by them; but beyond this nothing was known. No noise had been heard, and no proof of murder could be adduced. Of two hundred students at the college, who could point out the guilty one? Impossible. The statutes were scanned, even the very oath that the members of the Humane Society had taken was produced in court; but nothing could be found to implicate any individual. The verdict was, "Found dead."

Thus ended the affair, and the only vestige of it now remaining is the Humane Society, which still exists, and which, in consequence of the above melancholy occurrence, has been ever since called the Downie Club.

THE END OF GREAT MEN.

It is customary to close the obituary notices of distinguished persons, by appending a few pertinent remarks on the end of the four most conspicuous places were Alexander, Hannibal, Cæsar, and Bonaparte. We had seen them all shattered limbs before but never did the fatal accident strike deeper into our bosom or more vividly place before us their histories. Alexander, after having climbed the dizzy heights of ambition, and with his sceptre wound into Europe, Asia, and Africa, and the whole world into his hand, sat down upon a conquered world and wept that there was not another world to conquer—at a city not far from the scene of debauch. Hannibal, after having [illegible] to Rome, [illegible] Cæsar, after having [illegible] Pompey, [illegible] Bonaparte, after having [illegible] Europe, [illegible] Waterloo, [illegible] St. Helena, [illegible] Napoleon, [illegible] Bright had killed him as effectually as if the axe of a real headsman had severed his head from his body.

So much tragedy for a jest. The excited students tried to appease pain, but all was over; and the conspirators had now to bethink themselves of safety. CANADIAN FLAX.

The soil of America has long been noted for the [illegible] of acres in the United States are annually set apart for that purpose, and the farmers are [illegible] among the most well [illegible] object is to take of the seed; as for the fibre, few of the growers take the least trouble so far as regards the textile material of the plant.

Will Canada a considerable breadth of land is [illegible] by this. The soil [illegible] cotton, as well as the temperature of the air, in many districts [illegible] those of the United Ireland. A gentleman who resides within a few miles of Belfast, and who recently returned [illegible] informed us that he passed several [illegible] the appearance of which [illegible] much like those in some parts of Down and Antrim. Obviously the result that the [illegible] proportion of the inhabitants were either direct Irish or the descendants of Irish immigrants. Flax culture, we have said, is carried on there by several of the farmers, but the deficiency of labor in pulling the straw for market, and the still greater drawback arising from the want of local consumption, have hitherto kept the growth down to the mere requirements of the seed trade.

In yesterday's Wing we noticed the arrival in town of some specimens of Canadian-grown flax, brought over by Mr. Blaikie. These samples were yesterday exhibited to several of our merchants, and appear to have met a favorable opinion [illegible] pronounced on their quality. On [illegible] particular enquiry into the matter, we have learned that Messrs. DEATH OF LOLA MONTEZ.

There are few readers of the newspaper literature of the day who are not familiar with the name of that eccentric, brilliant, and hapless woman known as Lola Montez. As a dancer, an actress, a politician, a courtezan, a lecturer, a dancer, she has occupied a large space of the public attention for many years, both in the country and in Europe. Her career, so strangely chaotic, so wonderfully checquered, came to its end on Tuesday last. After a lingering period of suffering, during which the knowledge of her approaching end quickened her to renewed preparations to meet it, she breathed her last tranquilly, the victim of a paralytic complaint which defied the skill of New York. Her funeral took place on Thursday, and was attended with no other demonstration than that of affectionate lamentation for one who was known to be kindly in her nature to others, and who, in the latter days of her life, succeeded in winning the esteem and regard of a wide circle of friends.

Lola Montez was born in the city of Limerick, Ireland, in the year 1818. Her parents were English on the paternal and Spanish on the maternal side. Shortly after her birth her father, who was a Captain in the army, was ordered with his regiment to India, where Lola (who had previously had the name of Maria Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert) remained for two or three years. It is thus here that the experiment for first misfortune. Her father was carried off by cholera, and she commenced that wonderful series of migrations which have made her name familiar in all parts of the world. She returned to Europe, and being a young and beautiful child, with a temperament of rare vivacity, was welcomed in her father's family. There was even some jealousy displayed as to who should possess her. A part of her time was passed in Scotland, a part in London, a part in Paris, and finally a part in Bath, where Lola completed her education, and made preparations to return to India with her mother. It was at this time (she was only 14 years old) that she discovered she was the possessor of a will and a temper of her own. Montez, with the usual foresight of her kind, had contracted a match for the budding Lola, and had settled that young lady's destinies in a business-like universal way. The chosen swain was a very rich and very yellow Nabob, who had expressed a desire to have a young wife shipped to him, and expected her to do so across with his next lot of blue pills and bitter beer.—Lola exploded with anger, and summon refused to be comforted. Conciliation being impossible, Lola determined to call in the advice of a military friend. That gentleman deliberated on the matter, and the next day eloped with her, as the wisest thing that could be done under the circumstances.—They were married and Lola became Mrs. James—the male bearer of the name being a Captain in the army.

Elopement appears to have been this gentleman's specialty for all the life of Mr. A few months after his wedding he was ordered to India, and scarcely had he reached that burning shore when his ardent nature prevailed him to desert his young wife and elope with another lady. Without any remorse, poor Lola was compelled to return to the roof of her indignant mother, who resided at Calcutta. Her treatment while there was anything but gentle. She was looked up like a prisoner, and released only when her health and spirits had taken flight. It became necessary for her restoration that she should return to Europe, and this she did.

The mention of helplessness which she had experienced, and the indignities to which it had subjected her, were probably the causes that first directed her attention to the subject of some profession in which she might attain an independence. The stage is the aspiration of all love remembered, and towards the stage the poor lone bar bent her dancers. As an actress she doubted her own powers, especially her knowledge of the language, and determined therefore to become a dancer. Her studies were prosecuted with vigor, partly in England and partly in Spain. At length she ventured in making her debut at one of the London theatres. It was a success, and Lola felt that ever indeed, she had the world before her, and no reasons to prosecute her for her misfortunes. That respected lady, indeed, never more recognized Lola, and chose to regard her as dead from the moment she stepped on the stage of Her Majesty's theatre.

It is not necessary to follow Lola's movements as an artist. They came to a temporary end in Paris, where, having made the acquaintance of an officer, Dujarrier by name, she became intoxicated with the glitter and splendors of the day. Thenceforth the devoted her whole intellect to the study of politics and the promotion of pastime. She was introduced to Dujarrier, and would have married him, but, a few days before the nuptials, that gentleman was killed in a duel, and she found herself once more overtaken by a calamity. As an artist she was not robbed by the Parliamentary after the death of her principal patron, she determined once more to make a tour. It was on the dancing occasion to which we have referred that she first visited Munich (1846) and succeeded in winning the attention of King Louis—a monarch who was willing to receive political consolation from lips as ruby. It was said he was governed by Lola's views, and republicans were aghast advice. The nobility looked on with astonishment, and then with indignation. Their resentment became deeply stirred when it was seen on that Lola was to be a lieutenant at Court, and had been created with the [illegible] Countess of Landsfeld; they were scandalized when they heard that she had been presented at the note of county thereof duties a year, and supplied with a shooting palace finished to suit. But these things were done.—When the Cabinet resigned in disgust, Lola put herself in difficult of forming a new Cabinet, in which the republican element should be represented. She selected people from all ranks and classes, attempted to introduce the code Napoleon as the law of the land, and many sweeping measures of reform which marked not only strength of character to propose but great intellectual ability to realize, gratitude to the few she had attracted as her fellow-laborers in the good cause.

She had her party and it was strong, but the party against her was more united, and her downfall became inevitable. The [illegible] Jesuits already the people against her, and her appointment to the Cabinet was the signal of some petty intrigue which in such Roman would have taken its notice of, but which she treated with [illegible] supreme contempt. Finally the shame of her life was visited on her innocent head. The [illegible] Lola, who were passing at the time, barely escaped being dragged from their carriage. The next day a royal decree closed the University, and after that came the persecution. Lola left Bavaria in the disguise of a peasant girl, and never more set foot in England.

Her career in this country is too recent and well-known to need recapitulation. From New Orleans she went to California, where it is said she was married to, and divorced from, a man named Heath. In 1855 she went to Australia, where she played with success. She afterwards visited and lectured in England, and returned to New York about two years ago. She also lectured in Toronto to a large audience.—Her business at that time and subsequently were well patronized.

The other events of this remarkable woman's career would supply material for a dozen romances. She had three husbands successively in the ecclesiastical domain which she produced here on her first arrival among us. Her life has been a turbulent one, but her end was peaceful. For some time past she devoted herself almost exclusively to the subject of religion, and with the fervor of heart which her life nothing to be doubted. She was generous and high-spirited to a fault; irritable, too, as such natures are apt to be, but forgiving and affectionate. Her natural talents were of the highest order; her accomplishments manifold, and in some respects not common. Dr. Hayes was her spiritual adviser, and the funeral services were performed by him. Lola Montez was interred in Greenwood Cemetery. She died in poverty, but was watched over and supplied with all the needful by friends who loved her and across her bier.

THE CAUSE OF LOLA MONTEZ' DEATH.

The Philadelphia Press relates the following of the late Lola Montez:—A few months ago she was attacked with paralysis, which ended in death. The "cause" of this attack remains in no mystery, and we shall mention it here. When Lola went to California in an actress, she engaged an agent. This gentleman was a married man, with two children, and seeing him unhappy in their absence, she persuaded him with sufficient money to bring them and their goods. Shortly afterwards arrived their husband died. Lola then adopted the widow and orphans—educating the latter at Mrs. Willard's seminary at Troy. An officer by the United States navy fell in love with one of these girls, and Lola, literally acting in loco parentis, approved of his suit. During her last visit to England, the marriage took place. Lola did not again encounter her protege (who accompanied her husband to a distant State, where he was detained for public duty,) until a recent period, when she met her walking down Broadway, in company with a lady of the highest ton. With her usual impulse, Lola rushed to her young friend—literally the child of her charity—as to embrace her. The young lady coldly drew back and said, "Madam, I do not know you!" "Not know me? I am Lola—Lola Montez." "Madam," she exclaimed, as she turned coldly away, "I know you not, I never saw you before, and if you persist in speaking to me I will call a policeman," and walked away. Lola went home "more to sorrow than to anger," and that same day had the first attack of paralysis, which, a few days ago, destroyed her.—Lola Montez was literally murdered by ingratitude.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

The Halifax (N. S.) Chronicle has been favored with a letter which certainly presents a most deplorable picture of the state of society in Newfoundland. The letter is dated Saint John, Jan. 2:

"This country is in a most wretched state. The population of the Island, exclusive of Bay St. George and the French shore, is about 100,000, and the ordinary sum disbursed for poor relief is £10,000. This year, however, (unless this amount will exactly suffice to prevent starvation. In St. John's beggars meet you at all corners.—The car hours their harrowing tones at the house, the office, and on the streets. Shutters is also too common during the past year; no less than 1,500 deaths have taken place here out of a population of 22,000. The great mortality is in a measure owing to the filthy condition of the town. During the Christmas and New Year's holidays the streets are infested with ruffians drunk and fraternizing, with snarls on, who go about beating everybody—all in fun, of course—but unfortunately it is not unusual even with them to avail themselves of their drunkenness, and entrust parties against whom they have any grudge. In a neighboring village last Friday night a party of them attacked a young man named Stower, and literally beat his brains out on the spot. No one can be found to frame the horrible deed on any party. Last night, in Harbor Grace a gentleman was attacked in the street and severely cudgeled with his stick;—about 200 beat him at once. In that town no respectable man thinks of leaving shortly after dark unarmed; and it is evidence for one to be always armed, so as not to be taken at a disadvantage. Altogether, at the present time, the country presents a dreadful picture of disorganization and crime, such as is not with in an country possessing the advantages of a free constitution. And what the end will be no one can tell. Even moderate men are beginning to think that people must protect themselves."

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

The Legislative Committee to whom was referred the subject for raising supplies for the present fiscal year, report a deficiency of $1,527,000, to raise which was they submitted a bill of taxation which will produce, it is estimated, $1,750,000. During the [illegible] debate on the 4th [illegible] Mr. Hamilton, of Edgefield, moved to amend by striking out the clause which provides that every one hundred dollars in all lots, lands and buildings within any city, town or village; $1 per $100 on furniture, and all professional, trade, and occupation taxes now required by law to be paid in specie, or its equivalent, be paid in specie or its equivalent. The amendment was rejected by 76 to 29. The bill was then passed. It provides that every person owning property in the city of Charleston shall pay $100 on every $100 of property, and all other persons in the State shall pay $50 on every $100 of property. Every person owning property in the city of Charleston shall pay $100 on every $100 of property, and all other persons in the State shall pay $50 on every $100 of property. Every person owning property in the city of Charleston shall pay $100 on every $100 of property, and all other persons in the State shall pay $50 on every $100 of property.

New York, Jan. 22.—The steamship Ariel, from Aspinwall, brings a million and a quarter in specie. War operations in New Granada continued unfavorable to the Government.

Gen. Scott is said to have received detailed information of a plot to seize the United States arsenal at St. Louis.

SOUTH CAROLINA ACCEPTS INDIAN AID.

The Catawba Indians have offered their services to South Carolina as a military company, and Gov. Pickens has accepted them.

The Republican Central Committee has been superseded by the election of Mr. Dubois of Boston, as President.

The recent seizures, by the police of New York, of arms destined for Savannah, has caused some excitement in [illegible], and it is thought that retaliatory measures will be adopted.

FROM THE SOUTH.

Charleston, Jan. 23.—The battery on Sullivan's Island, fired into a boat on Monday night, which appeared with muffled oars. The enemy vacated off and then fired. The boat turned and went away. Soon after the boat was heard to land at Sumpter, one man saying he was badly wounded. Some say it was an effort to run the gauntlet of the enemy and spike the guns; others, that they were deserters.

Jeff. Davis was expected to arrive here last night. He is talked of for President of the Southern Confederacy. After the adjournment of the Legislature the Sovereign Convention will be called. The Governor is in receipt of many insulting anonymous letters from the North.

THE PRESIDENT WAVERING AGAIN.

From the New York Tribune.

There is reason to fear that the President has modified his recent views, and is now decided in his policy and tone. He is unimpressible as to the extent and character of threatening indications here and at Baltimore, and counsels confidently with some of the most notorious secessionists in this city, who are Federal officeholders, and known to hold peculiar relations of intimacy with the leading conspirators who originated the secession movement. This confidence has been complimented of, but still continues, and unless [illegible] resentment. His Cabinet stand firm, and if there be any more serious signs of yielding, another explosion may be expected.

LOUISIANA CONVENTION.

Baton Rouge, Jan. 23.—The committee of fifteen reported an ordinance dissolving all connection with the United States; but all treaties, acts of Congress, &c., not incompatible with the ordinance, to remain in force; also recognizing the right of ingress and egress to the mouth of the Mississippi river by all friendly States, and declaring a willingness to enter into guarantees for the exercise of those rights.

VIRGINIA.

Richmond, January 24.—The Virginia Congressmen have sent an address to the people of Virginia, reviewing the proceedings and probable action of Congress. They say it is in vain to hope for any measure of conciliation or adjustment from Congress—that the people should accept. They are also satisfied that the Republican party designs, by civil war alone, to coerce the Southern States, under the pretext of enforcement of the laws, unless it becomes speedily apparent that the seceding States are so numerous and determined, and united, as to make such an attempt hopeless. They conclude by expressing their solemn conviction that the prompt and decided action of the people of Virginia in convention will afford the surest means of averting impending civil war and preserving peace, and the hope of reconstructing the Union, already disunited.

SURRENDER OF ANOTHER U. S. ARSENAL.

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 26.—Seven hundred State troops assembled here this morning for a demonstration on the arsenal. Governor Brown demanded the surrender of the arsenal, which was complied with at half past twelve o'clock. Negotiations were carried on yesterday and this morning. The federal troops entered the Arsenal flag. They will go home for New York.

A NORTHERN LADY IMPRISONED AT CHARLESTON.

The Geneva Courier gives the particulars of the imprisonment at Charleston, S. C., of Mrs. Catherine Rutherford, a sister of Hon. Averill, of Geneva, for expressing herself in favor of the North while attending a party!

Mrs. Rutherford was visiting a friend when the subject of discussion came up, and the one asked her opinion upon the subject, which she gave declaring that her sympathies were with the North. Early the next morning she was waited upon by an officer who asked her hotel a requisition of the city. She was tried for sedition and treason, convicted and sentenced to four months imprisonment in a Charleston jail, where she was inhumanly treated, and lived upon bread and water. Hearing an attorney of Congress, she wrote to Roger Wood of New York, asking to see his influence in her behalf that she might be released out. In the place of receiving a kind letter in reply, Mr. Wood there written to a woman under the circumstances, he wrote her an abusive one, gratifying to her persecutors. She was given to understand that if she would appeal what she had said they would set her at liberty. This she refused to do, but was finally released by the Mayor, after about four months imprisonment through the influence of many acquaintances who knew she was there, placed a steamer, started on her way North, and soon arrived in New York city, where she still remains."

☞ One of our Western villages passed an ordinance forbidding horses to walk upon the sidewalks, by no means prohibiting their travelers. The next Sunday nearly every man in town was walking around with a saddle in one hand, and spurs strapped to the other.

☞ It is stated that there is a young woman in the Detroit jail, who was [illegible]

THE CENSUS.

We have before expressed a fear that there was resistance justly chargeable upon the Ministry for the manner in which the Census are being taken over the country, and the press all over finds fault with the very loose manner in which this important business is conducted. We are prepared now to assert that it is negligence—culpable negligence—on the part of the officials at head quarters; and it is really too bad if an opportunity like the present, occurring but once in ten years, is [illegible] improved to get the valuable information to be had in no other way. If the Department which is chargeable with conducting the taking of the Census was deficient in assistance to get up and forward the requisite forms and instructions in time, it should have brought in help. Nine years have elapsed since the last returns were made up, and yet this Department is behind time when so long a notice was given for such operations. The Act appointing the taking the Census in 14 and 15 Vic., Cap. 49, and imposes upon the Board of Registration and Statistics the duty of superintending the taking thereof. The Bureau of Agriculture was by the 16th Vic., Cap. 11, associated with the Board of Registration and Statistics, and the Minister of the former is to be Chairman of the latter, and under the direction of the Board he is to have charge of the Census. The Board consists of the Minister of Agriculture, the Receiver General and the Secretary of the Province. The Governor can appoint a Secretary to the Board, or assign the duties of that office to any Clerk in any of the offices the heads of which constitute the Board. The Governor has the appointment of the Census Commissioners, one to be appointed in each County exclusive of any City or Town having 5,000 inhabitants or upwards. The Board has to frame from time to time instructions for the guidance of the persons employed in taking the Census, and forms to be used by them, and shall cause such instructions and forms to be printed and distributed as such numbers as will be requisite. In this locality there was a deficiency of forms; there was not enough forwarded. The Commissioner is to appoint Enumerators who are to be installed and examined by said Commissioner as to whether they understand perfectly the duties they are to perform, and supplied with the proper forms. Sec. 16, Con. Statutes, Cap. 24, says:—

"Each Enumerator in the Cities and incorporated Towns and in such other localities as the Board of Registration and Statistics shall think proper, shall be supplied with printed Schedules for the purpose of being left by such Enumerator [illegible] the occupant of each house, or of any story apartment or portion thereof in his District, and filled up by such occupant; and it shall be the duty of such Enumerator requiring such Schedules to leave one copy or more thereof at each house in his Enumeration District, in the course of the week ending on the Saturday next before the Second Monday in January; and upon each such Schedule there shall be a notice that such Schedule is to be filled up and signed by the occupant of such house, or by the occupant of any distinct story, apartment or portion thereof, where the house is let in different stories, apartments or portions, and occupied distinctly by different families or persons, and that the Enumerator will call for the same on the Monday then next following."

No such Schedules have been seen in the Incorporated Town of Peterborough. In no one to blame for this? Do not such culpable omissions and neglect warrant all that has been said or sneered about the taking of the Census in 1851? We shall have more to say anon on this matter.

The County Commissioner of this County is out of work at the remarks we made last week in reference to it a County, and wishes to make it appear that those remarks reflected upon the "intelligent and respectable" persons appointed by him as Enumerators for this County. If our readers will take the trouble to read what we then said they will at once perceive that we referred to the dishonest manner in which the enumeration has been conducted in Upper Canada as contrasted with the care taken in Lower Canada to secure a correct return. We said nothing, nor can anything we said be fairly construed to "reflect" upon the enumerators of the County of Peterborough. The Editor of the Review, true to the instinct of his nature, still declares and avers everything to crush a foe or hide a friend. It [illegible] that he is destitute of brains to discover that we made no allusions whatever to his subordinates, but he lacks that honorable quality of judging fairly, and he thinks our remarks offered a good opportunity to endeavor to turn the indignation of the Enumerators against us by making them believe they were insulted by us. What we complained of is that there were good grounds for believing that the Census under the present administration were not [illegible] be correct, that, in applauding for the County one of their bludgeon as Commissioner, in connection with the remarks we over the country are lulled into imagination ed. We shall now [illegible] to investigate the matter if [illegible] upon Clerks. This Mr. Thos. White, Jr., has the impudence to say, [illegible] left my place [illegible] this county has [illegible] of party duty." If their utility. We [illegible] that the law [illegible] the Census must [illegible] the Enumerators for Cities and [illegible] Towns shall be supplied with printed schedules, to be left by them at every house and tenement prior to the third Monday in January. Now this has not been done, and the Census Commissioner clearly—the payment of all work to the Ministry—justifies the omission, as far as our Town is concerned, by dishonestly stating that the law did not contemplate their being left in Towns. Let any one turn up the Statutes 14 and 15 Victoria, Cap. 49, Sec. 11, or Con. Statutes, Canada, Cap. 23, Sec. 16, and be will see for himself. And in the face of all this, the official will coolly tell us that Towns were not to have Schedules. Such impudence and impertinence are insufferable.

The fact is the Minister, with whom rests the responsibility of the taking of the census, is to blame for the very imperfect manner the Act has been observed. Not only have there not been schedules furnished for our Town, but there has not been a sufficient number of sheets furnished for the enumerators, some of them having to stop short on their work awaiting the arrival of a fresh supply from Quebec; and yet the miserable apologist of this Minister in Peterborough for this culpable neglect, justifies all these omissions and negligencies, and says [illegible] a cow at any one who dares to call in question the honesty of the Government in this important matter. Now, we will record our deliberate conviction—a conviction which has certainly been strengthened from the course taken by this advocate of ministerial delinge—that there is good reason to believe that John A. McDonald & Co. would like the census of Upper Canada to fall short of that estimated by George Brown, and hence the reluctance of the Board in not supplying the required documents and instructions in time. It would have been better for the Chairman of the Board of Registration and Statistics to have been preparing the requisite papers for the coming period for taking the census than to be going the round of the country blowing his own trumpet, and praising his colleagues.

SEPARATION OF THE COUNTIES

The Lindsay people are agitating the subject of Separation of the Counties, and we believe notice has been given that an Application will be made to Parliament next Session for the same. The Township Council of Emily gives notice that in the event of Parliament taking any steps to grant said separation, application will be made for an Act to attach the Township of Emily to the County of Peterboro'.

"The Peterboro Examiner is jealous and angry at the loss of the printing of the List of Convictions, which are now published in the three papers in this County.—

The Herald must know that assertions [illegible] by truth are worthless. We can find no jealousy at the loss of what we never possessed; the List of Convictions never was advertised in the Examiner.—On enquiry at the Post Office we find that we have a circulation in the Town of Lindsay alone exceeding that of the three papers published in Victoria County united. Now, The Lindsay Herald has only three subscribers in Peterboro, and two of these are [illegible] agents in the Sheriff and County Treasurers. Of the 13 copies of papers from the neighboring County the Gaseous Warder has 10. Is the Herald satisfied?

☞ A grand Concert was given in the Lecture Room of the new Schoolhouse on Monday night. The Choral Society, the Rifle Band, Messrs. Hendrick, Chamberlain, Kennedy, Weller, Crossley, and in fact the combined musical talent of Peterboro was concentrated in one grand effort. The audience was numerous and respectable, and the entertainment a splendid one. At the close the President of the Choral Society, W. Clarke, Esq., announced that the proceeds were to be devoted to liquidating a small sum remaining unpaid on the piano recently purchased for the use of the Society, and that it was the intention of the combined Concern which he spoke of would prove equally satisfactory to gentlemen and gentlemen.

MONDAY, Jan. 28, 1861.

The Council met. Present—His worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Stevenson, Manning, Chamberlain, Ryan, Rowland, Scudder, Dickson, Ormond, McDonald, Kennedy, and Towle.

The Mayor read a communication from Hon. G. S. Boulton, in reference to the injury done his property on George Street. It was referred to Committee on Streets and Bridges.

Applications from W. Croft and John Flavelle, for the office of Chief Constable, were referred to Constables on Applications to Office.

A communication from Mr. Weller informing the Council that in the suit of the Town vs. Mrs. G. B. Hall for the recovery of Taxes sold to be due, judgment had been given against the Corporation, was referred to Finance Committee.

The Mayor stated that a writ had been served upon him last week in a suit of Elias Burnham vs. the Town, for £50 14 11, but he believed the matter was in a way of settlement.

A petition from Michael Bess asking the Council to assist him in the support of a child which had been left with him by its mother, was referred to Committee on Charities.

A communication from the Bureau of Agriculture and Statistics, relating answers to certain questions as to savants, and prices of land, was laid on the table.

A statement of the costs in the suit of Elias Burnham vs. the Town, from the Sheriff, was submitted and tabled.

SEVERE STORM.—Snow to the depth of about 14 inches fell here on Tuesday last, impeding traffic somewhat, and stopping the regular trips of the Port Hope trains.—The mails from the Front were brought by stage for five days. PRESENTATION.

Smith, January 26, 1861.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Please insert the accompanying Address and Reply in your next issue, and oblige North Smith Division, No. 67, Sons of Temperance.

JOHN MCINTOSH, D. G. W. P.

ADDRESS.

To John Galvin, Esq.,

EXPOUNDER ENDOWED,—Owing to the satisfactory manner in which you have conducted your lengthy and thorough Temperance principles since we had the pleasure of acknowledging you as a worthy member of our Order, and especially under the peculiar circumstances of the recent Municipal election for which your are the representative, we deem it expedient to testify to you our unbridled appreciation of the constant manner in which you adhered to the dignified principles of total abstinence at the hustings.

When we reflect on the unprincipled manner which candidates generally bring into active operation for the purpose of securing to themselves Municipal honors by obtaining the support of the victims of intemperance, by depriving them of the powers of discrimination, through the influence of the intoxicating draught, and through envy to say you are most about the first that the electioneering confederate was not enamoured by your modern though unsuccessful opponent.

We consider your conscience to prove as a favorable omen of the beneficial results of the temperance movement, and from it infer that the thinking portion of the community will no longer assert themselves in favor of Municipal aspirants according to the quantity of liquor they gratuitously distribute, but in proportion to the sound and sober principles they possess. It is truly gratifying to us to listen to the undoubted assertions of those who though opposed to you in interests, that your have attained your present position through means of unprecedented merit, which reflect credit upon the institution with which you stand identified.

We repose with all trust to confidence that you will not only long remain a worthy member of our Order, but that you will use all legitimate means at your command for the final suppression of the liquor traffic, within the limits of your authority.

Hoping that you will accept this as a [illegible] of the high esteem in which you are held by the officers and members of this Division, we remain,

Your affectionate Brethren,
In the bonds of Love, Purity & Fidelity.

REPLY.

OFFICERS AND BRETHREN,—It is with no ordinary pleasure that I receipt your kind Address as a testimonial of your high approval of the manner in which I endeavored to carry out the dignified principles of temperance at the late Municipal election in this Ward.

Believe me, it is my intention to oppose the liquor traffic in all its features, and advocate the highest principles of temperance to the utmost of my ability in order that the day may soon arrive when candidates will no longer be empowered to engage in the traffic to ardent spirits, from which the corrupt deeds of the many lamentably proceed.

JOHN GALVIN.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—The members of the Free Church of Scotland held their annual gathering on the [illegible] and [illegible] which was [illegible] ably attended. After all creditors had been served, and congratulations done to the good things which were on with despatch at the meeting, R. Peters, Esq., was called upon to take the chair, and after addressed the meeting on the principles of a sound union and brotherly love among the Christian people, [illegible] to be called to Thomas Rose, Esq., whose subject, in the first place, was in praise of the [illegible] of the Church of Scotland, and [illegible] Rev. Mr. Rose, Pastor of the Church, and addressed the assembly on the good and [illegible] virtues of the Church generally. Peter Peters, Esq., and [illegible] Wm. and Wm. Peters, Esqrs., were [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] dresses were filled up with excellent singing. After the thanks of the meeting had been presented to the Chairman and others, the congregation was dismissed. All were satisfied that they had spent their time in a good cause, and their money to a good end.

I remain yours truly,

ONE PRESENT.

Norwood, Jan. 26, 1861.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Can you give us any information as to the result of the Regimental controversy between "Vox Veritatis" and Mr. Gibbons? If any memory serves me it was proposed and agreed that each write a treat of four pages—"V. V." enclosing his famous eight propositions, and Mr. G. refuting them. I in common with others desire to hear of the result.

A BAPTIST.

Peterboro, Jan. 30, 1861

ACCIDENT IN MARIPOSA.

Mr. Daniel Hodges, of Mariposa, while engaged in thrashing on Saturday last accidentally got his mitten entangled in the teeth of the cylinder, by which means part of his hand was drawn in inflicting very severe lacerations of the same. Fortunately he was enabled to withdraw it in time to save his arm. The wounds were dressed by Dr. Jones, and are now doing well.—Ontario Review.

THE ANDERSON EXTRADITION CASE.

There is some prospect that this case will settle itself. Anderson is demanded as an alleged violator of Missouri law; and if Missouri should leave the Union as is possible, would not the treaty of extradition, so far as the seceding States are concerned, be annulled? The moment the independence of the Southern confederation, having Missouri for one of its members, was acknowledged, that moment the treaty would fall to the ground; and there would be an end of the case. We fancy it would be a relief to the Courts and all concerned, if the case were thus to dispose of itself.—Leader.

BY THE MARATHON.

New York, Jan. 22.

The steamship Marathon, from Liverpool at 8 p. m. on the 5th inst., arrived at 10 a. m. Financial matters form the chief feature of her news.

The letter of the Bank of England on Monday was sudden and unexpected. Consols fell one half, railroad securities considerably, weekly, and numerous were generally declined. It is thought that the American question and the position of the Bank of France were the main inquiries.

The Bank of France, on Thursday, followed the example of the Bank of England, and advanced its rates from 3½ to 4 per cent.

There was no premium for discount in London.

The weather in England continues most severe. Many were dying from the effects of the cold.

BY THE NORTH BRITON.

Portland, Jan. 28.

The North Briton arrived at 4.30 this day with 60 passengers.

The Bohemian arrived at Moville on the 9th and Liverpool on the 10th.

The Times city article of Thursday states that the money market is generally steady, and demand for discount at the bank moderate. At the stock exchange 5 to 5¼ per cent was paid for short loans.

In the Paris discount market money was more freely offering.

La Patrie says, on the 2nd November the Russian Ambassador at Pekin ratified the convention confirming the privileges of Russia and extending commercial advantages.

The North Briton left Liverpool at 10.20 on the morning of the 10th and Londonderry on the 11th.

The Bohemian reached Londonderry and the Etna Queenstown on the morning of the 9th.

BRITAIN.

Lord Palmerston in a speech at Southampton, referred to the American situation, and said there was too much reason to fear that the Union which conduced to so much prosperity, was in danger of disruption. He expressed a fervent hope, whether the Union is maintained or dissolved, that amicable relations may be established, and that England may be spared the afflicting spectacle of a hostile conflict between brothers.

Quite a panic prevailed in some parts of Liverpool on the 9th. Rumors were afloat that the mob had entered the bakers' shops and helped themselves, owing to the advance in prices, want of employment and severe weather, and that a regular riot had broken out. Large numbers of shops were forthwith closed and feelings of alarm prevailed. All, however, proved groundless and confidence was quickly restored.

There was no break in the severity of the weather and navigation was getting more and more difficult. Many parts of the Thames were choked with floating ice, and dock entrances were kept open by steam tugs.

DRAWING EXECUTED,

W. & T. LEEMING'S WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Montreal, Jan. 24.

PRODUCE.—Since our last, business has been very inactive; and there are few actual sales on which to base quotations. The general tenor of the English Markets is favorable to shipping; but in the article of Ashes there is a great dullness. In Wheat and other Grains there was a temporary depression in Liverpool Market; but in London the highest quotations were sustained, and business active. Transaction in Flour at a slight decline on former rates. Butter had slightly declined, but choice grades were in good demand. Money is scarcer, and the Bank of England has advanced its rate of discount. If this continue business will be restricted. Ashes, we are inclined to think, must soon advance. The stock in hands of buyers, for manufacturing purposes will soon want replenishing; and if cheap freight offers to shippers, a brisk demand will ensue. Wheat and Flour are not likely to suffer anything more than a casual decline; as the severe weather in England and the likelihood of another great war on the continent; will tend to retard, if not very much diminish, the harvest of 1861. In better there is likely to be a paying trade, at all events until the opening of navigation here.

FLOUR.—Arrivals limited and few transactions. No 1, Superfine; $5 44 to $5 55, and for May delivery $6 to $6 05.—Other grades nominal; no change from our last report.

WHEAT.—Good U. C. Spring, $1 15 to $1 17. Demand good for present delivery.

PROPOSED REPARTITIONS OF AMERICAN TERRITORY.

While we are patiently laying down a basis of facts on which to raise a discussion of the question of the Federal Union of the British American Provinces, our more enterprising neighbors of the United States are contriving plans to save us the trouble of disposing of our destiny. We reprint two articles from the New York Herald, in which the question of the repartition of America is disposed of in a manner that could not fail to give satisfaction to the most enterprising retriever of the map of this continent. Canada, it is assumed, is ready to "throw off the yoke of England, and set up for herself;" and it is asserted that she would be willing to join the Northern States as soon as their connection with their slave-holding confederates ceases. Like all great schemes, that proposed by our New York contemporary is very simple. The Southern Confederacy is to annex Mexico and Cuba, and we know not what beside, and build "a central American empire which "shall make the Gulf of Mexico a lake, and "include in its limits every acre of land, "every estuary, port and river between the "Ontario and the Potomac." The other great proposed Confederacy, we are told, is to be formed out of the Free States of the American Union and the whole of British America from Labrador to the Polar Sea. Mr. Seward is invited to propose a scheme for letting the Southern States go free, as a preparatory measure to the proposed repartition of the continent.

At this moment, Canada has no idea of "throwing off the yoke of England, and "setting up for herself;" and it is not likely that she will consent to have her destiny subjected to the convenience of the members of the American republic. It is possible, no doubt, that the destruction of the Union may eventually lead to some new territorial arrangements; but what these will be, the wisest men cannot pretend to predict. The correct notion in Canada is, that if there is to be any union between the Northern States and British America, or between any portion of the Northern States and British America, the annexation will be in the other direction. The Republic is just now in a condition of dilapidation that compels sober minded persons to look around for some harbor of refuge from the ruin with which they are threatened. Should the Northern States ever be allowed to join Canada, we do not undertake to say that their offer would be rejected; but until such a proposal is authoritatively made, there will be very little use in discussing the terms of consideration. All that we must protest to promise at present is, that what the offer is made there is every likelihood that it will receive the most candid consideration.—Toronto Leader.

CHALLENGE!

To all whom it may Concern.—It is a noted fact that all Worm Medicines fade into insignificance compared with Fellowship's Dead Shot Worm Confection. It far surpasses the expectations of every one. It gives new life and vigor to the system, and gives glossy, silken hair. It not only destroys every species of worms, but it cleanses the whole system from all impurities. The immense sale of this Worm Candy is a standard proof of its efficacy.

Two ounces of Worm Medicine is Chemist yet, it has been ascertained, on reliable information, that the sale of the Dead Shot Worm Confection is considerably more than all the others combined. It is sold by every dealer in medicine for 15 cents; four packages for half-a-dollar.—See advt. somewhere in another column.

A History of the Events to be found in 1860 and 1861, by Professor Gilmore of Harvard.

A large assortment of School Books and

"THE LEADER,"

THE PATRIOT NEWS OF THE WEEK

THE terms with which The Leader has been received by the profession, is judged by the fact that since the commencement in July, 1858, it has steadily increased in circulation until, in its various Editions, it has reached upwards of three thousand copies every other day per mail in Canada. Every exertion is being used to make it more and more indispensable for every family in the Province.

THE DAILY LEADER

is published every morning, in time for the early mail, at $5 per annum, in advance. It is a large sheet, and contains the earliest and most reliable intelligence, of any one in Canada from every part of the world.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY LEADER

is published on Tuesdays and Fridays, at $3 per year, in advance. It contains all the leading matter of the Daily Leader; and for parties who do not receive mail enough to a Post Office to call every day, this paper will supply them with all the intelligence they could receive from a Daily.

THE WEEKLY LEADER

is published every Friday, and The PATRIOT and the NEWS OF THE WEEK are published every Wednesday, at the rate of $2 in advance. These papers are printed on a large sheet, and contain the most important part of the reading matter of the Daily Leader. Market reports are particularly attended to in them.—These are the cheapest papers in the Provinces.

One dollar a year is asked in each Edition when not paid in advance.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The large circulation of The Leader makes it the very best medium of publishing notices of any kind.

Rates—For Daily—Four cents a line, for first insertion, and one penny each subsequent insertion—For Weeklies—Six cents a line for each insertion.

"MONTREAL WITNESS"

FOR 1861.

THE "MONTREAL WITNESS" is non-sectarian in religion, though very decidedly Evangelical in its tone and influence. It is free from party politics, though strongly in favour of truth, justice and freedom. It quotes no more the superficial news of the day, and is a reliable commercial record. It also devotes much space to literature suitable for family reading, and altogether is designed to be equally interesting to young and old of both sexes. The Minister, the Merchant, the Farmer, and the family, will, it is hoped, find it alike interesting. Of this paper three editions are published as follows:—

The Daily Witness, containing 4 pages, is published every afternoon, and sent by the evening mail, at $3 per annum. The city is supplied by news-venders.

The Montreal Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Wednesday and Saturday mornings, and sent by the early morning mail, at $2 per annum. When sent by carriers in the city, the price is $3.

The Weekly Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Thursday morning, and sent by mail at $1.50, per annum.

To all the above editions the price is uniform—payable in advance—and the paper stops when the subscription expires, unless renewed.

The postage is payable by the subscriber, quarterly in advance, at his own residence, at the rate of half-a-cent each number.

For all subscribers out of Canada, half-a-cent a number is to be remitted with and in addition to, the subscription price.

BY GEORGE ROOD, OF CHAMPLAIN, U. W.

Nothing can be more erroneous than the common practice of putting small rails at the bottom to prevent pigs from getting through. I have found by experience that a fence with small rails is always harder to get through than one with large rails. It may be objected that a fence of this description would be expensive, and I admit that it is, but timber is every year getting scarcer and dearer. Twenty years ago good cedar rails could be bought in Otonabee for $6 per 100, now they cost from two to three dollars, and in 20 years more the price will probably be three times as much, so that it is certainly better policy to put up a fence at an expense of $1 per rod that will last 100 years than to put up one at 50 cents per rod that will only last 20 years, when it will have to be renewed at a cost of probably two or three dollars per rod; but circumstances may occur in which it is advisable to construct board fences.—For example, there may be no abundance of timber suitable for boards, and which cannot be converted into rails, such as hemlock, spruce, tamarac, or elm and beech-wood, which latter although it may be easily split into rails is almost worthless, while if sawn into boards will last equal to pine. When a board fence is to be erected and pressure on the posts if convenient, if not block sub in the next best. If the ground is not naturally dry it must be drained to make it such, otherwise no amount of care will prevent the posts from heaving, as it is called. The best method of draining for fencing purposes is to dig a drain in the line of the fence. To set the posts in, the drain should be at least four feet deep, and filled with stones about one foot, then set in the posts about six feet apart, and fill up as in an ordinary drain, being careful to have the posts in a perfectly straight line. The ground may then be thrown up on each side so as to form a ridge 12 inches high; let the bottom board be 12 inches wide, then a space of 4 inches, then 6 boards 6 inches wide, each spaces of 6 inches between each. It would be a great improvement to saw off the posts level with the boards, and finish with a board 6 inches wide. rolled flat on top. A fence of this kind, of pine, hemlock, spruce or tamarac, will last with but slight repairs about 30 years.

LORD BROUGHAM ON SLAVERY.

The Abolitionists of Boston, it seems, invited Lord Brougham to be present at their Convention in December last. Lord Brougham answered the invitation as follows:—

Brougham, Tuesday, Nov. 20.

SIR,—I feel honored by the invitation to attend the Boston Convention, and to give my opinion upon the question, "How can American slavery be abolished?" I consider the application is made to me as connecting me to represent the anti-slavery body in this country; and I believe that I speak their sentiment as well as my own in expressing the widest difference of opinion with few upon the merits of those who promoted the Harper's Ferry expedition, and upon the fate of those who suffered for their conduct in it. No one will doubt my earnest desire to see slavery abolished; but that desire can only be gratified by lawful means—a strict regard to the rights of property or what the law declares to be property, and a constant repugnance to the shedding of blood. No man can be considered a martyr unless he not only suffers, but in witness to the truth; and he does not bear that testimony who seeks a lawful object by illegal means. Any other course takes for the abolition of slavery can only delay the consummation we so devoutly wish, besides exposing the community to the hazard of an insurrection perhaps less hurtful to the master than to the slave.—When the British emancipation Bill was finally carried it was accomplished by steps, and five years elapsed between the commencement of the measure in 1833 and its completion in 1838.

The declaration of the law which pronounced a slave free as soon as he touched British ground (erroneously omitted to the English courts and Lord Mansfield, but made by the judges in Scotland) may seem to be inconsistent with the principle now laid down. But I am bound to express my doubts if such a decision would have been given had Jamaica touched upon the coasts of this country. It is my opinion that the judges did not intend to declare that all property in slaves should instantly cease, and yet such would have been the inevitable effect of their judgment in the case supposed, which somewhat resembles that of America.

In the celebration of your approaching Presidential election, all friends of America, and its prominent duties, of the final extinction of slavery by peaceful means, and of the utter immediate extinction of the execrable slave-trade—all friends of the human race must heartily rejoice. They will, let us hope, find in him a powerful, as his country may expect to find an able, a consistent and honest ruler. I have the honor to be your faithful servant,

BROUGHAM.

AND UPWARDS SAVED to the Farmers, by using Mowry's

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other machine for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 18 to 25 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by cast-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired at a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

PRICE $60.

All orders directed to "M. Mowry, Ashburnham, Peterborough," will be promptly attended to.

Peterboro', Dec. 12, 1860 46

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth, and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the fatal curse which, "rests upon the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which genders in the blood, deprecates the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently, they perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all your people are scrofulous; their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To eradicate it from the system we must introduce the blood by an effective medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in the most efficient remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this every where prevailing and fatal malady. It is separated from the most active principle that have been discovered for the suppression of this foul disorder from the blood, and the ruin of the system from its destructive consequences. Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as Erysipelas and Skin Diseases, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose, or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors and Ulcers, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ring-worm, Ringbone, Spavin, and Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Debility, and indeed, ALL COMPLAINTS arising from vitiated or impure blood. The popular opinion in favor of this medicine is founded on its power to cure the disorders for which it is recommended, and the unparalleled virtues of this Sarsaparilla are attested by the cures it has effected.

Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so compounds that disease within the range of their action can scarcely withstand or resist their powers. Their penetrating properties purify the blood and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitality. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find how health and strength succeed by a remedy at once so pleasant and powerful.

Sugar-coated as they are, there is no one who will not take them rather than the every-day complaints of every body. A few doses will expel disease from the system. The agent they operate upon is diseased to health, and when this is accomplished, they cease to act. Nature, when relieved from the burden of disease, does the rest. Cures, more numerous, more wonderful, more unquestionable, and more complete, have been effected by these Pills than by any other medicine known to mankind. Containing neither Mercury, Minerals, nor dangerous drugs, they may be taken with perfect safety by any one. Children will take them freely, and no one who knows their virtues will hesitate to give them to his family when they require a cathartic. As a purifier of the blood, and a remedy for the following complaints, they have no equal:

Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Headache, Piles, Flatulency, Dysentery, Foul Stomach, Biliousness, Jaundice, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Gravel, Diseases of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Nervous Disorders, Female Complaints, Scrofula in its various forms, Erysipelas, Scurvy, Ringworm, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Boils, Carbuncles, Tumors, Cancers, Syphilis, Mercurial Disease, Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Typhus Fever, Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Yellow Fever, Spotted Fever, Black Fever, Measles, Mumps, Whooping Cough, Croup, Influenza, Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Back, Chest, Limbs, Joints or Body, Sprains, Bruises, Soreness and Stiffness, Numbness, Coldness, Frost-bites, Chilblains, Corns, Felons, Whitlows, Chapped Hands, Cracked Lips, Sore Nipples, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scalds, Burns, Sores, Ulcers, Cancers, Tumors, Humors, Tetter, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurvy, Mercurial Diseases, Blood Diseases, Scrofula, Consumption, Debility, Decay, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Female Irregularities, Fevers of all kinds, Fits, Gout, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Indigestion, &c., &c.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

As little is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the forms of the disease, that almost every section of country abounds in pulmonary complaints, none have ever been cured by so many remedies, or such general confidence reposed in their virtues, as the Cherry Pectoral. While it counteracts the tendency to consumption, it allays the irritation, and heals the diseased tissues with which the disease has surrounded the lungs. Hence, when taken in the early stages of the complaint, it never fails to cure the most alarming affections of the throat, bronchia, and lungs. Even in cases which have been pronounced incurable, and where the patient has been given over to die, this remedy has produced the most astonishing results, and completely restored the sufferer to health and vigor. Indeed, so well known are its effects, and so wide is the field of its usefulness, that we deem it unnecessary to do more than assure the people that its quality is kept constantly equal to the best it ever had, and that it may be relied on to do all that it has ever done.

The great transparent throne
As the noble sons of Adam—

The fingers dark will tune the harp
Of go den strings above,
The scarred and wearied feet will walk
The beauteous halls of love

The same laws that try him in Heaven
Will try the white man too—
Think of it ye freedom haters,
For it is just and true.

The poor abused slave and you
Will stand together there;
He'll justice get as well as you,
No judging there unfair.

Jesus hath shed his blood for him,
He's made his rest secure,
If you refuse a home on earth
His home in Heaven is sure.

If you deprive of freedom here
You have no power in Heaven,
Soon as the flood of death is crossed
All earthly bonds are riven.

ON THE Methods & Means of Teaching.
DELIVERED BY REV. J. S. DOUGLAS, LOCAL SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS,
ON TUESDAY, JANUARY 22ND, 1861.

It is difficult to give even a mere tracery of a subject so extensive that it requires the most able men a lifetime to master it only partially, and which has been accumulating for generations. It is not necessary that I should attempt it here, but merely give a few hints to aid teachers in their arduous task, and to impress upon parents and others interested in the subject, whether for themselves or others, the vast extent of it and the importance of all concerned lending their united exertions to its accomplishment.

Let me, as a basis, say a word on the subject of Education. The child consists of a body, and a soul, besides the mind, all of which require attention. Here, then, arises two kinds of education—a short sighted, and a far-seeing. The short sighted to be rightly worked requires attention to all the parts of the child's nature, but regards them only as subservient to the business of the present life. The far seeing, which I trust is chiefly regarded here, provides for the future as well as the present. The difference lies chiefly in the relative prominence which is given to the one or the other. Health and religion are necessary to both systems.

The connection of the mind with the body is well known. How much the mental energy is affected by the frame of mind and other bodily circumstances, is in the experience of every one. How much more then in children, who like the barometer are more sensible of these variations —soon up, soon down. Between a sulky or a desponding, and a lively cheerful disposition, what a contrast in mental power, which accounts for the story of the little girl who having made no progress under her former teachers, all of a sudden began to improve under a new one, and being asked how it was, naively replied, she supposed it was "because she was encouraged."

"Temperance, Exercise and Cheerfulness"—the recipe given by an old philosopher for the preservation of health, has not as yet been much improved upon. To keep the school in a cleanly, airy, pleasant state, and the child otherwise in good health and humour, are a most valuable preparative for making the child's progress in learning rapid and steady.

Religion also tends much to clear the understanding, and prevent those irregularities which so much disturb the school and impede the progress. In R. Gordon's Hospital, Aberdeen, there used to be a public punishment that could not be thought of here, once a month at least. On one occasion there was an interval of twenty-one months without a single public punishment, and I know no adequate cause that can be assigned but the greater respect at that time shown by the teachers to God, and their registers. The respect and observance thus willingly rendered by children being imitated by the pupils. And I am persuaded that a teacher, whose religion is shown not in words but in conduct, will ever find that religion is a most powerful instrument in governing and instructing the young. But it must be present and heartfelt, for children see through and despise hypocrisy, as quickly as grown-up people.

Health and Religion, so essential to a sound education are pre-supposed in School of which class, am sure, I may understand, to speak, the mind of the education or family education, I need not say to those my remarks (with regard to regards and punishments) are addressed.

Remarks in my opinion should be given as suggestions than as points bearing out a fixed opposition. In many cases according to circumstances, I have made a distinction of the [illegible] dental. But they are unequal under all circumstances, and while I say nothing against the use of prizes, I think honours and such other rewards as reach equally to all, are preferable.

Punishments are found necessary for the restraint of adults, and are sanctioned by God. The cry of "No Corporal Punishment" once so prevalent, has now almost died away in the Old Country. I have [illegible] tion of the teacher, and summary, rather than protracted, and sharp, rather than lingering, and always accompanied by those compassionate remonstrances which a kind teacher knows how to press home, showing it to be an act of self sacrifice, and not of vindictive feeling. Keeping in should only be for tasks neglected, and which should have been committed by staying in the house a certain time, and taken rather as neglects through temptation than as wilful transgression, and the teacher should show this by staying with him to help him on.—Tasks as punishments should be given only to make up the lee-way as sailors say, for absence through truancy.

Confinement and hunger are bad punishments, as they injure the health, and impositions, such as writing the 119th Psalm, or such like, are injurous to the moral nature of the child. Punishment, direct and immediate, and inflicted by the same hand that ordinarily moves in kindness is the most effective.

Permit me to say one word further on the management of the school. Regularity should be enforced as far as possible and especially by commencing at the very hour appointed. In my most successful years it was my practice to shut the door immediately at the hour, and when prayer was ended to open it again, and so to arrange the penalty that it speedily effected a cure. No one can tell who has not tried how much of the efficiency of the school depends upon being up to time in the morning. Another matter of the same tendency is to manage the work so that the scholars shall never find leisure to contrive mischief or to become restless. This was a lesson I received from one of the most efficient teachers, though now in his grave. Mr. Cannichael of the High School, Edinburgh, formerly of St. Andrew's, in whose house I taught some time while I was student.—"Begin the work at once, and keep them busy," said he. I did so, and although the lads were inclined to trifle, I had no trouble with them. The Prince of Wales showed undoubtedly, that he had been properly instructed in this point, in visiting through Canada. Coming in a hurry, proceeding at once to the platform, hearing the addresses and away. To have lingered would have exhausted the enthusiasm, and left room for a relaxation of propriety, so that the enthusiasm would have been on the wane. By pursuing the course he did he left the excitement of loyalty at its full flow and gave the people leisure after his departure prudently to settle down. So should the teacher arrange his work in school, so to keep up the attention without flagging, during the appointed hours, so as to keep his pupils from mischief, by constant, though varied employment.

The arrangement of the class may be either single file, which gives easiest access to the individual, or in parallel rows, which brings the scholars closer together, and thus enables the teacher to proceed more quickly with the work. For as sound is not like light, instantaneous, but takes some time to go and return, so that where the distance is great, the speaking is slower, increased distance renders it necessary to proceed more slowly. But in the old country time is so precious that it is considered a great advantage to keep the interchange of thought between the teacher and his pupils flying so close that the one sound is almost on the way while the other is being sent out. They do not wait to take leisurely aim, but as it were fire in platoons. This play again (the lecture room plan) of spreading the pupils over the floor has the advantage of individualizing the scholars more than any other, and gives an opportunity for self application. Each way has its advantages, and must be left very much to the discretion of the teacher. The precedence of moving about in regular order, though not to be objected to by any competent like myself, who were not accustomed to it in youth, is found by all disciplined in the army, and must be equally so in any community body. The great thing is to preserve order, to combine the attention, and to keep the whole machine of the class steadily [illegible] which can only be done by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

EXPLANATORY SCENE UPON THE SEE SENTENCE.

It would be almost impossible to give a correct description of the style presented in Hyde Park on Tuesday night, when the thermometer was at 20° above zero, and a considerable quantity of snow was on the ground. From the Marble Arch to Hyde Park Corner, and from Grosvenor Gate to Albert Gate, the pavement was literally crowded with persons of all ages and conditions, from the highest to the lowest, and the road was blocked up with carriages of every description, from the splendid equipage of the nobleman to the humble cab of the costermonger. Many of the trees were covered with boys, who had climbed up for the purpose of getting a better view of the proceedings, and the parapet of the bridge over the Serpentine was lined with spectators. The ice on the Serpentine was not considered sufficiently safe to allow of skating, and the only persons who ventured upon it were a few of the police, who were stationed at intervals to prevent accidents. The crowd was not a disorderly one, and the utmost good humour prevailed. Many of the persons had provided themselves with fireworks, and the display commenced shortly after seven o'clock. The first piece was a large star, which ascended to a great height, and then burst into a number of smaller stars, which remained visible for some time. Then followed a succession of rockets, Roman candles, and other pyrotechnic devices, which were received with loud cheers by the spectators. The display lasted about an hour, and was brought to a conclusion by the discharge of a large number of rockets, which ascended to a great height, and then burst into a shower of stars, which remained visible for some time. The whole of the arrangements were under the direction of Mr. Phillips, the pyrotechnist of the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall, and were carried out with great success.—Times, Feb. 5.

THE CENSUS AGAIN.

We are informed that a man named Cholerton, a blacksmith, residing in the 10th Concession of Dumfries, committed suicide on Monday morning last. It appears he was addicted to excessive liquor habits, and on Sunday, it is said, some angry words passed between him and his wife, and Monday morning he was found suspended to a beam in a stable near his house, lifeless. Mr. Walker, one of the Coroners for the county of Brant, was notified of the circumstance, in which capacity he acted, and on account of the distance, he did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest, but gave a certificate of the deceased having come to his death by hanging himself.—Brantford Courier, Feb. 1.

THE BEAR COUNTRY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—As there has been a good deal said in the papers lately about the new settlement back of Bobcaygeon, I beg leave through your paper to express my opinion of it. I went through last September with the intention of taking up land provided I was pleased with the country. When I started from Bobcaygeon the land looked very poor, but every one I met told me to go back further and I would see good land. I went on to Burnt River still asking for the good land; there I was told to go back of Gull River and I would find it. So I went on to Gull River but the land did not get any better. I still kept asking for the good land and still the answer was "back"!—I went on some seven or eight miles further still asking for the good land. "Back, back," was the only reply. I confess I began to get discouraged. When I started from Bobcaygeon I was told to go back, and now that I had travelled 40 miles and "back" was still the word, I began to wonder where "back" was; in short I began to think I was too far back to find good land, laid to I turned my back on it and began to travel back towards home, and now I will tell you in a few words what I think of the country.

The whole of the country the distance I went is one solid mass of rocks. There is none of it fit for cultivation. I did not see five acres in any one place that could be ploughed. And it did not get any better as far as I went. Anson is just as bad as Lutterworth and Minden is no better. I would not take the best thousand acres that I saw in the back country and be compelled to live on it, as a present. The settlers were very kind and hospitable but very poor, and likely to get poorer, as it is impossible for any man to live on such land.

This is my candid opinion of the country, Mr. Editor, and I hope no one will find fault with me for expressing it; others may think and say what they like.

Yours, &c.,
JOHN SHEARER.

THAT TRACT.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Shortly after sending you my last note, I became possessed of a tract headed "Mr. Gilmour's views on Christian Baptism, and the Rev. J. S. Douglas' Reply," which is doubtless the "tract of 4 pages referred to. It appears that the latter gentleman is the alter of the famous "Vox Veritatis," who showed considerable valour in opposing a host of opponents, single-handed, and chided those who seemed disposed to run rather than fight, but now appears as if beaten, having shifted his ground.

It is well known that the strife commenced with the "Vox Veritatis," alias Rev. Mr. Douglas, whose dislike to Baptist views is more conspicuous in all his writings, than his love for truth—that he gave the first challenge—put forth eight propositions, which he signified he was prepared to defend, and dared any one to refute them.—When the challenge was accepted by Mr. Gilmour, the choice of weapons was given to Mr. Douglas, who chooses the "tract of 4 pages." Now that the tract has made its appearance every one that takes an interest in the fight must be struck at the attitude of the combatants. Mr. G. appears as the challenger, and Mr. D. as the accepter. Why was this change made? I think it due to the public to let us know. It will have a damaging effect upon the vaunted champion for the "truth" unless some satisfactory reason be assigned for the altered position the combatants now appear in.

But I proceed to notice a few features of the "tract." There are two columns on each page. The first is by Mr. Gilmour, on the subjects and mode of Christian Baptism. The next column is by Mr. Douglas, intended as a reply thereto, thus giving each the half of 8 pages. If you read Mr. G.'s side through to the end, you will find he makes his views intelligible if not satisfactory. If you read Mr. D.'s side, much will appear unintelligible and altogether unsatisfactory. Such a confusion of ideas jumbled together—so many assertions without any legitimate proof—such a strange commixture of truth and error—of common and downright nonsense—of knowledge and ignorance—such a bundle of contradictions—false conclusions—illogical reasonings,—strange quotations from scripture—arrogant assumptions—are not often met with in so small a compass. I have heard of a celebrated divine being compared to a "dungeon of light," and I was reminded of this when reading the off-side of this tract. The writer has an active mind, well stored with love, and a good memory, but he lacks method and order. His ideas are all bliss shifter, and he has a difficulty in making his views intelligible. The legitimate conclusion of some of his statements is that he is a firm believer of baptismal regeneration, and of the salvation of all who are baptised, unless they apostatise.

As the tract is now before the public, it is common property, and open to criticism, I intended reviewing it more particularly, but on second thoughts I deem it more prudent to wait a while till it is read, when I shall go more fully into the opinions advanced therein—qualified, however, with an "if," i. e. if you will give me space in your columns for that purpose. Let every one get the tract and read it. Mr Douglas has dogs more to let to spread the views of the Baptists than Mr. Gilmour has. If infant baptism has no better defenders, it must fall before light and reason. I trust Mr. D. has sent a copy to his friends in the old country. Two years is no too long to wait for Messrs. Whitely, price only 1d.

Yours, very truly,
A BAPTIST.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY AND SNOW STORMS.

Severe frosts and continued snow storms for the last month have had a great discouraging effect upon the traffic of the Grand Trunk Railway. We took long descriptive notices of the first portion of the road was opened (as readers perhaps will remember) and we have since from time to time been brought to a standstill with the upset of a snow storm. Last week was opened an extensive accumulation of freight at every station between Toronto and the East Peach. We are informed that a fair day's work, the company had employed two thousand men; consisting of Officials, Police, Navvies, Laborers, Peasants and Passengers. At present the Company have 1,200 Officials. At this early part of the week the engines were under and Freight Trains began to move again, but they were some more interrupted by the storm of yesterday. The East there has been for more than a month scarcely time to get the snow of one storm cleared away ere another came down. Persons engaged in the grain trade are very much cramped by these disasters. It has been the custom of shippers at the West to draw against the parcels sent at short dates, say seven or ten days—and under ordinary favorable circumstances the grain or produce could be placed in market within the time but now that is impossible and those who have been forced to honor their short drafts find themselves woefully out of pocket, and drawn close at their bankers.—Montreal Gazette.

THE ARABIA'S MAILS.

The Arabia has on freight £252,137—a million and a quarter of dollars in specie.

Some of the Paris journals state that a deputation from South Carolina has arrived in Paris and obtained an audience of M. Thouvenel, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The Paris correspondent of the London Morning Post says:

Some journals, I observe, both American and European, speak of France as likely, if called upon, to support South Carolina. A friendship and alliance, it is maintained might be formed between the South and France, and the Emperor's name is used as favoring the notion. Permit me to correct this error. On New Year's day, when the Emperor received the corps diplomatique, his Majesty held a long conversation with the representative of America. The Emperor expressed his regret that the slave question should threaten the Union with division, and hoped the people of the United States would see the necessity of maintaining that bond which had bestowed prosperity on that country and made America so important a nation in the eyes of the world. These words were of course sent home to the government of Washington. I think I may add that the ruler of France has only one idea about America, and that is to extend the commercial relations between that industrious people and France.

The circular of Messrs. Arlès Dufour & Co., of Lyons, mentions that although the United States take annually about 64,000,000 worth of silk goods from Europe, the fall in prices since the outbreak of the disunion crisis has not been more than between two and three per cent on the superior descriptions, owing to the limited supply in the market. In the common descriptions there has been a reduction of between ten and twelve per cent.

Mr. Lindsay, who was lately in the United States has had an interview with Louis Napoleon; and the talk is, that he has been more successful in France in promoting free trade in shipping than he was in America; that sometimes it is convenient to have only one to a nation to combine, particularly when that one is the State.

The gay season in Rome had fairly set in, and, as it will be short (Ash Wednesday falling on the 13th of February), there promises a disposition to make most of it. It was inaugurated by brilliant balls, given by Miss Slocum, in the saloons of the United States Legation, between the ends, however, of the Queen of Rome, silver as well as gold, were most generously represented.

A letter from Berlin states that the relations which prevailed during the life-time of the late King cannot there supposed to exist between the present Sovereign and the persons who were present.—More than 200 of the soldiers who lined the streets were obliged to go into hospital, and some of them have since died. A number of horses have also perished from the same cause.

Experiments are making in France with a new mortar cannon, of which, it is said, the effect will be much greater than anything yet accomplished by the Armstrong or Wentworth gun. This instrument of destruction can serve either as a cannon or a mortar. In the first case the mortar forms the breech of the gun by means of a double hinge, which may be attached or removed with the greatest facility.

The London Times of 18th ult says:—We regret to learn from undoubted authority that the report recently circulated in several journals of the gradual improvement in Miss Nightingale's health is entirely without foundation. Her malady, far from being alleviated, increases upon her, and her state, which confines her entirely to her apartment, is one of great exhaustion and severe suffering.

In addition to the diamond star from the Thousand which Gen. Türr is charged to present to Garibaldi, he is also to offer to to Teresita, the ex-Dictator's daughter, a magnificent necklace, a present from Victor Emmanuel.

Signora Carlotta Pocchini died in Rome shortly after her confinement. This lady, who must be well known to theatrical people, was married about a year ago to Signor Pasqual Borri, the well known maitre du ballet.

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS IN FRANCE.

The following warlike announcement is from Bailier's lithographic sheet:

"Great activity prevails at this moment in our arsenals. Although there is no indication of war breaking out, preparations are being made for every contingency. All soldiers not considered capable of enduring a campaign are about to be sent to the depots of their regiments, and their places are to be filled with efficient men who have already served for six or seven months.—The army will be ready to commence a campaign in the month of March. I repeat that these are merely measures of precaution, which it is to be hoped, future events will render unnecessary. As to the notice published by the Minister of War, which orders field officers to supply themselves with horses by the 1st of February next, it is a mere standing order which is published annually at this period."

It has been usual to call out half the number of recruits annually voted, the remaining half being only liable to serve in case of extraordinary need; but the Minister de l'Armee publishes a circular from the Minister for War, giving directions that by the express command of the Emperor every man of the contingent voted is to be called to arms at once, and assigned to a particular regiment. The recruits will then be divided into two portions, the first of which will serve regularly as before, while the second will be drilled during three months of the first year, two months of the second year, and one month of the third year, being all the time equipped like the regular army, and receiving the same pay.

WARLIKE SPEECH OF THE KING OF PRUSSIA.

The King of Prussia, on the 16th, sent for all the generals present at Berlin, and, according to the Neue Gazette of Prussia, thus spoke to them:—"I have been called to the throne at an epoch full of dangers, and with the prospect of combats, in which I shall have need, gentlemen, of all your devotedness. If I and the princes who, like me, desire the maintenance of peace, do not succeed in turning aside the storm which is rising, we have need of all our forces to resist it and to defend ourselves. Let us not indulge in any illusions. If I do not succeed in turning aside the conflict, we shall be engaged in a combat in which we must vanquish, if we are not willing to to perish." Addressing the Minister of War, the King said:—"You must courageously labor to make the army what it ought to be for the future protection of Prussia."

The Paris correspondent of the Herald says the above speech has created a great sensation in that capital, and adds that the King of Prussia is fully aware that Denmark is only his nominal enemy; that the real question is, whether France is to have the Rhine.

THE VENETIAN QUESTION.

The Paris correspondent of the Morning Chronicle has reason to believe that M. Fould, who has nominally gone to Nice for the benefit of his health, has conveyed the Emperor's instructions to Victor Emmanuel and Count Cavour, and is, moreover, the bearer of his Majesty's promise, that a French army will occupy Lombardy on the firing of the first cannon shot.

The Times' Paris correspondent on this subject says:—It is rumored that an article of a semi-official character will appear declaring in substance that should Piedmont commit "an act of folly or madness" by attacking Venetia she will do so at her own risk and peril. Cavour will try to renounce all hostile designs on the Austrian possessions and reduce Garibaldi to acquiescence.

TERRIBLE INUNDATIONS IN HOLLAND.

A communication appears in the Daily News, that several provinces of Holland are threatened with inundations, arising from the giving way of the dykes under long continued beating of the waves. The lives and property of thousands are said to be in imminent peril.

In Gueldreland the distress and damage have assumed a fearful aspect. The people had battled with all their might against the destroying waves, and had become utterly exhausted. In many places they had abandoned their shelter, and in others were huddled together by hundreds in temporary sheds, where disease was ravaging them to a fearful extent.

The government and private benevolence had rendered assistance, but these were utterly inadequate to meet the distress already existing; and a strong appeal was made to the people of England to assist in relieving their Dutch neighbors in their calamity.

W. [illegible]EMING'S WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Montreal, Jan. 21.

Our own market has been as here of produce but our quotations are exceedingly barren. There is a general disinclination on the part of buyers to operate for any delivery, and those only at a reduction in prices. This is the same more particularly in Wheat, as the supply 1400 on the cars are much heavier than is generally known; whilst Flour is in good supply, and Corn and Oats are offering freely. Ashes are unchanged, Pork dull and Provisions generally. In Grain the quotations of Rail, either as well as Canal, were most generously represented.

A letter from Berlin states that the vessels which provided during the life-time of the late King caused there supply

$5 50; May delivery nominally $5 60 to $5 75. Rye flour in demand at a slight improvement in price, $2 80 to $2 85.

WHEAT—U. C. Spring, no change for lots on the spot; $1 14 to $1 17 offered. For May delivery little doing, $1 20 offered.

PEAS—Asked for at an advance; 77½ for 66 lbs for a good sample.

CORN—Moderate demands for small lots PORK—Mess $15 to $19; Prime Mess $12 to $15; Prime $10 to $22.

SARSAPARILLA.—This tropical root has a reputation wide as the world, for curing one class of the disorders that afflict mankind—a reputation too which it deserves as the best antidote we possess for scrofulous complaints. But to be brought into use, its virtues must be concentrated and combined with other medicines that increase its power. Some reliable compound of this character is much needed in the community. Read the advertisement of Dr. Ayer's sarsaparilla in our columns, and we know it needs no encomium from us to give our citizens confidence in what he offers.—Organ, Syracuse, N. Y.

LOSS OF THE HUMAN VOICE.

By the measles people sometimes lose their voice, at times; by colds, the hearing and voice is often partially destroyed.—Now, for a cold, cough, hoarseness or sore throat, try a few of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. Sold by all Druggists; 25 cents a box.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—A word to Mothers.—Cholera Infantum, Diarrhœa.—About one-third of the weekly mortality registered by the board of health, may be classed under the head of infant mortality, the majority of which are swept off by diseases of the bowels. We here confidently assert that any case of cholera infantum, or diarrhœa as it is termed in the adult stage of life, however violent in its nature, or whatever its origin, can be radically cured by the use of Holloway's celebrated Pills. The season when this class of disorders becomes prevalent is approaching, "forewarned is forearmed" says the proverb, and mothers should take heed in time. For infants the Pills should be crushed and dissolved in water sweetened with sugar.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

by Thomas Dixon, of Otonabee, C. W.

PART V.

The only other description of wooden fence which I shall notice is one that I have no personal knowledge recommended by the Agricultural press. It is constructed of posts or rails about 6 or 7 feet long, split up and in a breadth 12 inches or 8 feet deep. There is no doubt that on very dry soils, this would be a very efficient fence while it lasts, but I think it would not be advisable to use good split timber for this purpose, as it could not require fine timber to construct it then for a rail fence, nor will it last so long, for the pickets will rot off at the surface of the ground I do not think it's profitable fence. One of my neighbors erected a fence of this description about 18 years since, composed of round cedar poles from 2 to 3 inches think, and on examining it lately I found it very much decayed, while I also noticed that the same timber put up in the form I have just recommended for a rail fence, would have lasted for 20 years to come.

The subject of wire fences has attracted a great deal of attention in the United States for some time past. Many experiments have been tried with different descriptions, but there seems to be a difficulty which has not yet been overcome—the contraction and expansion of the wire caused by the variations of temperature of different seasons of the year. The wire is attached to posts somewhat after the fashion of a board fence, but as the wire is out of itself sufficiently stiff to resist the strain of cattle or horses leaning against it, it must be drawn tight by means of a lever power of some kind, and it is in regulating the tension that the difficulty lies. If erected in summer and made sufficiently tight the contraction caused by the cold of winter will cause the wire to break, and if left so slack as to admit of the contraction of winter it will be useless. In summer, if some means could be discovered to overcome this difficulty, the abundance of iron in Canada might cause us to look forward to wire fences as our future dependence. But as this result depends on a discovery yet to be made we are compelled to look for some other material on which we can rely with certainty.

Many different kinds of live fences have been tried in this as well as other countries. The thorn is successfully used in Europe, and in this country not only it but the hawthorn the red cedar, the crab apple, the willow, and various other kinds have been repeatedly and perseveringly tried, and in some limited localities with a great amount. Yet on the whole the result of the experiments thus far have been such as to force us to the conclusion that none of the live fences which have yet been tried can be relied on in Canada.

Considering all these circumstances there seems but one course that can be adopted with certainty, which is to commence now to raise a supply of rail timber for future use. This idea may at first seem preposterous, but if we look at the surprisingly rapid growth of young timber in enclosures from which cattle are excluded, we will be convinced that this result can be obtained in much less time than would at first be supposed. There is at present growing on my farm a spruce tree which I well remember of planting with my own hands; the precise time I do not recollect, but it cannot be more than 25 or 30 years which now measures 6 feet in circumference, at the height of one foot from the ground, and several other trees, particularly ash and which sprung up in the line of an old fence, within my recollection, which measures 4 feet in circumference. Such facts as these should encourage us to make a beginning in these parts of the country where the primitive forests are becoming exhausted; it will be always be beneficial to plant the trees for this purpose. Many farms already possess patches of second growth young timbers, particularly pine. How many beautiful groves of young pine do we see cut down every year, which if left to grow for a few years would yield a large quantity of timber, and that too at a time when it would be of greater value than at present. To every farmer who possesses a grove of second growth timber of spruce, pine, cedar, or even hemlock, I would suggest the propriety of preserving it for future use, and where this advantage is not possessed I do not hesitate to say that it would be a wise measure to plant out a few acres of the most valuable kind of timber for the same purpose. To do this with a fair prospect of success it will be necessary to summer-fallow the ground thoroughly the previous year, and also to manure it if not previously rich. It will generally be cheaper to purchase the seed than to gather it from the forest. Evergreen tree seed of the different kinds can be purchased at any good seed store for from $2 to $3 per lb. Pine is about the highest, but as the seed is very small and light, a pound will produce a large quantity of trees. The ground should be made very fine and the seed sown about the 1st of May, in drills, covered, about a ½ of an inch deep with very fine soil. Small stakes should then be driven into the ground directly in the line of the rows, at regular distances apart, and a thin board about 10 or 12 inches wide nailed to the stakes at the south side, close to the row of seeds, and a little higher over it so that the sun will be completely shaded from it. This shade will have to be continued for the first two years, as the plants will not stand exposure to the sun for that length of time. The only further labour required will be to keep the ground clear of weeds for a few years until the young plants become sufficiently strong to take care of themselves. No doubt this will involve some labour at first, but after the first 2 or 3 years no further trouble will be necessary, and when we consider the immense advantages to be derived from it in future, I think it the most worthy a trial, and if the plan above generally adopted, and carried out we need have no apprehension for a supply of timber, both for fencing and building, for present and future generations.

ALBION HOTEL,
MONTREAL.
L. W. DECKER, Proprietor.

IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST. PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed in the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION, to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

WHEN I MEAN TO MARRY.

A VALENTINE.

When do I mean to marry? Well—
'Tis idle to dispute with fate;
But if you choose to hear me tell,
Pray listen while I fix the date:

When [illegible] haste, with eager feet
A mother's duty 'tis to share;
Can make the puddings which they eat
And mend the stockings which they wear;

When maidens look upon a man
As in himself what they would marry,
And not as army agents scan
A suttler or a commissary.

When gentle ladies who have got
The offer of a lover's hand,
Consent to share his "earthly lot,"
And do not mean his lot of land;

When young mechanics are allowed
To find and wed the farmer's girls,
Who don't expect to be endowed
With ruties, diamonds and pearls;

When wives, in short, shall freely give
Their hearts and hands to aid their spouses
And live as they were wont to live
Within their sires' one-story houses;

Then, madam—if I'm not too old—
Resolved to quit this lonely life,
I'll brush my beaver, cease to scold,
And look around me for a wife.

THE ARTFUL COUSIN.

A story for St. Valentines day

"Father has written that he shall be home this morning, and shall bring Cousin Jane with him. What a silly idea that he should adopt her! She will be such a nuisance, a green country girl; probably knows just enough to think she knows everything, and to make herself perfectly disagreeable."

"The worst of these country cousins," answered Anna Seymour to her sister Susan, who had just spoken, "is that it is such a task to get them decently dressed, so that you can take them out anywhere without being mortified. I can see Jane Barton coming in, now, with a plain straw bonnet shaped half a dozen years ago, and trimmed with an old green ribbon, a drab dress that looks as if it was cut by a tailor, and shoes that might have been made by a blacksmith. It makes my heart sick to think of all the study, and effort, and manœuvring to get her in trim. I'd sooner fit out a man-of-war."

as to have her always in the way, always to be taken care of. One can't go anywhere, but the first thing will be, "Cousin Jane—where's Cousin Jane?" and she must go, too; one can never have a beau to one's self, for Cousin Jane must be on the other arm."

"Hark! there's father coming with her now, and he takes such a fancy to her! She has managed somehow to get on his right side—the artful thing!"

Mr. Seymour entered, and with him a very small, pale, plain-looking young woman of twenty, dressed in the simplest black.

"Miss Anna and Miss Susan Seymour, your Cousin Jane," he said, presenting his companion.

The young ladies bowed, and Susan rose stiffly and asked her cousin to be seated near them. Anna looked her over and over and congratulated herself that it would not be half the task to get her black in order that it would have been to produce the desired transformation had she appeared in the expected straw and drab.

Cousin Jane was the daughter of Mr. Seymour's younger and favorite brother, and had but recently been made an orphan by the sudden death of her father. Her mother died when she was very young, and now there was no one nearer than her father's brother to whom she could look for guardianship. Having lost her mother so early, she had centered all her affections on her father, had learned his tastes and suited herself to his ways, and this made her loss and loneliness at his death all the greater. When she saw her Uncle Seymour, his resemblance to her father attracted her to him at once, and the confidence and affection she showed towards him soon won his favor and decided him to admit her to his home and adopt her as a daughter.

The Misses Seymour were very gay and fashionable city ladies. Anna was tall and stately, with elegant manners and an elegant style of dress; her taste was said to be faultless, and she ever estimated its importance. Susan, two years younger, was much less imposing in figure and style, but very handsome, and well aware of the fact. Jane Barton, different in type as in life and education, has been sufficiently described for an introduction. Her cousin Anna soon found herself entirely in mistake as to the trouble she had anticipated in getting her into a presentable state, her dress being all that was required, even by fashion, for her period of mourning. But Susan was troubled, according to her appreciation, by her addressed company. Jane was entirely clothing, and at first spent most of her time in her own room, but her meals protested against so much retirement on the part of the little favorite. He wanted everybody to see his new daughter, and to please him Jane spent more time in the parlor than was entirely agreeable to her cousins. She was in their way; she had to be introduced, taken care of, spoken to ceremoniously, for the sake of good breeding and out of regard to their relationship, and—it was such a bore," Susan said.

She was most in the way when George Saunders came. He was the eldest son of Mr. Seymour's partner, and was expecting soon to take his father's place in business. He was considered a young man of the finest prospects in every respect, and the very best match for Susan. She was of this opinion herself, and it occupied her past understanding to have that little coy, artful Jane Barton engaging, in such queer ways as she would to get all Saunders' attention from him. She would not sit still, and never speak a word, just to make him turn away from whomever else to address her. She would pretend to be interesting herself with pictures just to make him go and look at the pictures with her. When they went out it was even worse, for Jane was sure to beg in such a way as to compel Saunders, out of politeness to stay behind to take care of her. O, it was so provoking! And nothing could be done about it—nothing could be said about it, even. It would only make matters ten times worse. Jane was such a still artful little beast! Susan tried to be artful too, and overmatch her.

St. Valentine's Day was at hand, and she planned to introduce again an old custom for that period, of which she had heard her grandmother tell. It allotted valentines, or partners, whose duty it was to be faithful to each other for the season. She determined that through her art, George Saunders should fall to her lot as a valentine, and this would give her a claim upon his attentions which politeness to that little sly Jane could not infringe upon. She proposed her plan to a company of select friends on the eve of the ominous day.—Each maiden was to place an evergreen over her door, and recognize the first who passed beneath it as her valentine, with the right to make her evergreen his crest.

"What a rush there will be to your door in the morning, Susan!" exclaimed half a dozen young ladies, one catching up the compliment and repeating it as another let it fall.

"Nonsense, nonsense!" exclaimed Susan, tossing her head, but hoping the flattery would prove to be a prophecy.

"At what time may we hope to be admitted to our good fortunes, ladies?" asked one of the gentlemen.

"We can fix no hour; that would spoil everything. All must be left to fate."

"Suppose we all besiege a doorway at once?"

"One only can be the first to be admitted. The second who might pass beneath the charmed bough is without claim or duty, and must seek another valentine."

"The worst of these country cousins," answered Anna Seymour to her sister Susan, who had just spoken, "is that it is such a task to get them decently dressed, so that you can take them out anywhere without being mortified. "Suppose we all besiege a doorway at once?"

"One only can be the first to be admitted. The second who might pass beneath the charmed bough is without claim or duty, and must seek another valentine."

A tall, pale and pretending young poet, who sometimes indited verses to Miss Julia, and who seemed to hold her beauty in high estimation, though his poetry would have made it natural for him to estimate still more highly her father's wealth, went mincing to her side and softly whispered:

"In mercy, tell me when this magic branch will grace your doorway, that choice and will may assist fortune to make me happy."

"Fortune only shall choose my valentine," answered Susan with a satisfaction of manner which showed her appetite for flattery, no matter by whom it might be offered, dispersed, when Susan, in a fortunate and unobserved moment, said to George Saunders, with a confidence and partiality which must have been highly gratifying to his self-esteem, "I shall expect you early, Mr. Saunders. It will not be a laggard on whom my evergreen will wave."

Mr. Saunders bowed and stammered, "There is little hope that among so many aspirants for the honor, fortune will allow me to wear it for my crest," and again bowing end offering a good-night he withdrew.

Susan Seymour had a full share of artfulness; as much as she had charged upon her cousin Jane. Before she retired, she so arranged her blinds and shades that, unobserved herself, she could see whoever might present themselves at the front door. Then placing an evergreen beneath her pillow, she lay down, invoking dreams of him whom she had chosen for her valentine, and who she was sure must at least seem to be chosen for her by fortune too.

It was not long after daybreak, and no one was astir in the house, when she was awakened by the ring of the door-bell. She remembered her hint to Saunders to be early, and sprang to her place of observation. How provoking! how disgusting! It was only a beggar. She thought it would be a good joke to summon her cousin Jane, who was so fond of beggars, and send her to the door.

"Here comes your valentine, Jane," she called; "a ragged old wretch, such as you are always running after. Get up and let him in."

Jane rose in obedience to the summons. Her charity was ever active, and it was never too early or late for her to supply the wants of poverty or distress, wants which will not be limited to hours of fashion or convenience, but come at all times. Susan caught a sprig of cypress and gave it to her.

"Here is your evergreen," she said; "be sure to put it in a place for your valentine to pass under."

"I will," answered Jane, quietly, and ran to the door, the cypress in her hand. "This emblem of sorrow is surely fit to consecrate me as the minister to sorrow and suffering, come in what shape they may," she said, as she flung it above the door which she opened to the beggar. He was an old man; his hair and beard, which nearly covered his face, were silver white, and he was half bowed to the earth. His clothes were thin and tattered, and he was shivering with the cold.

"Will you have pity on me?" he said, in a broken voice. "Have pity on me and give me charity. Give me some money to buy bread. I am cold too."

"Here is some money for bread," said Jane, taking from her pocket a piece of silver and handing it to him. She waited a moment and then added:

"Call two hours from this time, and I may be able to give you clothes. Then you can tell me more fully your needs."

The old man stretched out his trembling hand, which he had tried to shield from the cold with a ragged and torn glove, took the coin which Jane proffered him, blessed it as he called down a blessing on her head, and departed.

"Your valentine was early," said Susan, sneeringly, as Jane pushed the door to her return to her room.

"Not too early for want, and therefore not too early for me."

Susan would not stoop again, that she might lose a ring of the bell. She was so much in haste, that Saunders might not "call in vain," that she dressed herself carefully and tastefully to receive him. She

CAREELSS PEOPLE.

The world is full of careless people, and consequently the newspapers are full of bruised and careless, but for their fathers and mothers there is no excuse!

Only the other day our nerves were wearing to explosion point by an account of a perilous surgical operation, by which a woman's trachea was opened to remove a silver dime which had lodged there. And how on earth did a silver dime ever get into a woman's windpipe? Simply because she was careless, and laughed with her mouth full of small coin. Was there no other place where she could keep threepence pieces?

We do feel sorry for a creeping baby, when it gets hold of the bars of the grate by mistake, or cuts its fingers, or bumps its head, but for growing people who suffer from their own recklessness, we have little patience!

What is the use of a woman converting her mouth into a pin-cushion, and then expecting sympathy, when a sudden spasm or an unexpected cough imperils her life?

What is the use of a man's balancing himself on an oscillating chair instead of sitting up straight like a christian? Are we expected to find vinegar and brown paper for contusion on the back of his head, when finally he comes down with a crash (and serves him right!)?

What is the use of a woman's picking her ear with a long knitting needle, as half women do, when a child running against her would send the instrument three inches into her brain if she has got any?

What is the use of a man's handling a loaded gun as though it were a broom handle, and then accusing Providence because the charge goes into his head or foot, as he might have known it would.

What is the use of a woman's buying arsenic to poison rats, and putting it just where the children will be sure to get at it?

What does she suppose her reasoning faculties were given to her for?

What is the use of leaving children to play by themselves in a room where there is fire, or of postponing the sweeping of the dangerous chimney until "to-morrow."

What is the use of endangering life by the use of the flood camphene, as long as anything else will give light? Those who persist in this practice must have a greater fancy for being burned to death than the rest of the world!

A SHORT PATENT SERMON.

BY DOW, JR.

Departing from my usual custom, I shall, on this occasion, draw my discourse from a passage in an old book, which seekers after novelty, at the present day, but seldom read:—

TEXT.—For we are but of yesterday, and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow.—Job 8: 9.

MY FRIENDS:—If you think I intend throwing stones and brick-bats into the mud pool of politics, to splash and spatter, regardless of propriety and nervous party feeling, you had better keep your sitting till I "dry up."

In the first place, fellow sublunarists, how often do you hear some old boy, vibrating between childhood and puberty, exclaim, with all the pride of full-grown wisdom and smartness, "I wasn't born yesterday!"—Well brethren, the whole vanity-swollen herd of you doubtless think, if you do not proclaim, the same. If you were not born yesterday, pray tell me upon what section of Time's territory had you the good fortune to be born? To-morrow you never saw, and never will; you are too old a crop to be the product of to-day; and, consequently, you must have turned up somewhere in the vast, unlimited, deserted wilds of Yesterday. Yesterday! what is it? It is the mighty ocean of the Past, continually being fed by the never-failing tributary To-day, and yet no nearer full now than when the first raindrops pattered upon the cedar shingles of Noah's canal boat. No, it is not an ocean. As I have said before, it is a measureless, deserted wilderness, a bourne from which no traveller has ever returned, except Memory. She often roes huckleberrying there, with none to molest, or complain of trespass, or, perchance, to gather forget-me-nots, and other wild flowers, that once were fostered with affectionate care; or to weep over the unmarked graves of hopes that perished long long ago. Some were cut down in their hey-day by the keen blade of disappointment, while others lingered, cheered by fitful gleams of encouragement till pounced upon by the devouring dragon, despair. Memory alone re-survays the dusky realm of Yesterday; and, for my part, I don't see why a mortal should have a desire to poke and fumble amongst its obsolete rubbish. Omniscience has placed the two eyes of man in such a position that he ——

My foolish friends: being of yesterday, we know nothing. Of course we don't. If we were to live long enough to call Methuselah in his nine-hundreth year "a nice young man," and were to study the book of nature till the leaves crumbled, and exhibited thumb-marks as big as the crown of your hat, we should then have learned just enough to be convinced that we are a vain-glorious set of know-nothings. We would then feel and realise what we now vauntingly disclaim—that we were actually born but yesterday.

What do you know, with all your book-fattened knowledge, my worthy literate?—You don't know why the rose is red, nor why the violet is blue.—why an humble gooseberry bush doesn't forget itself, and attempt "some pumpkins," why the needle points to the north, and opposite human sexes naturally side up to each other,—why chameleons, poets, and preachers like myself, can subsist on air, while an Alderman would starve before he ate his way out the centre of a loaf half a mile in circumference,—how magnetic thought darts upon telegraphic nerves, and causes muscles to move,—how a shad can take a straight forward course for thousands of miles, from his ocean home to the fresh water stream that he has never before visited,—how—but there is no use of talking, you know nothing, and had you but a self-satisfied knowledge of this fact, I would give you the credit of beginning to know a little.

Transitory mortals! your days upon earth are a shadow—a floating shade upon the illuminated dial of time, soon to be absorbed by the darkness of an eternal night. And what is man but a shadow—the shadow of an angel that hovers between him and the Sun of Righteousness? What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue! exclaims the divine philosopher. Sure enough! It makes me feel so small that I sometimes fumble my watch fob in search of myself, to see thousands of human shadows flitting about me in full pursuit of even the shade of a shadow, which, when they imagine they are just upon the point of capturing, glides intangibly away, and tantalizingly dances in the distance before them. Go, gather a bottle of Egyptian darkness—open it in the sunlight to analyse its component parts, and you will answer very well for an emblem of modern human industry. But what a monstrous disparity exists in the size and condition of these animated earthly shadows! I encountered one yesterday large and fat enough to grease (some hot day in August) the whole blazing griddle of Earth, and would then bring twenty dollars for some fat at four cents a pound. Soon after I beheld another walking shadow. It was long, lank and stretched out, like the shadow of a bean-pole at sunset. The middle structure continued no capacious apartment, where green turtle, oysters, roast pig and dainty fish might enjoy a comfortable repose; but on the contrary, it was so poor my soul contracted that all its fleshlined dwellers were ever in as big a hurry upon their journey at an express messenger to a steamboat. It lived, and breathed, and how that being desired its existence, passeth the comprehension of your deep-studies servant. Yet both were shadows and nothing more; one of just as much consequence as the other.—They were poor upon this mundane sphere as shadows, but as shadows they will each depart, and so must we all.

My pilgrim companions! I think I have said enough to convince you that we are but of yesterday; so let us be humble, and imbibe the meat of to-day.

As to whether Job intended prophetically to infer that our present life knew nothing of a future, or "is but of yesterday," and that "the days upon earth are a shadow," and "there is none abiding," and "our days upon earth are a shadow," and "I am only a—I don't know. But of one thing, my beloved, you may rest assured: that when we shall have moved out of this terrestrial shade, to bask in the sunshine of a glorious, neverending future, there can be no possible fear of our becoming bigger fools than we are at present. So mote it be!

THE CAUSES OF DEATH.

Out of 100 deaths in England and Wales in 1858, the last year for which the causes of death have been examined, 25 were from zymotic diseases, 10 from constitutional diseases, 37 from local diseases, 16 from developmental diseases, and 3 from accidental or other violence. Zymotic diseases were exceedingly fatal, especially scarlatina, which, with its auxiliary diphtheria, caused 30,317 deaths. Smallpox and measles destroyed—the one 6,460 lives, the other 9,271. Syphilitic diseases killed 1,006 persons, above 700 of them infants, who received it as their only inheritance. Want is recorded as the cause of death in 63 instances; but, observes Dr. Farr, in how many more was the real, though unavowed source, or support of fatal disease, it was impossible that register-books could reveal. Almost 1,000 children died from the want of breast milk. "Alcoholism" destroyed 712 persons, the deaths of 208 being expressly referred to intemperance, and 636 more vaguely to delirium tremens. In the second class—the constitutional—which includes tubercular diseases, it was found that the rate of mortality from phthisis in London and in the Welsh division was nearly the same, though the two districts differ widely in important circumstances; but other pulmonary diseases—bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, &c.—were more than three times as fatal in London as in Wales. In the third class—local diseases—there was a clear increase in affections of the brain, the lungs, and the kidneys; a very remarkable decrease in phlegmasia. In the fourth class—developmental diseases—there was a clear increase in the deaths from old age, caused by the cold of the winter. 3,181 mothers died from child-bearing, a considerable increase of mortality, supposed to be caused partly by the general unhealthiness of the year, and partly by privations consequent on the distress resulting from the commercial crisis at the close of 1857. There were six diseases, each of which killed above 20,000 persons in the year—phthisis, 59,643; scarlatina, 30,317; bronchitis, 29,283; [illegible] and debility, any groups, so many are the foes ever on the watch for us. Of the deaths in 1851 half were of persons under five years of age; four-out of ten were under five years of age. On the registers for the first quarter of the year being examined, it was found that 7,275 persons died without any medical attendant to certify the cause of their death—six in 100 of the deaths. In Manchester 181 out of 1,735, the number who died in the quarter, had no medical attendance in their last illness; in Yorkshire so many as 10 persons out of 100, and in the Welsh division at least 12 out of the same number.

HUNGER, THE BEST SAUCE.

"Hungry as a hunter," is not a bad comparison, at least so thought a young Oxford friend of ours as he was riding home to Alma Mater after a long day with the V. W. H. Twenty miles to cover, and an hour and forty minutes down the vale, would create an appetite under the sins of death; and our young student, who was the son of a spinner, was noted, even among the good grubbers, as having a twist of his own. Dismounting from his quadruped, and entering a small road-side inn, he begged the landlady to put something before him. The "something" soon appeared in the shape of the remnants of a meat pie, which was all that remained after her own dinner. Young Nimrod was hard at it in the twinkling of a bull's eye, as they say at Brazenose, and never ceased plying his knife and fork till naught remained but a Pelion upon Ossa of fragmentary bones which would have puzzled our friend Waterhouse Hawkins to re-organize.

"Capital pie," quoth Nimrod; "never eat a better—quite equal to Gloomy Hixton's arow tarts. And pray what might you have made it of, my good woman?"

"Oh, sir, there was beef and mutton and lots of things in it."

"And fish, too, I see," said the young disciple of Buckland, daintily balancing on his fork what appeared the vertebræ of a flatfish.

"Fish, sir! oh, dear no, sir! no fish. Why, dear me," continued she, attentively examining the fragment, "that is lucky; it is not our little Polly's small-tooth comb, and I've been a looking for it these ten days."

THE TURKISH PORTER.

Walter Thornbury's work on "Turkish Life and Character," lately published in London, is written with great vivacity, and the style is original and piquant. Hear what he says of his porter. We don't wonder the poor fellow was fascinated:

Stolidity imperturbable, the ragged Turk sidles to the watering place, and throws our saddle-bags into a corner. It is now more than all my Turkish to explain to him that he has no stranger, but will travel with him for his double as a guide on our return from the Turkish "city of rotten." He chooses the bags to his dirty breast, and manifests a strong desire to return with them to Mussulman's palace rumoured by many pilgrims. I call out to him all the words expressive of future chat, such as "to-morrow, my pip!" "day after to-morrow, my friend!" Monday smile, my executor," etc., which set bewildered him that the thrower down the bags (betraying my penurious pot), muttering a curse, shakes his head, addresses the bastinado in a short harangue aqui au the transitory affairs in general, and vanishes capoid up the hill.

Every pyramid in favor of Hunyadi-sing as like the lower lumber layout—it falls to the ground.

EXTRAORDINARY ATTEMPT AT MURDER.

The Dublin papers report a most extraordinary attempt at robbing and murder.

"On Thursday a person in the garb of a gentleman called at the establishment of Messrs. Hyam & Co., Dame street, clothiers, and gave orders for the supply of a large quantity of ready-made clothing, which he ordered to be sent to his hotel. He paid £5, as a deposit for the same, in gold. The name of his order, and left Mr. Hyam's establishment. The goods were forwarded by their porter, William Mulholland. This porter while conveying the goods to their destination, was met by a young man of dark complexion, and apparently of 20 years of age. He came to the porter (Mulholland) assuming the aspect and using the terms of a person greatly disappointed and highly indignant, and said to him "You are fully as hour late; Mr. Anson is gone; come with me to the office and I will pay you." The dark-visaged man conducted the porter with his load over one of the bridges to the north side of the river and then on Queen street to Blackhall-parade. He took the porter, still bearing his load, up a lane to the rear of the houses in this locality, and then, drawing a key from his pocket, he opened the gate of a stable on which was pasted a small bill, "To be let." The porter was then asked to follow him into the stable. The reply was in the affirmative. Mulholland observed him fumbling in his pockets, and thinking that the man was looking for the means of lighting a candle, inquired if it was a match he wanted? The stranger replied "Yes," and while Mulholland was searching in his pocket for a match he drew a pistol from his vest, and fired it into the face of Mulholland. The weapon, which was loaded with a conical bullet, exploded so near the person of the intended victim that it singed his hair, and the ball passed through the cartilage of his nose, and lodged in the plastered wall of the stable. Mulholland on being shot fell to the ground, and on attempting to rise he was grappled by the assassin, who attempted to strangle him. In the struggle which ensued Mulholland got the fellow's finger in his mouth and bit it severely, and then called loudly for help from the police. The assassin, fearing detection, made off, possibly overhearing the approaching steps of some constable who came up speedily on hearing the outcry. Mulholland was conveyed to the Richmond Hospital, where his wounds were dressed.

"In the stable to which Mulholland had been inveigled, when light was obtained it was at once perceived by the constable for what terrible purpose this stable had been taken at rent a week ago by the assassin and his associates, who were supposed to have come over here from England. At one side of the stable, near to the wall, a grave was recently dug; the shovel and pickaxe which had been made use of for a man yet living remained on the margin of the excavation, which was about six and a half feet in length, five feet in depth, and four feet in width. The arrangements for the "burial" of the victim or victims, as the case might be, seemed to be tolerably perfect. The large stones were carefully put aside to serve as an upper covering to repose the pavement of the stable, and thus baffle suspicion and prevent detection; and doubtless, the poor porter, whose body was destined to occupy that pit, would in all probability be supposed to have absconded with the money which was paid to him for the goods intrusted to him for delivery.—The pistol with which the intended murder was to have been accomplished lay upon the ground, near the stable door. It is a single barrelled rifle pistol, with a walnut stock. Beneath the muzzle of the piece is a spring bayonet, which springs outward on the trigger being pulled, thus making death doubly sure, and showing the weapon was intended for the perpetration of a foul deed, making it terrible in the hands of a determined assassin. A morocco leather pocket book was also found, in which were a number of percussion caps and a quantity of gunpowder. The parcels of clothing, &c., brought by the porter, Mulholland, were lying near the stable door where they had fallen during the scuffle."

Another account states that the perpetrator of the outrage is known to the police, and is one and the same person who purchased the goods at Hyam's. For obvious reasons the authorities do not disclose his name for the present, but we are informed that he is a native of Dublin, and wants a few months of being nineteen years old.

ARREST AND EXAMINATION OF DWYER.

Joseph Dwyer, the young man accused of being the person who attempted the above crime, was brought before the magistrates in Capel-street police-court on Monday morning. He was arrested in a back room of the house No. 63, Church-street, between three and four o'clock on Sunday evening. He was immediately conveyed to Bridewell-lane station-house. The information on which the officers acted came we believe from a private source.—The door of the room in which he was found was unlocked. On the officers entering and seizing him he submitted without a struggle. On his arrest becoming known numerous numbers flocked to the police-station at Bridewell-lane, to get a sight at one whose name had suddenly become so notorious. In consequence of the information which had been given of a person answering to his description having been seen in Kingstown, two of the most active officers of the G division were dispatched to England at once. In all probability he would have made off but for want of funds, on being searched his pockets were found to contain a shilling piece, five keys, a guard chain and a Roman Catholic devotional book, entitled "The Spiritual Combat." One of the fingers of his right hand is marked near the top joint, and another finger is dressed as if severely wounded. He is a native of North King street, Dublin, and the son of highly respectable parents, who gave him a liberal education, he having been for two years a student in the Roman Catholic University, Stephen's-green.

The prisoner, who was shabbily dressed, looked pale and careworn when placed at the bar, and throughout the proceedings manifested the utmost indifference. There were several witnesses examined, who clearly proved the truth of the above narrative. We subjoin the evidence of the principal witnesses:—Thomas Jacobs: I have been the last 16 years in the employment of Mr. Myers, of 60, Dame-street, as salesman. I was there on Thursday last, the 27th December. I saw the prisoner at the bar. I sold him goods that day. He gave me his name as Richard Hanson or Anson. He asked to see a suit of clothes. I showed him first a dress coat, £3 5s, and then a dress coat, price £1 6s; vest 10s 6d. Afterwards he said, "Now, show me a top coat." I showed him several. He seemed hard to please, but ultimately I pleased him in one, which he selected at £3 10. Afterwards he said, "Show, show me a pair of tweed trousers and vest." I did so, at £1 5s. The cashier made out a bill, which I handed to him. (Document produced.) I asked him if he was going to pay for them now, and he said "No; I will pay for them on delivery, but I will leave a deposit."—He opened his purse, and took out half a crown. I said, "You had better make it 10s." He replied, "I have not 10s to spare but I will make it 5s, which I took. "Be particular," he said; let them (meaning the clothes) be at the Commercial Hotel, on Usher's Quay, at 5 o'clock exactly."

Jane Brady:—I am in service at the Commercial Hotel, Usher's quay, as housemaid. I remember on Thursday last a person enquired at the hotel about a parcel. I see him here (identifies the prisoner.) Mr. Hyam's porter came before that, and asked for Mr. Anson. I told him no person of that name stopped in the house. Mr. Hyam's porter came again, and after that the prisoner came—about five o'clock. He asked for tea, and I showed him up-stairs; he got his tea, and then he asked did any parcel come from Mr. Hyam's. I told him Mr. Hyam's porter had been there, and I asked the prisoner was his name Anson, and he said it was. After tea he went out, and told me if any parcel came for Mr. Anson, by Mr. Hyam's porter, to receive it for him. He left, and I saw him no more until to-day. I did not observe anything particular in his possession.

Acting Inspector Rice, 5 G: Between three and four o'clock on Sunday, Acting-Sergeant M'Dermott and I called at the Bridewell-lane station, where we met Superintendent Gernon. We followed him to the house 64, Church street. Other constables were there. They entered several rooms in the house. I went to the top back room. I knocked, and after some time it was opened by a woman. I went into the room and saw the prisoner, Joseph Dwyer, standing on the floor. I said, "Are you Joseph Dwyer?" He said, "Oh yes; do you know me?" I was in plain clothes. I said, I do. Do you know me? I belong to the detective police. You are now a prisoner, and you are not bound to criminate yourself." I said, "you are charged on a warrant with attempting to shoot one Wm. Mulholland." He raised his hand and said, "Oh! I see where he hit me." We took the prisoner to Bridewell lane station, where the prisoner was charged. The prisoner said, "I did not intend to take his life." That was said by him when the charge had been entered and read over to the prisoner.

Mrs. Anne Crelter proved letting the stable to Dwyer for 2s 6d per week. There was no hole in the stable when she let it to the prisoner.

The prisoner was committed for trial, Mr. Curran for the defence stating that at the proper time he would clearly prove that for the last twelve months Dwyer has been of unsound mind.

TIMELY WARNING.

From the Chicago Tribune.

We owe it to the people of the North, as public journalists, to warn them that they are about to be betrayed and sold out. The course pursued by the South is slowly but surely doing its intended work. The enactment of secession ordinances by two or three more States; the seizure of a few more forts, arsenals, and munitions of war; the confiscation of additional cargoes of powder and provisions belonging to private citizens; the maltreating and murdering of yet other men of Northern origin; of some more who voted for Lincoln, or who, not doing so, believe his election not sufficient cause for secession; the firing a few times more upon our national flag, and the utterance of a few more treasonable speeches in the Senate of the United States—and the flunkies and the doughfaces and the cowards of the North will be upon their knees begging for terms. It is impossible to be mistaken in this matter. On all sides the indications thicken of an ignominious surrender. The Northern Democracy are everywhere caving in. In their County and State Conventions they express a willingness to give up every one of their heretofore cherished principles, to submit to every possible outrage the traitors may choose to inflict; and they more than intimate, unless the whole North surrenders, they will turn their guns upon those who object. In these positions they are joined by the timid, conservative men of all parties—by men of capital and by men intent upon the profits of trade—by men who own ships and manufactories and merchandise—by men who put a market price upon principles, and who count ease and personal safety of more value than honor and patriotism. While the former are holding their conventions for the undisguised purpose of giving aid and comfort to men who are in arms against their own country, the latter are equally active in getting up and circulating petitions to their representatives in Congress, imploring them to dishonor their country, their section, their principles, and their manhood, by voting for some ignominious compromise. There was a time when both classes had only brave and defiant words for traitors and rebels. When Douglas, in his Norfolk speech, declared that treason must be put down and the laws of the country enforced by the whole power of the nation, if necessary, the Democracy of the North with one voice echoed and applauded his words. But that was before the traitors had shown their teeth—before they had fired upon the national flag, seized the national property within their respective States, and defied the Federal Government. It would seem that the threats were intended only for small traitors or traitors in posse not to treason on a large scale, or to traitors in esse. For the former an avenging arm and a terrible retribution—for the latter, words of kindness and conciliation and measures of concession only.

Has all manhood clean gone out of the North? Are all the steadfastness of purpose and all the country in the possession of those who are in arms against the Government? Have we sunk so low that we hasten to swallow every brave word we may have uttered, the moment danger appears in view? If so, it matters not what may come, we cannot be dishonored.

And now, if there is not enough of manliness and of principle left at the North to meet this crisis, let the consequences be what they may, without surrender, then let us beg of the South not to be modest in their terms. If whenever a demand is made in behalf of Slavery, Freedom is to be betrayed by its professed adherents, let every remaining vestige of liberty be given up at once. Why stop in recognizing property in man—with incorporating a Slave code into the Federal Constitution—with paying the South in money for all its felonious chattels? Such an adjustment would give but brief satisfaction to a section that never fails to get what it demands; and in a few years the country would be called upon to pass another crisis, to be settled by the humiliation of the North and the triumphs of traitors. No; let the South demand now all it may want for the next century, or at least, until a better breed of men shall inhabit the North. Let us cancel the lowest possible depths of degradation at once. A speedy descent to the lowest possible point may perchance be followed by an upward movement, but we should never recover from a degradation that is the work of generations, and so become ingrafted in our very souls. In pity, then, let the South surrender its work now. Let her sell us the cotton already in the possession of the African slave-trade—that can outward bound ships shall go freighted with cotton, and no ship shall enter our ports that does not bring a full cargo of slaves—that capital, everywhere, from all over the labor, that no distinction shall hereafter be made in law, between the Abolitionists of the South and the laborers of the North—that the distinction of free and slave States shall be forever abolished, and that slavery shall be white lawful in every State, and the slaveholders rights of property be protected in every land and on every sea. Let the South increase her demands to this extent while she is about it—and our word for it, the white men at the North who are in favor of conceding to her present demands, will be equally clamorous for the balance.

There is yet a single hope for freedom in this crisis, but that hope does not rest on the North. If the South Carolinians would only make a determined assault upon Fort Sumpter, level its walls to the sea, and slaughter its gallant commander and all its men—then perhaps the North would arise in vindication of the Constitution and laws, and teach the South that this country and government were not made wholly for slaveholders. That is now almost our only hope.

WRECK OF THE "HUNGARIAN."

A singular difficulty has arisen in the case of the goods saved from this unfortunate ship. It appears that the goods thus saved were sold for a gross sum of $39,077, out of which $26,297 were landed in the Province of Nova Scotia, and $12,780 taken elsewhere for sale. Now, it would appear that the only part of the cargo which could be liable to duty, was the part landed within the Province. The Revenue Officers, however, have charged ten per cent. upon the whole amount.—Again, 40 per cent. of the $26,257 was paid for salvage, and the statute exempts goods sold to pay salvage from duty; but inasmuch as the whole of the good were sold, and the salvage paid out of the gross amount realized, instead of a part of the goods being specially sold for that purpose, it is held that no exemption has taken place. Thus, the owners of the goods, or underwriters, are made to pay upon the goods which really belonged not to them, but to the salvors. But the extraordinary nature of this demand does not end here. Part of the goods were sold on behalf of those whom it might concern, while they lay at the bottom of the sea. It was the business of the purchasers to land them at their own risk, and until they were landed it would seem that no duty could accrue. Yet, it was not the purchasers of the goods who brought them on shore; but the duty was exacted from the sellers of the goods, who were in the same position towards the Province of Nova Scotia as the manufacturers at Glasgow or Manchester, by whom they were originally made. The extraordinary consequences of this decision, even as regards Nova Scotia herself, is well shown by Mr. Whitman, the agent in Nova Scotia, for the owners. He points out that the prices paid were very much less than the value of the goods, because the purchaser had to take the risk and expense of their recovery. Their true value, therefore, was greatly in excess of what was paid for them, and accordingly the Province, levying the duty upon the money received by the owners, instead of upon the goods, lost a considerable revenue, and enabled the buyer to undersell other merchants. For instance, the goods were sold as they lay in the sea for $12,000. The value plainly was not the £12,000 but that sum added to the cost of raising, and the value of the risk. Mr. Whitman says they were, when raised, worth $30,000. Yet, as the duty was charged on the $12,000 only, the Province seems to have lost two-thirds of its revenue.—Montreal Herald.

INTERRUPTED SMUGGLING.

From the Buffalo Republic.

On Friday night an attempt was made to smuggle from her Majesty's dominions certain goods on which her Majesty's Canadian authorities demand certain fees upon the advent thereof, under the name of Customs. Her Majesty's undutiful nephews from this side of the river endeavored to evade payment of "Customs to whom Customs was due," by taking said goods across the Niagara, a few miles below Fort Erie. But the officers "attending to this very thing" of tributes, happened to be on the look-out for certain other transgressors of whom they had received notice of evil intent to defeat Her Majesty's Revenue, and behold! these unknown or at least unadvised culprits hove in sight of the Argus-eyed officials, about nine miles from the village of Fort Erie.—It appears they had just been hauling their fine span of horses in the yard of an inn, where these lynx-eyed conservatives of Canadian Receipts were stationed on watch.—After due refreshments to quadrupeds and bipeds, they mutually left the inn yard; the former as they supposed, to trot on to their destination, the latter speculating on their gains by the "raise" of goods. But alas! something drew the attention of the Custom-men to the loaded sleigh, that something looked "suspicious," and they looked suspiciously upon it. "Jonathan" drove off quietly. Queen's representatives called out stop! Jonathan wouldn't. Some one of the four guardians of the Revenue purse fired at the team. Ball entered chest of off horse. Jonathan wouldn't hear this—swore awfully, and sooner than ill-use his pet horse, surrendered at discretion. Slowly and sadly the cortege passed along, till at last the Village spire at Fort Erie came into sight. We saw the horse that had been in the wars—clear through his noble chest the fatal ball had driven, but not yet dead. Though his nostrils distended he still blew forth the snorting sounds of defiance. But the languid eye, the faltering step all all too plainly told his noble strength was ebbing fast. His owner too was there.—But oh! "How our army in Flanders did swear." Gracious! we would rather be an Abolitionist in Charleston, than an Abolitionist in the hands of that man. Well, let 'em settle it.

THE REVOLUTION IN THE UNITED STATES.

The Times of the 24th ult. has another leading article on the leading phases of the secession crisis, in which it disapproves a great "want of that loyalty, with all its attendant feelings and interests, which forms the principal ornament of the British Constitution." Loyalty at the Southern States, it says "it is clear that a man may there hold up his hand for secession, make a speech, proceed to arm himself and actually go on a foot, without loss of caste and without being one bit the less fit to show himself in any American company." The article concludes as follows:

"In one way the question is working itself out. Trade has already suffered considerable interruption, people are quite knowing what to do, &c. The Southern native genius will hardly venture to grow the ripe staff instead of cotton for the next year or two. Our own speculators have been sending out millions of gold to buy up everything that is to be bought, and the only result is that the Americans are obtaining very high prices for everything they have to sell. They for they have pocketed we are afraid to say how many million dollars by the outbreak, and if the Northern and Southern States were to make it up to-morrow they would be able to decide a very handsome booty at the expense of the British alarmists. But it is said the present state of things has its inconvenience at Charleston, where everybody is arming, drilling, digging, and doing everything rather than work to any useful purpose, or pay debt.—There is a complete suspension of trade, and Charleston without trade is an animal under an exhausted receiver. Trade is the very breath it breathes. The 120,000 stand of arms, such as they are, which, thanks to Secretary Floyd, the South Carolinians are busily practicing with, afford the means of a very pretty amusement, but they will neither crush into sugar nor coin into dollars, and while they are handled every other tool must be idle, from the pen of the cashier to the pick of the navvie. So things must be going to the bad at Charleston, and the Government at Washington may find it the best course to let the seceders find out for themselves the true nature of the step they have taken. It is a question of convenience, and perhaps there is no harm in putting it to a practical proof. Of course it is possible to go too fast even in an experiment. So we say to South Carolina, "Look before you take a very dark leap.—Unpleasant as your present position may be, you may light on something worse, or on nothing at all." "It is easy," says some one "to decide any day in the affirmative the question whether to cut one's throat or not; but when one has come to that decision, and acted upon it, it is not so easy then to review the arguments leading to a contrary view of the case."

THE ANDERSON CASE.

This case, the most celebrated one of the day, has, as most of our readers are aware, reached England. At the instance of the Secretary of the anti-slavery Society in London, a writ of habeas corpus has been issued from the Court of Queen's Bench in England, addressed to the Governor, the Sheriffs and Jailors of Toronto and Brant, to bring the body of John Anderson to that tribunal. By a recent arrival we learn that the writ has arrived in Canada; and strange to say, on the very day on which it reached Toronto a similar writ was issued in that city from the Court of Common Pleas, which latter writ has forestalled the one from the mother country. This circumstance, though apparently trifling in itself, is hailed by every well wisher of the country as most opportune, as it prevents the unhappy circumstances necessarily flowing from a collection of jurisdictions. The writ was issued by the Judges in England rather reluctantly. The Chief Justice saw the difficulties in the way of interfering with our judiciary institutions, and of enforcing submission in the event of a probable refusal to obey. The question of the right of English Courts to act in Canada in the way desired, would not have been entertained by the Bench, but for the cases cited by Mr. Edwin James, the learned counsel for the Society referred to, whereby it was made to appear that the mother country had the right to issue such writs—that it had, in the cases cited, acted upon that right—and although we stood in a different position from the colonies where action had been taken, having a Queen's Bench and other judiciary tribunals, yet the right for the British Court to exercise its prerogative in Canada had not been abrogated. The Judges would not have issued the writ if they had not been compelled by the text of Mr. James, bringing up from the musty records of the past precedents to warrant their Lordships' action in the way sought. In a former notice of this now famous case we expressed our opinion of the irregular proceedings of the magistrates when first the fugitive was committed—that in dismissing the case they would be acting quite in accordance with justice and law, and that in such cases if a doubt did arise the prisoner should have the benefit of it. The point in the case argued before the Judges under the last writ, and which will again be argued, is as to whether the evidence adduced before Wm. Mathews and his associates is sufficient to detain the prisoner with a view to his delivery up to the American authorities or not. Two Judges have said it is, one has said it is not. Three have now to give their opinion, and should a majority of them pronounce the evidence insufficient, Anderson will be discharged. If they sustain the decision of the Queen's Bench, the case will be appealed to England without doubt.

The Law Times in England has written a number of articles on this case, and gives some excellent specimens of its acumen, which we advise our readers to peruse. It upholds the Toronto decision from the fact that the Judges recorded that decision equally unbiassed by the associations of the case, the intensely popular feeling existing for the discharge of the fugitive, or the consequence following his rendition. It is viewed by that journal as a triumph of the Judge over the man, as of legal rectitude over what has been termed the "moral sense of mankind," and in full view of the very serious consequences resulting from that decision, while the Law and the Treaty stand as they are. It serves to justify the judgment given by Chief Justice Robinson, and of course the surrender of Anderson. What we bow to authority and admire and acknowledge the ability, tact and discrimination of such an able Expositor of Law, yet in the exercise of our plain judgment upon the points agreed before us by this eighteenth Jurist, we must express our opinion. He says on the 12 Jan'y, "For the like reasons we abstain from dwelling upon the conflicting opinions delivered from the Bench on the informality and defects of the warrant which was returned into court.—Still the general reflection must be expressed that if in upholding the evidence and the warrant, the majority of the Court have erred, the error has certainly been on the side of liberty. Having regard to the peculiar effects of extradition, we should, for the reasons given at the commencement of these remarks, have preferred error on the side of strictness, and we should be of opinion that no decision against a fugitive can stand unless he be strictissima juris." That is, if we understand him correctly, ground does exist that the majority of the Court did err in passing over the very loose and questionable proceedings by the magistrates at Brantford, and that in view of the grave consequences alluded to in the former part of the article from which the above extract is taken, as well as the general principles of law, he would have prepared a decision giving the prisoner the benefit not only of a doubt but strictly illegal proceedings, in connection with the Ashburton treaty.—These proceedings we have pointed out before, and expressed our opinion that them in themselves formed sufficient ground to warrant the Judges to order a dismissal of the case. We now reiterate that opinion. The treaty supposes the necessary process for the apprehension of the fugitive to have been taken, and then provides that certified copies of these, produced before the proper authorities, shall be admitted as evidence of the charge of guilt. No proof appeared in the Court that the preliminary proceedings were instituted in Missouri, or that any copies of such proceedings were produced before the Brant magistrates. We have held and still hold that the informality complained of entitles the prisoner to a discharge, and we sincerely hope that the supreme tribunals will see their way clear thus to dispose of it.

Since writing the foregoing, the case has been argued before the Court of Common Pleas. Mr. Freeman was assisted by Mr. M. C. Cameron for the defence, and the Att'y General, on behalf of the Crown, was represented by Messrs Eccles and Harrison, who, though not perhaps chargeable with undue severity, brought under the notice of the Court some fine points of the case. The informality of the proceedings, especially in regard to the Warrant of Committment, was strongly urged by counsel for the prisoner, as entitling him to a discharge. When this point was brought to the notice of Mr. Eccles by Chief Justice Draper, as being urged in favor of the prisoner, Mr. E. replied he "could not venture to say whether the warrant might be amended, or whether the order of re-committal by the Queen's Bench rendered it good." He left his learned friend Mr. Harrison to clear up that difficulty. When Mr. H. came to this important part of the case, he replied, in general terms, that it was not so important for a warrant to be technically precise as an indictment, and although interrogated by Judges Draper and Hagarty as to the pleas urged by the defence, he could not make his views good by reference to the authorities. Had he done so he might have given a new feature to the proceedings. He generously said, however, that he did not wish to press the case unduly against the prisoner. The Court occupied 8 hours in the proceedings, and it is expected that Judgment will be given on Saturday next, the 16th inst. We look forward with intense anxiety for the Judgment, and hope it may result in the acquittal of John Anderson.

☞One of the "intelligent" and "respectable" enumerators of the County of Peterboro, who has betrayed a fondness for colours, honored us with a notice last week through our Town contemporary—not however in the way we desired. We wanted a yea or nay as to whether the article written by us could be fairly interpreted as referring to the County of Peterborough more than to other parts of Upper Canada. As to our being "sold to Brown & Co.," we reply that we are as much at liberty to sell ourselves to Brown & Co. as to John A. McDonald & Co., or anybody else. We are at a loss to know what is meant by "Blue-George." Does he mean "blue-devils"?—we belong to the teetotallers, as "An Enumerator" knows.—The charges of youth and poverty we admit without dispute; we were never taught to regard either as a crime.

A MISTAKE.

We notice a paragraph in the Port Hope Guide of Saturday last, stating that Mr. Short, M. P. P., had been severely frozen on Thursday night last. We are happy to be able, in so far as Mr. Short is concerned, to say that the information is entirely void of foundation. The occurrence on which the report was founded probably arose from the fact of Mr. A. Poe, a clerk in the employ of Mr. Short, having met with an accident of the nature alluded to, but we are happy to say not so severe as is represented in the case of Mr S. His hands were frozen, though not so much as to endanger them, or cause anything more serious than his inability to attend to business for a short time

☞The Annual Report of the Canada West Farmers' Mutual and Stock Insurance Company is before us. It is in every way satisfactory, and must inspire confidence in farmers and proprietors of isolated buildings, in the Company. The table of applications for risks shows the highest number taken by any one agent to have been 427; Jos. R. Walton, agent for this County, is the successful man, and to him a special vote of thanks was passed by the Board of Directors for his diligent labors. Mr. Walton's Office is on the corner of George and Simcoe Streets, Peterborough, where he will be happy to furnish any further information respecting the Company.

The Weather.—Thursday last was probably the mildest day that has been experienced here for many years. We have heard of many instances of freezing, but none of them fatal. A sudden change took place on Saturday, and on Sunday a right thaw commenced, carrying away a good deal of the snow. Coughs, colds, and influenza, are at everybody's door, if not in their heads, and the doctors are busy.

☞We understand that the child of a woman named Owen was apparently poisoned by its mother with an overdose of laudanum administered to it a day or two ago. The Coroner was consulted in the case.

☞Mr. R. Thompson advertises that he, aided by his indispensable partner the Sun, will continue to take premium Ambrotype portraits at his sky-light gallery on the Market square.

☞The population of Toronto, according to the Census Commissioner for that City, is 44,425, an increase of about 14,000 in nine years.

☞A notice appears in the Canada Gazette further proroguing Parliament till the 13th of March, not then to meet for the dispatch of business.

☞We are in receipt of a communication from the Rev. Mr. Douglas, which we cannot in justice publish, as it would only provoke a rejoinder from "A Baptist," and lead to another violent encounter. Our rev'd correspondent will, we hope, see the necessity of shutting the door on any further discussion through our columns.

☞From all accounts it is certain that Sir Edmund Head, the deposed Governor of Canada, is on his way back to our country to "shuffle" our affairs for another year at least.

Town Council.

Monday, Feb. 11, 1861.

The Council met. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Kennedy, McDonald, Ormond, Dickson, Bradfield, Eastland, Maloney, Ryan, Chamberlain, Menzies and Stevenson.

The Mayor stated that in pursuance to a resolution of the Council passed at the last meeting, he had in connection with the R. R. Committee waited upon Mr. Dennistoun, who had furnished him with the report which he would read. The report showed the position of the cases of the Town vs. John Fowler, Messrs. Scott & Hopkins versus the Corporation, and the Solicitor asked instructions as to further proceedings.

A communication from Thos. Walsh asking to be appointed Chief Constable was referred to Committee on Appointments of Office.

A report from the Charity Committee recommending the sum of $4 being paid to Michael Eobes, also that a sum of money be placed in the hands of the Mayor to assist in meeting the demands of Mrs. Lowry, and other indigent persons suffering, was read, received and adopted.

A report from the Finance Committee recommending the payment of certain claims, and recommending that the Mayor and Clerk be instructed to make a note to the extent of $1,000 to pay off the claims mentioned in the Treasurer's report, to be directed to paying the most pressing claims. The report was received and adopted.

A report from the Special committee on appointments to office, recommending Wm. Cumming as Chief Constable for the current year; R. Irvine Inspector of Houses of Public Entertainment; Wm. Arnot, Collector of Rates and Assessments; Wm. Lundy and Thos. Hutchinson, Assessors; and James Edwards, Clerk, was received.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Chamberlain,—That the Clerk be instructed to collect immediately all rents and other claims due to the Corporation.—Carried.

The By-law for the appointment of officers was read a first and second time. The name of John Haggart for Inspector of Public Houses was substituted for that of R. Irvine.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. McDonald,—That the Mayor be requested to ask Walter Shortiss at his earliest convenience with a view of making arrangements for the removal of those from the Bridge crossing the River at the Locks, and that he be authorized to pay one-half of the expense out of any money in the Treasury.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

☞Mr. J. W. Southerton's extensive sawing mill, in Cobourg, was destroyed by fire last week. There was no insurance.

JUDGMENT IN CHANCERY,

BURNHAM VS. CORPORATION OF PETERBOROUGH.

The facts of this case are clear beyond dispute. A sum of £700 was raised upon the note of the Plaintiff at the request of the Mayor, and applied to the use of the Town in discharging a balance due upon its subscription to the Railway, whereby its debt was paid, and it was enabled to recover interest on its stock, which it is doing by means of an action at law. The proceeding was sanctioned by a resolution of the Council. It is true that it was expected at the time that about £1800 would be recovered from Messrs. Whitmarsh and Conger, a balance on the debentures, which however is still unpaid. This circumstance is, I think, immaterial. The charges of embezzlement or misappropriation are clearly rebutted. I cannot imagine what Mr. Sawers means by saying that the debt was an unjust one and which ought not to be paid.

The Corporation owed a debt which it was unable to pay; a third person interposed at its request and pays that debt upon its promise to indemnify him. Can any demand be more just in the abstract than this demand of the Plaintiff.

It would be much to be regretted if any technical difficulty stood in the way of the satisfaction of so just and equitable a claim. But I think none such exists. I cannot doubt that it would be competent for the Corporation to apply any surplus monies it might have not applicable to any particular purpose to the satisfaction of this debt, without resorting to a new loan. But even supposing none such to exist, and that a new loan would be necessary, it would require time to accomplish it, and the demand was urgent. The same remark is applicable to the alleged misappropriation of the £1,500 sterling, with which, however, the Plaintiff is no way connected. Under any of these circumstances it would be highly advantageous to the Corporation that the debt should be paid at once, for it would not subject them to any liability to which they would not otherwise be subject, and it would instantly entitle them to a large sum by way of interest on their stock. I have no doubt that if a third person, under such circumstances, were to pay this debt at the request of the Corporation, or to raise money on his own credit to enable them to pay it, on a promise of re-payment with interest, or on a promise to protect the note, and the contract were performed and the Corporation had the benefit of it, they would be legally liable. This is precisely that case. The plaintiff is, however, substantially, although perhaps not technically, a surety; and entitled to indemnity, has a right, therefore, to the aid of the Court. His right may be rested on another ground. It is an old and well-known head of Equity that although a loan to a married woman is invalid, yet if the money be actually applied in payment for necessaries, unprovided by her husband, the party furnishing the money may apply to this Court to stand in the place of the persons who have supplied the necessaries, and to proceed against the husband in their names.

It cannot be doubted that the Corporation could have been compelled to pay the balance of their subscription; and this money having been applied to that purpose, the plaintiff may stand in the place of the Railway Company.

I think the plaintiff should have a Decree with costs.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—On the eleventh of last month I had occasion to be at Millbrook, where I happened to meet Mr. Roger, of the Chronicle, who induced me to subscribe for his paper. I paid him one dollar for the paper for one year. A month has elapsed and I have not received it. I wrote him a short time ago, and he had not the courtesy to reply to it. Will you be kind enough to inform me through your valuable journal whether the "old lady" has departed this life, or whether the proprietor has left for parts unknown. Do Editors generally treat subscribers in this style?

By inserting the above you will confer a favor.

I remain, yours, &c.,

FROM ASPHODEL.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church their annual Tea Meeting on the 8th inst. It was in advance of anything held here before. The Church was scientifically decorated with evergreens, and mottoes tastefully arranged for the occasion. Notwithstanding the severity of the weather, a large concourse of people attended, and as the ladies of Norwood and its vicinity cannot be outdone on such an occasion, you may imagine that the entertainment was got up in the very first style. At the conclusion of the repast P. M. Grover, Esq., was called to the chair, who addressed the meeting with a short and appropriate speech; the remaining addresses were delivered by the following gentlemen: The Rev. Mr. Shannon, T. Buck, Esq., P. Pearce, Esq., the Rev. Mr. Bowie, the Rev. Mr. Madden, of Rice Lake, and the Rev. Mr. McDowal, each of whom made an edifying and interesting discourse. The assembly was favored with both vocal and instrumental music, which was universally admired.

I remain, dear sir,
Yours truly,
One Present.

CROSSING BRIDGES.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—There are but few people who do not occasionally cross a bridge with a horse, and fewer still who will not feel a little interest in the experience of one who has crossed bridges in the County of Peterborough for the last eight years.

But it is not altogether in the matter-of-fact circumstance of crossing a bridge that I have to address you and your numerous readers, but to certain "contingencies" connected therewith. To arrive at my point quickly I will plainly relate what befel me in crossing a bridge not a hundred miles from the village of Lakefield and if anybody will be benefitted by my experience they are welcome to it.

Happening on business on a neighboring Township it was necessary for me to cross a bridge over the Otonabee river. My horse I drove cannot at any time be driven at a greater speed than 3½ or 4 miles an hour, and as I came near the bridge, only going at a steady jogg of about 3 miles, I thought in all conscience I could not be taken up for reckless or unlawful driving, and so I did not break off the matter.—But not so, Sir, the next day a summons was served on me to appear before one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, "to answer," &c., at a given hour on Saturday following. Now, I am one of the most law-abiding "of Her Majesty's subjects, and so in duty bound I went to the J. P. aforesaid to answer to the charge against me, and found I had been brought up on the information of a man who swore to make a business of watching the bridge and laying information against trespassers, for which he pockets a fee, (one half of the fine), and so I was fined $1, and costs amounting to $2.15 (total $3.15), the hungry bailiff who served the summons charging double mileage). Now, I will exhonerate the magistrate from any blame whatever in the matter as he noted on the information of Mr. Hard-scratch Vulcan and his spy, but there is room I think for a remark or two on the subject. The Act says "No person or persons shall drive across any river bridge at a rate faster than a walk," and the question is at what speed must a horse go to be going faster than a walk. Some horses can walk four miles an hour, and yet I suppose because they are not trotting they do not come into the clutches of the law according to the opinion of the aforesaid Mr. Vulcan, who is stationed there to watch the speed at which every horse crosses the bridge. Now as I said before my horse was not going at over three miles an hour, which compared with most horses was not up to trotting speed, yet for some reason best known to the informant, (no very charitable one you may be sure) I am brought up as a law-breaker, and fined on the strength of his sworn complaint before the Magistrate.—Apart from the law on the subject, which I think you will see is very much in my favor, let me ask is it right, is it just, that advantage should be taken of such quibbles by over-zealous officials to prosecute the honest, industrious, people of the country on sham pretences, merely because they do not look where their horse lifts one foot where its next foot is to fall. I always thought the people was the ruling power here, but what right have we to think so any longer if such men are allowed to annoy people at every step?

There is Reform needed in this department of public business and I hope it will be attended to by abler hands. I hope you will not misunderstand me to mean that people ought to be allowed to drive across a bridge as fast as they please. Not at all. The spirit of the law is that no man shall drive on a bridge so as to injure it or endanger its safety.

Yet ignorant and malicious men will be found to take advantage of the letter of the law and harrass those who have no intention and who do not in *fact official seal, and signature of the weather is despatched to head quarters to be deposited in the archives of the province, and another issued from the sanctum as an effectual ailment to every foolish man who dares to call in question the fertility of the Bobcaygeon Region. Now, Sir, I submit that in publishing statements as correct statistical facts which he knew to be only founded on mere guess-work, and that too by men very incompetent for the task, the editor of the Review was just as much guilty of falsehood as if he had made statements contrary to known facts, and I ask what reliance can be placed on the statements of a man who would knowingly deceive the public by such desperate random assertions.

I will next notice one and all by one statement of another of the Review's correspondents, Mr. John Harvey, of Smith. He says: "The road is perfectly straight, forming the dividing line between the counties of Peterboro' and Victoria." Is it not a lamentable evidence of the depravity of human nature that a man of Mr. Harvey's standing in society should so far forget the principle of self-respect, in his anxiety to sustain a corrupt political job as to make such a deliberate misstatement. The road is not perfectly straight, but very crooked, deviating from the boundary line both right and left in many places, and Mr. Harvey could not possibly travel the road and keep his eyes open without seeing and knowing it.

I have been a second, Mr. Editor, by the Review and its correspondents, of writing as I have done, for political objects. On the contrary I have studiously avoided all allusion to politics, I have tried to give an honest description of the country for the benefit of those who have not seen it, and for so doing I have been assailed by the united Ministerial scribblers of the county in a spirit of vindictive venom which could only be displayed by men in the last stage of desperation, lest their corrupt ends should be brought to light. Is there one man we ten, Sir, in this country who entertains the slightest doubt that the whole scheme of the Bobcaygeon Road Settlement from its commencement to the present time is, and has been a system of jobbery and corruption! or that the editor of the Review and his satellites have sung its praises in the expectation of being well paid for it.

But how, it may be asked, have other men been deceived, men of experience and reliability, have written over their own signatures commending the country have they all been mistaken or have they agreed to misrepresent facts. I answer that the letters which have appeared in the Review over the signatures of men of reputed honesty and experience in praise of the country have mostly, if not all, been written by individuals who are ever ready to uphold corruption in the expectation of a share of the pickings, and that the men who have basely allowed their names to be attached to them have been well paid for it. It is susceptible of proof by the admission of the party himself, that at least one individual who has figured largely before the public at the bottom of letters which he never wrote has been allowed to take the land and hold it without complying with the conditions of settlement until an opportunity offered of disposing of his right to a poor man who was induced, chiefly by his misrepresentation to pay him $100 for one hundred acres, for a right which he did not possess. I make these statements, Mr. Editor, fully aware of their responsibility, and am ready with the proof when called on.

The steamship Anglo-Saxon, Capt. Ballantyne, from Liverpool on the 24th, and Londonderry on the 25th ult., arrived at this port at ten o'clock last evening.—She brings 106 passengers, and about £20,000 in specie, together with a large cargo.

GREAT BRITAIN.

At an influential meeting in Manchester to devise measures to relieve the cotton trade from the anxieties resulting from a dependence on the Southern States, resolutions were passed recommending efforts commensurate with the impending danger, to prevent calamities; approving the steps taken for the formation of a cotton Company, and expressive of a desire that the company recently formed should commence operations without delay. Several American vessels had been registered under the British flag to enable them to take salt to South Carolina and return with cotton without danger of capture.

The Times city article of Thursday evening says, the funds opened brisker, and an advance subsequently occurred.

The Daily News says the total amount of cotton purchased in New York, on English account, during the recent crisis has not exceeded half a million sterling.—In many cases orders sent out could not be executed, the New York market having rapidly risen much beyond the limit fixed.

ITALY.

Official despatches announce that on the morning of the 22nd January the batteries of Gaeta had slackened fire.

It was reported that Garibaldi had sent a message of concord and conciliation to Cavour and had fallen into Turr's opinion that an attack on Venetia was inexpedient. Another version says Garibaldi declines to adjourn the work of deliverance unless the Italian parliament relieves him of his soldiers engagements.

The Post's Paris correspondent says the opinion gains ground that the terms indicated by the friends of Gabaldi will rather give new guarantees to the peace of the world than tend to disturb it.

Sardinian troops were despatched to Abruzzi and Calabria, where revolutionary movements were every where suppressed, and the revolutionary bands have decreased and the deserters.

Garibaldi in a letter to the vigilance committee, dated January 12th, calls the fresh devotions to preserve the necessary means of facilitating to Victor Emmanuel the franchisement of the rest of Italy.

The Committee are urged to penetrate every Italian with the idea that in the spring of this year Italy must have a million patriots under arms.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH RECOGNITION OF A SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY.

Mr. John Mitchel, it appears, is acting as a sort of informal Minister of the Southern Disunionists at Paris. He writes to Mr. Swan, of Tennessee, formerly a business partner of his, that the South is all right so far as Napoleon is concerned, and that she will have his sympathy and support.

From the New York Herald.

The Republicans in Congress, and their new tariff bill, are clearing the way for the speedy recognition of a Southern Confederacy by England and France. The Southern seceded States have the cotton. England and France must have it. The very existence of four or five millions of the English people depends upon it. England and France have their iron, cotton, woollen and silk manufactures to exchange for this raw material of cotton, the very articles which the Cotton States desire in exchange for their great staple. With a Southern free trade confederacy proclaimed on the one hand, and a Northern United protective tariff or tax ranging from twenty to fifty or sixty per cent. on the other hand upon imported silks, cottons, woollens and iron, is it likely that England and France will hesitate in choosing their market? Unquestionable they will recognize the Southern Confederacy as soon as possible, for the sake of the raw material of cotton, and for the free Southern market, which will take their goods in exchange in preference to the hard cash. The Southern secessionists ought, therefore, to feel thankful, as they do, for the aid and comfort promised them in this Morrill Tariff bill.

Attention is drawn by the London papers to the fact that Anderson, the fugitive slave cannot be taken from Canada to England, at present, inasmuch as he cannot be conveyed through American territory, and no other route will be opened before spring.

The prospectus had been issued of an Indian Cotton Company. It is proposed to establish agencies in Guzerat and purchase cotton of the growers direct, and to endeavour to improve the progress of picking and cleaning by machinery.

The Galway Company being unable at present to provide vessels for all the mail services, the Post-master General has issued a notice that the contract is suspended till the 20th of March next, on the understanding that the Company will then be ready to carry the fortnightly service in an efficient manner.

W. & T. LEEMING'S WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Montreal, Feb. 7.

PRODUCE.—Our market has been at a complete stand still during the last few days, and the repetition of snow storms, and the nature of the last English advices, are likely to produce something like a "dead lock."—Flour and Wheat have both declined in Liverpool; and in London, also, there has been a slight falling off, but more particularly in Wheat. In Ashes there is an advancing market. Pork remains inactive.

FLOUR.—No. 1 has been sold at $5.35 to $5 50a. Other grades are nominal; Double Extra, $6 50c to $7; Extra, $5 85c to $6; bag flour, a shade lower, $2.75 to $2.85.

PORK—As last week, with a better feeling, good prices in Spring anticipated.—Packing active.

WHY WILL YOU SUFFER.

The Canadian Pain Destroyer instantly and permanently removes all pain from the system, and is decidedly the best medicine known, for the cure of Rheumatism, Pleurisy, Neuralgia, Tic Doloureux, Toothache, Cholic, Burns, Frost Bites, &c., and is so cheap that all can afford to buy it.

"MONTREAL WITNESS"
FOR 1861.

THE "MONTREAL WITNESS" is non-sectarian in religion, though very decidedly Evangelical in its tone and influence. It is free from party politics, though strongly in favour of truth, justice and freedom. It spares no pains to keep up with the news of the day, and is a reliable commercial record. It also devotes much space to literature suitable for family reading, and altogether is designed to be equally interesting to young and old of both sexes. The Minister, the Merchant, the Farmer, and the family, will, it is hoped, find it alike interesting. Of this paper three editions are published as under:—

The Daily Witness, containing 4 pages, is published every afternoon, and sent by the evening mails, at $4 per annum. The city is supplied by news-venders.

The Montreal Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Wednesday and Saturday mornings, and sent by the early morning mail, at $2 per annum. When sent by carriers in the city, the price is $3.

The Weekly Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Thursday morning, and sent by mail at $1.50c. per annum.

In all the above editions the price is uniform—payable in advance—and the paper stops when the subscription expires unless renewed.

The postage is payable by the subscriber, quarterly in advance, at his own post-office, at the rate of half-a-cent each number.

For all subscribers out of Canada, half-a-cent a number is to be remitted with and in addition to the subscription price.

All subscriptions and communications to be addressed to

BY GEORGE MUSGO, OF STOBARDE, C. W.

PART VI.

Let us now pass on to the subject which cannot stand next in importance, that of Farm Buildings, commencing with the farm residence.

There is perhaps no department of their profession in which Canadian farmers are so much in want of improvement as in the construction of farm houses, and there is no subject of more importance, for it is one which has a material influence on the future habits of the farmer's family.

When we consider that the farmer's home is the place where are, or should be, centered all his sympathies, his joys, and his hopes, where his hours of retirement from the busy world are to be spent; where his children are to grow up and form their tastes and habits; where their characters are to be matured and developed, it will be readily admitted that in proportion as that home is attractive or repulsive will its associations exercise a refining or a contrary influence on the family. It cannot be denied that farmers as a class are far too indifferent to rendering their homes pleasant and attractive. With too many the all-absorbing subject of interest seems to be the prospects of crops and prices. How few comparatively endeavor to cultivate in their children that refined taste which can discover in the rugged hills and picturesque valleys of the country beauties not to be found in the crowded and tumultuous city. That development of character that can feel an intense pleasure in looking at a honeysuckle and rose-bush, or, in pocketing the price of a load of wheat. And how very few are alive to the powerful influences which the early associations of home and childhood exercise on the future characters of their children.

It may seem strange that the construction of houses has any connection with the education of a family, but so it is. If we look at the kinds of houses in which many farmers spend their lives it is not surprising that so many of their sons abandon the calling of their fathers as soon as they obtain the control of their own actions.

The general description of the better kind of farm houses of the present day is that of a square or slightly oblong box with one or two rows of small windows and a narrow door at front or side facing the public road. At the rear or opposite side and other box of the same shape, but of smaller dimensions is attached, commonly called a kitchen. The main body of the building is divided into apartments more or less elaborately furnished. The wing, or kitchen, is generally furnished in the plainest manner, containing but one room with a rough board floor and unplastered walls. In this last apartment the farmer and his family, and perhaps several hired men, spend their time while not at out-door labor. Not only is it appropriated to the purpose of a living room and a dining room, but it is a place of all work for the female members of the family, and in it is prepared the food for all the biped denizens of the establishment, and not unfrequently a portion of the quadruped also. Moreover it is frequently converted into a shop for the repair and manufacture of farm implements. What are called the dining-room, parlor, &c., are seldom entered by the members of the family; for days together the doors are unopened. It is only in entertaining company that they are ever used. Indeed as far as regards the comfort of the family the money spent in its erection is thrown away. In the outside things are no better; the house often stands on a bare, bleak, exposed situation, without even a tree to shelter it from the winter winds and the summer sun. It is not even enclosed with a fence, except perhaps a small square patch before the front door, into which nobody ever enters, while the bark or kitchen door through which the inmates have egress and ingress opens on a formidable collection of old barrels, leach tubs, cord-wood, slop-puddles, and a "variety of other articles too numerous to mention."

I appeal to every candid observer if this is not a correct picture of a large number of the farm-houses of Canada at the present day, the occupants of which seem to have no other idea of a house than that of a place to eat, drink, and sleep in. Is it to be wondered at that young men reared in such a home should look back on their youth as a hard, dreary waste, and form a distaste for farm life, or that their cotemporaries of the city should look down on them as beings of an inferior class. Farmers may depend upon it that if they wish to rise to a more elevated position in the scale of social existence they must cultivate those tastes and habits which will render their occupation agreeable to refined minds, and there is no circumstance which exercises so powerful an influence on the future character of their children as the every-day associations of home and childhood.

I do not wish to be understood to say that the farmer's house should be an expensive one; on the contrary I contend that it is not necessary that it should be expensive in order to be an attractive residence; good taste may be displayed in the erection and adornment of the log cottage as well as in the two-story brick mansion.

☞A gigantic mule, 20 hands high, (6 feet 3 inches) which has never been harnessed, is at a menagerie in Philadelphia. He was bred by James B. Clay one of the late Henry Clay.

☞Curran, when opposed by Lord Clare, said that he reminded him of a chimney sweep who had raised himself by dark and dirty ways, and then called aloud to the neighborhood to witness his dirty elevation.

$100 A YEAR

AND UPWARDS SAVED to the Farmers, by the Aldus Mowry's

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 15 to 25 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by cast-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired at a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

PRICE $60.

All orders directed to "M. Mowry, Ashburnham, Peterborough," will be promptly attended to.

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by depositions from the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which genders in the blood, depresses the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently, vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all our people are scrofulous; their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from the system we must renovate the blood by an alterative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in the most effectual remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this every where prevailing and fatal malady. It is combined from the most active remedials that have been discovered for the expungation of this foul disorder from the blood, and the rescue of the system from its destructive consequences. Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as ERUPTIVE and SKIN DISEASES, ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, ROSE, or ERYSIPELAS, PIMPLES, PUSTULES, BLOTCHES, BLAINS and BOILS, TUMORS, TETTER and SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, RINGWORM, RHEUMATISM, SYPHILITIC and MERCURIAL DISEASES, DROPSY, DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, and, indeed, ALL COMPLAINTS ARISING FROM VITIATED OR IMPURE BLOOD. The popular belief in "impurity of the blood" is founded in truth, for scrofula is a degeneration of the blood. The particular purpose and virtue of this Sarsaparilla is to purify and regenerate this vital fluid, without which sound health is impossible in contaminated constitutions.

Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so compound that diseases within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or capacity restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inflation of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other blood complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every body has, within his own circle of friends, some one who has been relieved by it. Indeed, when once fairly tested, its superiority over every other medicine of its class becomes manifest, and those who have used it are not willing to take any other. Hence, wherever it is known, it has established the character of possessing power over pulmonic diseases to which no longer hesitate to confide in its virtues for the distressing and dangerous affections of the throat, lungs, and breast. Its cures are publicly known in almost every town in the country, and there are few persons who have not been cured themselves, or have not had some friend restored to health by it, who was given up by other physicians as incurable. Even when it fails to cure, it relieves the patient, and for this reason no family should be without it.

Health and its Pleasures,

or

DISEASE WITH ITS AGONIES:

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

NERVOUS DISORDERS.

What is more fearful than the breaking down of the nervous system? To be excitable or nervous in a small degree is most distressing, for where can a remedy be found? There is one:—drink but little wine, beer, or spirits, or far better none; take no coffee,—weak tea being preferable; get all the fresh air you can; take three or four Pills every night; eat plenty of solids, avoid the use of slops; and if these golden rules are followed you will be happy in mind and strong in body, and forget you have any nerves.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

If there is one thing more than another for which these Pills are so famous it is their purifying properties, especially their power of cleansing the blood from all impurities, and removing dangerous and suspended secretions. Universally adopted as the one grand remedy for female complaints, they never fail, never weaken the system, and always bring about what is required.

SICK HEADACHES AND WANT OF APPETITE.

These feelings which so sadden us, most frequently arise from annoyances or trouble, from obstructed perspiration, or from eating and drinking what is unfit for us, thus disordering the liver and stomach. These organs must be regulated if you wish to be well. The Pills if taken according to the printed instructions, will quickly restore a healthy action to both liver and stomach, whence follow as a natural consequence, a good appetite and a clear head. In the East and West Indies scarcely any other medicine is ever used for these disorders.

DISORDERS OF THE KIDNEYS.

In all diseases affecting these organs, whether they secrete too much or too little water; or whether they be affected with stone or gravel, or with aches or pains settled in the loins over the regions of the kidneys, these Pills should be taken according to the printed directions, and the Ointment should be well rubbed into the small of the back at bed time. This treatment will give almost immediate relief when all other means have failed.

FOR STOMACHS OUT OF ORDER.

No medicine will so effectually improve the tone of the stomach as these Pills; they remove all acidity, occasioned either by intemperance or improper diet. They reach the liver and reduce it to a healthy action; they are wonderfully efficacious in cases of spasms,—in fact they never fail in curing all disorders of the liver and Stomach.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy in the world for the following diseases.

Ague,	Inflammation,
Asthma,	Jaundice,
Billious Complaints,	Liver Complaints,
Blotches on the Skin,	Lumbago,

THE RIGHTS OF WOMAN.

The rights of woman, what are they?
The right to labor, love, and pray;
The right to weep with those that weep,
The right to wake when others sleep.

The right to dry the falling tear;
The right to quell the rising fear;
The right to smooth the brow of care,
And whisper comfort in despair.

The right to watch the parting breath,
To soothe and cheer the bed of death;
The rights when earthly hopes all fail
To point to that within the veil.

The right the wanderer to reclaim,
And win the lost from paths of shame;
The right to comfort and to bless
The widow and the fatherless.

The right the little ones to guide
In a pure faith to him who died;
With earnest love and gentle praise
To bless and cheer their youthful days.

The right the intellect to train,
And guide the soul to noble aim;
Teach it to reach above earth's toys,
And wing its flight for heavenly joys.

The right to live for those we love,
The right to die that love to prove;
The right to brighten earthly homes
With pleasant smiles and gentle tones.

Are these thy rights? Then use them well;
Thy silent influence none can tell.
If these are thine, why ask for more,
Thou hast enough to answer for.

Are these thy rights? Then murmur not
Thou woman's mission to thy lot;
Improve the talents God has given;
Life's duty done, thy rest is Heaven.

AN ADVENTURE IN IRELAND.

BY A SOLDIER.

When our regiment was quartered in Ireland, some of my company were ordered to a neighboring town within five hours' march of where we lay. My duty was to escort them there, and return by the evening train from a station a few miles from where my comrades were to be left. We reached our destination in due time, and arrangements were made for my departure; but, as the evening set in the weather became very inclement. I halted as long as possible in hope that the storm would abate. This however, was not the result; the storm grew more severe, and my orders being nearly imperative, I had to set forth in the midst of the blast. Making headway against the weather took up more time than I had calculated on, and I reached the station only to learn that the last train had passed. I spent some little time in hesitation, as I had only one course before me if my quarters had to be reached that night, so, drenched and weary, I retracted my steps. When midnight began to close in and the weather grow thick, I, for the first time, thought that if darkness was once on, and an inn should invite shelter, I would under the circumstances, avail myself of it and remain till daybreak. I had not a very accurate knowledge of the district, yet I did not doubt that I was on the right road the length I had gone; still a slight hesitation arose, and I resolved to make enquiry the first opportunity. I continued to go on a considerable distance without sight or sound of human existence, but I was fortunate enough to fall in with an old woman driving a car. When she recovered her surprise at seeing me, I was fully convinced by her that I had gone astray, and was further from an inn than it would be agreeable to travel. It appeared that there was no house near but her own—where there was no accommodations—and another one where I might put up, but a man having died there that morning, and the widow being in the house alone, it was thought she might object to the presence of a stranger. I resolved to try at any rate, and got such directions for reaching the place as was seemingly intelligible, when my informant and I parted company.

The house was not so easily found as I had hoped, but I stumbled on it after nearly losing temper, and advanced considerably elevated in spirits when its outlines attracted my bewildered sight. At first I knocked somewhat gently, not to startle the inmates, but no notice being taken I repeated it much louder. I began to explain my situation, but before I had spoken a dozen words I was told I could not get admittance, as there was a dead man in the house. I remonstrated and urged the necessity of my case, offering to sit in any corner, and give no trouble or annoyance. Still I was told, in tones a key or two louder, that I might as well depart at once.—This irritated me greatly, and I angrily shouted that unless she let me in quietly I would force the door and enter in spite of her. There must have been a sense of determined resolution in my speech, for the woman, within muttered considerably after my manner, arose paying and grumbling followed, when the door was opened and a candle lit. The woman eyed me very suspiciously, and appeared either alarmed or annoyed, but I urged her to be composed and give herself no uneasiness on my account. The house was miserably furnished, the only objects which arrested my attention in the desolate abode being the figure in the dead drops, which lay on a chair before the fire, and a table by the fire and old with provisions. The latter drew to the table without ceremony, but my lonely hostess would scarcely partake, but at length she was prevailed upon to do so, and I requested her to follow her to the adjoining apartment. I would have preferred staying where I was, but I considered it reasonable that she should have the choice of where I was to be located, as I felt sure where she led the way. In the room there was nothing but dirty appearance covered with cobwebs, and in the farthest corner a bed. I was cold I could not sleep there, but left me alone for the night. But she left me alone but the window in a pane of which I saw a candle flickering, which I rather feared was not intelligible. First of all I took the precaution of ascertaining that the door was fastened, and then I placed my chair against it, so that my feet opposite the door, so that it could not be opened without awakening me. In this position I fell into a slight slumber, but a movement in the other apartment made me start and listen—through the crevices in the old door, I could only indistinctly hear what was said; but when I saw this I dare say I helped to convince her I was fast asleep, by certain unusual sounds, I introduced at fat rvals. She soon desisted and stepped cautiously back, and my inquisitiveness being aroused, I passed through the seams. She wrapped a shawl around her, set a lighted candle on the table, and left the house, locking the door carefully behind her.

I confess to getting uneasy at this, and a feeling of awe at the lonesomeness of my situation crept through my frame. Not knowing what might follow, I loaded my musket, as I thought it better to be able to defend myself if that should be necessitated. I waited anxiously for a long time, but heard no sign of her return, nor any sound save the fast dull clicks of an old clock, and the splashing of the rain outside. At length I was seized with a desire to inspect the premises, and after a slight hesitation I ventured into the other end. It was the most dreary position in which I had ever found myself, the solemn stillness inspiring a feeling as much akin to terror as the greatest fear of danger could ever instil within me; but my survey was almost immediately interrupted by a rustling movement in the direction where the dead man lay. I started at this, and moved my piece into a better position, and I think I raised it mechanically to my shoulder, when I saw the sheet moving on the lifeless body, as I had thought it. My hair, which was generally so short as to be always on end, cannot exactly be said to have stood erect at this, but I perspired at every pore and felt somewhat unnerved, although I am no slave to superstitious fears. At this stage, a voice from the sheets addressed me in a low tone, saying slowly and distinctly,—"Sodger, sodger, sure an' ye won't shoot me!" This partly convinced me that he was still an animate being, but I was by no means at ease, and could only respond by a searching, yet tremulous stare. "Sowl! and I'm living as ye are," he said, turning round; "but if ye'll plase to take the pins out of them binders, and cut the cords round my toes afore that woman returns, I'll tell you the howl about it, an' shrink me own health wid ye to the bargain." There was now no reason for being concerned so much, although my curiosity ran ahead while the conjecture followed hard to overtake it. I complied with his wish, and he civilly asked me to remove the other end, after I had covered him up nearly as he was before, and headed him a "spring," as he termed a ponderous stalk that looked decidedly dangerous, even when standing quietly in a corner. I was somewhat excited when I returned and sat down again within.

In an hour or so, silence was broken by the grating of the lock, and my hostess entered, accompanied by an ruffianly a character as I had ever beheld. She pointed to the door I was looking through, and muttered something to her companion, who growled a response and brandished a stick he had brought with him. Both then listened earnestly for what seemed a long time, but I was soon convinced that I was not an object of much care on their part. They sat down and began to drink from a bottle the woman had taken from a cupboard. By-and by the new comer put his arm round her neck and began to whisper words I could not hear, but their proceedings were speedily interrupted by the man in the sheets springing to his feet with sundry execrations, and dealing most unmerciful blows with the "spring" upon the heads of each. At the first sign of life in the prostrate figure, the woman began to shriek, but this soon ceased as she and her companion were knocked down. I felt that it was not my business to interfere, so I looked on in silence. The next proceedings of our hero was to open the door and throw them both outside with the greatest unconcern. After this he carefully locked the door, came forward to where I was, and asked me to sit with him by the fire which had now kindled. I gladly complied, and he related the reason that had led to the scene I had just witnessed. The woman, it appears, was his wife, and he had found occasion to suspect that she intended to rob him, and run off with the stranger—He likewise discovered that she had poison in her possession, which he managed to replace by a harmless ingredient, and he subsequently had the gratification to see it mixed up for himself. This led him to feign death, but he witnessed surprise that she had been deceived so thoroughly. Her anxiety to get rid of him, however, had added the deception, and she had not investigated very closely whether her drug had done its work thoroughly. He was progressively stated his future purpose; turned over some old gear in a corner, and produced a purse of money with which he intended to pay his passage to America, and leave for the country by the break of day. We sat talking all night, and grew so friendly that he offered to share the whole with me; which I, of course, declined. In the morning he locked out and first of all the house, that the two outcasts were nowhere to be seen. With a hatchet he smashed in the face of the old clock, which terminated its deliberate ticking, and threw it on the fire; and every other thing in the house that appeared worth destroying, he broke. Tying up some of his own apparel in a napkin, he motioned me to follow on the unfinished dwelling, locked the door, and threw the key on the dung-hill, with a wicked look on his face after that he showed no further concern about what had occurred. At the station I allowed him to pay part of my fare towards it, which he did willingly; and when I left him he bade me carry to that place, that I believe I never should have him to see more. But there parting salute attracted the general attention, and I returned his grasp of kindness for one minute more the last look was exchanged, and I saw him no more. Thus ended my adventure, which I have never since had occasion to regret, although I have frequently had occasion to think of it.

In a miserable cottage at the bottom of a hill, two children were hovering over a smouldering fire. A tempest raged without, a fearful tempest, against which man and beast were alike powerless.

A poor old lover, much poorer than these shivering children, though he had heaps of money at home, drew his ragged cloak about him as he crouched down at the threshold of the miserable door. He dared not enter for fear they would ask pay from him for shelter, and he could not move for the storm.

"I am hungry, Nettie."

"So am I; I have tried for mouthfuls, but can't find any."

"What an awful storm!"

"Yes; the old tree has blown down. I guess God took care that it didn't fall on the house. See, it would certainly have killed us."

"If he could do that, could He not send us some bread?"

"I guess so; let's pray 'Our Father,' and when we come to that part, stop till we get some bread?"

So they began, and the miser, crouching and shivering, listened. And when they paused, expecting in their childish faith to see some miraculous manifestation, a human feeling stole into his heart—some angel came to soften it. He had bought a loaf at the village, thinking it would last him a great many days; but the silence of the two little children spoke louder to him than the voice of many waters. He opened the door softly threw in the loaf, and listened to the wild, eager cry of delight that came from the half-famished little ones.

"It dropped right from heaven, didn't it?" questioned the younger.

"Yes; I mean to love god for giving us bread because we asked Him."

"We'll ask Him every day, won't we? Why, I never thought God was so good, did you?"

"Yes I always thought so, but I never quite knew it before."

"Let's ask him to give father work to do all the time, and we need never be hungry again. He'll do it, I'm sure."

The storm passed; the miser went home. A little flower had sprung up in his heart; it was no longer barren. In a few weeks he died, but not before he had given the cottage, which was his to the poor laboring man. And the little children ever felt a sweet and solemn emotion when, in their maimal devotion, they came to those words.

"Give us this day our daily bread."

WASHING IN MOLTEN METAL.

"I would only repeat this experiment, which I am not fond of, for your sake," M. Boligny said. "I confess that, though I am morally sure of the result, I always feel an emotion which I can not dispel."

"If that be the case," I replied, "suppose we go?" I will believe your word."

"No, no; I am bound to show you this curious phenomenon. But, by the way," the learned doctor added, "let me see your hands." He took them in his. "Hang it," he went on, "they are very dry for our experiment."

"You think so?"

"Certainly."

"Then it is dangerous?"

"It might be so."

"In that case we will go," I said, turning to the door.

"That would be a pity," my companion replied, holding me back; "stay, dip your hands in this bucket of water, dry them well, and then they will be sufficiently damp."

I must mention that, to secure the success of this marvelous experiment, no other condition is requisite than to have the hand slightly damp. I had scarce finished wiping my hands when the furnace was opened, and a jet of molten metal, about the thickness of my arm, burst forth. Sparks flew in every direction, as if it were a fire-work performance.

"Wait a few minutes," M. Boligny said "till the metal is clearless, for it would be dangerous to try our experiment at this moment."

Five minutes later the stream of liquid fire left off bubbling and emitting scoria; it became indeed, so limpid and brilliant that it scorched our eyes at a few yards off. All at once my companion walked up to the furnace and calmly began to wash his hands in the metal, as if it had been lukewarm water. I make no pretense to bravery. I confess, at the moment, my heart beat as if it would burst, and yet, when M. Boligny ended his strange ablution, I walked forward in my turn with a determination that proved a certain strength of will. I imitated my professor's movements; and, to my joy, I took a handful of the metal and threw it high in the air, and it fell back in a fire-shower on the ground.—Memoirs of Robert Houdin.

HONESTY SINGULARLY REWARDED.

Rumour has mentioned us with the following very unusual piece of news for the pages of jubilation:—Not many years ago Hector's Book of a large hotel, within a few miles of the Admiralty, was received the news of a find—all England gentlemen—appropriated the news of an early winter—and left but little trace of its presence. Being an early riser, he the other day left his couch shortly after—to the utmost—and on the morning air, and unwittingly dropped into the [illegible] Residence that is at a distance from the head hotels he discovered his loss, he hastily returned his steps, and on entering the house, inquired of the chamber maid if she had found anything. She answered in the negative, and he then proceeded to his room, and on entering it, found that the [illegible] had been there before him, and had taken away the [illegible] and left the room in order. He then proceeded to the office, and inquired of the landlord if anything had been found. The landlord answered in the negative, and he then described the [illegible] and left the house. The landlord then informed him that he would not forget him, and then retired. Disappointed and hoping but little hope that the pleasure would be fulfilled, the domestic soon communicated what had transpired to nearly all her fellow-servants; while the gentleman in another direction was devising how the most satisfactorily to all concerned he could reward the (pretty, of course) chambermaid. A few minutes sufficed for the deliberation; and while the finder of the purse was in the act of commenting rather harshly on the absence of prompt generosity in its owner, the ringing of a bell summoned her to an interview with the veritable gentleman himself. Doubtless with the rapidity of thought her mind exposed the composition of her wardrobe, and fancy added some long coveted articles of dress through the bounty of the stranger; but, to her astonishment, he offered her his hand and fortune, which she accepted; and on Thursday last obtained, as the reward of her honesty, a husband.—Dover Chronicle.

THE PROTECTION ENGLAND IS BOUND TO AFFORD TO HER COLONIES.

A despatch from the C. C. Lucas, who was at the time acting as Colonial Secretary for the Duke of Newcastle, to Governor Gore Browne, of Nova Scotia, is published. It is dated July 26, 1860, and is in reply to a demand for a reinforcement of the small body of troops at the colony. The Governor requested three companies of infantry and one brigade of artillery that "in the present position of affairs, and with the demand the troops which exists, or may be expected in other quarters," Sir George states that it was impossible to comply with the demand. Measures would, however, be taken to dispatch the 54th regiment at once for the relief of the 66th, which would be allowed to remain in the colony in case, on the arrival of the 16th, the immediate danger should not have passed over. The right hon. baronet then discusses the amount of protection which the inhabitants of a British colony are entitled to, and the circumstances under which it ought to be rendered. He says:—"England cannot undertake the defence, against a nation of warlike savages, of a number of scattered farms or villages, selected not with any view to such defence, but the profitable pursuit of peaceful industry, and subject to the risks which naturally attend the occupation of land in the midst of an uncivilized population. Nor can her Majesty's Government undertake to provide such a force as will secure the colonies against prospective difficulties. Immediate and imminent dangers must be met, as they arise. But the policy which requires the continual presence of a large force carries in most cases its condemnation on its face. It is no doubt necessary to punish aggression, to defend the centres of the population, to maintain a hold upon the keys of the country. But, beyond this, the amount of assistance given must depend on the demands which the military and naval forces of the country are subjected elsewhere, and on the urgency of the case, as shown not merely by demands for assistance, but by the disposition of the colonists to adopt their share of the necessary expenses; to incur for the defence of their neighbors the dangers and inconveniences of perpetual service, and to place in the hands of the home government the power of controlling the treatment of those whom they are called upon to subdue. And I cannot refrain from observing that neither your despatches nor Mr. Richmond's memorandum indicate any definite intention on the part of the colonists to contribute to the expense of the troops whom they demand; that the volunteering appears to be confined to the particular localities threatened; and that Mr. Richmond, while calling on the home government to adopt the expenses of the war, does not even hint at the propriety of investing it with any larger powers than those they at present possess for dealing with the native question out of which these expenses arise. I may add that a bill introduced into Parliament to provide an effectual machinery for the exercise by the Crown of the powers conferred on it by the Constitution Act is threatened with a determined opposition by a gentleman professing to represent the feelings of the colonists. I allude to these circumstances not, of course, as rebuking the house government from the duty of supporting the colony against a pressing danger, but because they must materially affect the disposition of the British Government and people to undertake that indefinite expenditure of blood and treasure to which Mr. Richmonds invites them."

A FRENCH VIEW OF THE FRENCH OCCUPATION OF ROME.

The withdrawal of the French army from Rome is an event of considerable importance, as it implies the fulfilment of Cavour's prophecy that Rome shall be the capital of United Italy. The Paris Siecle contains an article on the subject of French protection of the Pope, from which we make the following extracts:

"The promotion which we have given to Francis II., by preventing all attack on on Gaeta by sea, has resulted in disturbing men's minds, throwing doubt on the intentions of France, encouraging resistance, and causing insurrection. In the presence of these disorders the government has calculated the extent of the evils of which it was the involuntary cause, and has taken the wise part of leaving the Italians to settle their own internal affairs. The protection we accord to the temporal power of Popery has consequences most mischievous. We are positively intervening at Rome; we are maintaining against the wish of the people that justly detested power of the cardinals; we are depriving Italy of its centre of action and unity—of its natural capital; we are raising an obstacle to a work which we ourselves commenced, for which we have shed rivers of generous blood. We are at Rome in contradiction to ourselves. Our soldiers are there doing the work of Cardinal Antonelli and the congregations—in short, of Austria. In this what the French Government wished, and still wishes? Certainly not.

"It wished to give a pledge of devotion and respect to the Holy See; it has done all that was honestly possible to preserve that power; it has spared neither sage counsel nor kind remonstrance. All has been useless. The service rendered by France to the government of the cardinals is only equalled by the meanness ingratitude of the latter. For twelve years we have sustained, aroad in hand, this decrepit temporary monarchy; for twelve years my blood supported all the exactions of the public order; and France is more attached at this day by the councillors of the Papacy than it was at any period of its history!

"It is time to put an end to such a false and dangerous position. Since France, on the [illegible] the [illegible] of revolutions [illegible], let the Holy See commence her reforms sooner. Since Cardinal Antonelli so boldly asserts that the people of the Roman States are [illegible] let him [illegible] we may withdraw our troops without fear of the consequences. Let us but do our duty. What is it? We have promised not to intervene in Italy; we have declared that we would oppose all intervention. It is in obedience to the promise that our flag has entered Gaeta. The same duty is fulfilled on as in the case of Rome; the same line of conduct is clearly traced out for us. France has behaved towards Rome about 1859 as the most respectful and obedient son should behave to his mother. But France is now called on to fulfil an earlier and a higher duty. Who, to mention private affairs, gives the diversity to the present situation. What does the general welfare require? That Italy should be at peace. On what conditions will she be at peace? On condition that the elements of division and discord be removed, so soldiers their Italians on the one hand, Mazzinists on the other, may cease to be alternately their only. Was the Italian movement with which we were sympathize Francis II. or Cavour we were protecting Francis II. or Garibaldi and, without knowing it, fostering Mazzinian conspiracies and revolts? Most certainly not. If this question obscured at first, as we shall [illegible] as long as the Sovereign Pontiff, instead of [illegible] the [illegible] of the Italian nation, as long as we despise Italy of its natural capital [illegible] Mazzinianism, social policy, good sense, counsel us, then, not to prolong our intervention at Rome. The withdrawal of our troops would probably be the signal for the departure of the government of the cardinals. [illegible] were for it. It ought to have made itself loved; why has it made itself hated? But religion, what will become of her if the Pope is deprived of his temporal power? Oh, be quiet easy; religion lived in power and honor for ten centuries without royalty, without crown, army or gendarmes; she will not only survive, she will be more respected and more loved than ever.

"The greatest embarrassment of the present situation will disappear on the day when this duty shall be accomplished, and our troops shall embark at Civita Vecchia for France. France will then re-enter on her full freedom of action, and on her true policy; she will inspire no more unjust suspicions; she will no longer be exposed to covert attacks, because she will be self-consistent. We trust the French government will, without delay, give public opinion the satisfaction it so ardently desires, and the peace of Europe an essential guaranty, by firmly establishing the unity of Italy around its centre and capital, Rome."

DISCOVERY OF A GANG OF BURGLARS IN HAMILTON.

From the Hamilton Times.

It will be fresh in the recollection of our citizens, that shortly after the Prince of Wales' visit to Hamilton, Mr. James F. Kidner's store was broken into and silk to to the value of $2,000 stolen! About two months after, Mr Roy's store was entered from the roof, and plundered of silks to the amount of about $2,500! Every exertion was made to recover the property, but no trace whatever could be found of the robbers. A few weeks ago, a private person had his suspicions aroused by a man occupying a two-story brick house on John-st. He communicated the fact to Mr. Kidner, who consulted with Mr. Roy, and the result was that a strict watch has been set privately on the house, night and day, for three weeks. It was then discovered that a regular organized night traffic was being carried on by the men in the house. When the night trains arrived from Detroit and New York, sigh were seen with boxes and parcels, to enter, stay a short time, and then depart. After which, the lights in the house would be put out, and all would be quiet. Last week, Mr. Kidner sent certain information and instructions to a friend in New York, and the result was, Detective King arrived here by the mid-day train yesterday. His brought important information, and letters that enslaved the minds of all in the fact that they were on the trail of a most notorious villain, and the next thing was to get him safe in their clutches.—After some private deliberation as to the best course of action, Mr. Kidner waited on Capt. Armstrong, on the afternoon of yesterday, and obtained a search warrant against S. Josephson, the occupier of the two-story house on John-street, who is, we understand, a leading man among the Jews of this city, if not their spiritual guide.

Armed with this search-warrant, and backed by the presence of Doctective King Mr. Kidner next proceeded to concert his plans with our city police for searching the suspected premises. Accordingly about 7 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning, some half dozen or more were met on John-st., awaiting the arrival of one, whose services they had secured [illegible] entrance into the suspected house. The party comprised Mr. Kidner, Detective King, Chief Carruthers, and others. While waiting on the street, a messenger arrived in haste, requesting a policeman to come quickly to Watkins & Murchison's store.—This news only served to encourage the detectives, in the hope that they were on the right track, persons having been seen to enter the house during the night, and an immediate entree was resolved on. Having gained admission by the front door, Mr Kidner and one of his party proceeded to the bed-room occupied by Josephson. He was in bed, but seemed to have a realising knowledge of the awkwardness of his position, which he could not readily overcome, and which was rather increased by a quantity of goods in the room, which looked as if they had just left some mercer's drawer or shelf. An ample supply of vests, and any quantity of pieces of rich dress silk lay around the room—silent but ugly evidence of a nocturnal trade in dry goods, at ruinous prices for the rightful owners. Leaving Detective King to make the acquaintance of the head of the house, Mr. Kidner and Chief Carruthers proceeded up stairs, to explore. Here they found another janker in bed, in a room well stored with boxes of cigars, dry goods, &c. After a little surprise, he politely asked his new friends to withdraw, but they preferred to see him up and about. He then got up, and Detective King came up stairs—in recognition an old New York acquaintance for whom he had long been in search. It may readily be imagined that the Detective was pleased that the night's adventure had resulted thus far quite successfully. In another room, were a man and his wife, named Skinner, who appeared that they were merely lodgers in the house.

To arrest the whole party was the next thing to be done, and so Mr. Watkins himself came of the silks unhappily, there was no occasion for delivery on that point. Josephson, Skinner, Israel Solomon, and Mrs. Skinner were accordingly taken to the police office, together with an immense quantity of goods, some of which, however, have been identified, except by Mr. Watkins. Skinner said he was thankful could not be removed.

A man named Clover who also attended. He is employed on the Great Western, in shunting, engineer on the night freight, and was suspected of occasionally aiding the gang in consequence of his frequent visits to the house. A search of Clover's house, however, was not made, but only on the discovery of such a notice as he undoubtedly concealed for—the preliminary examination was appointed for two o'clock.

THE EXAMINATION AT THE POLICE COURT

Before G. H. Augustus, Police Magistrate; Alderman Hopkins, Esq., Chairman, Magill, and Foster. T. D. Ryckman appeared for the prosecution.

At half-past two o'clock the attendance at the Assembly rooms were brought up for examination, on being conducted with the [illegible] Josephson, Israel Solomon, Israel Hickman, and Chas. Skinner. The three women called out—

S. G. Watkins, of the firm of Watkins & Murchison, Yonge-street. He stated that thirty cases were [illegible] opened [illegible] and other persons (Chief Carruthers) produced up stairs, to explore. Here they found another janker in bed, in a room well stored with boxes of cigars, dry goods, &c. After a little surprise, he politely asked his new friends to withdraw, but they preferred to see him up and about. He then got up, and Detective King came up stairs—in recognition an old New York acquaintance for whom he had long been in search. It may readily be imagined that the Detective was pleased that the night's adventure had resulted thus far quite successfully. In another room, were a man and his wife, named Skinner, who appeared that they were merely lodgers in the house.

To arrest the whole party was the next thing to be done, and so Mr. Watkins himself came of the silks unhappily, there was no occasion for delivery on that point. Josephson, Skinner, Israel Hickman

THE PRUSSIAN NOBLES TO THEIR KING.

The following are the principal passages of the address drawn up by the Committee of the Prussian Chamber of Nobles in reply to the speech from the Throne:—

"We call to mind the expectation—that subsist now nor ever could there be any question of breaking with the past; that the welfare of the Crown and of the country ought to repose on vigorous and conservative bases; and that it was necessary, above all things, to beware of acting on that false state maxim—that governments should constantly develop themselves. Penetrated with the conviction that in a state founded on right, the safety of that right forms the first condition, we hail with joy, full of confidence, a king who, on ascending the throne of his fathers, has confirmed their words, by declaring that his hand would protect the rights and property of all classes of his people. We may hope that, by God's help, the personal intervention of your Majesty with the sovereigns of some great states, and with the princes of the Germanic Confederation, has prevented serious complications. We, however, bear in mind that preparations for war are the best guaranty for peace, and we admit with heartfelt gratitude the active solicitude which your Majesty, enlightened by long experience, has devoted with wise foresight to the increase of the defensive forces of the country. But if rude combats be necessary to prepare the ground for right, founded on Divine order, in which alone the tree of liberty can flourish and prosper in a durable manner, Prussia, one of its head and best members, will meet the struggle without hesitation, and with the firm confidence that her brave army will not want the assistance which has never failed to a nation resolved, with God's help, to defend its homes, its rights and its honor."

THE END OF GARIBALDI'S ENGLISH LEGION.

THEIR RETURN HOME.

The European Times of January 28th says:—

"Mr. Leador Praed gives an account of the way in which the last detachment in Garibaldi's English legion was sent home. It was intended to send them to England by steamer, but this idea was abandoned and they were despatched overland, very indifferently provided for the journey. 'All the men spoke well of their treatment through the French territory. The railway officials and all the agents with whom they came in contact, paid the kindest attentions to the helplessness of their language and the stout voracity of their stomachs; and at the various refreshment stages it was frequently said Oh, give them double rations, they are English. Arrived in London, they found that the Garibaldi Fund was exhausted.

"The destitution of some men was painful—in some cases honorable, in other instances. Some men went to Genoa to be paid rather than hang about Naples after being discharged. At Genoa passes were given them to go overland, but the railway agents, probably in lack of suitable instructions, did not recognize the orders, the men paid their way with their last penny, bringing the dishonored passes with them in proof. Several men had lost knapsacks, blankets and swords, by leaving them in charge of some one, while they aided on board a disabled comrade. Others were left behind through generous delays of the same nature, and had to pay, or beg, or borrow, their way home."

AMERICAN SHIPS UNDER THE BRITISH FLAG.

The London Daily News of Jan. 25, says:—"At Liverpool, within the last few days, several American vessels have been registered under the British flag, in order to enable them to carry salt to South Carolina and return with cotton without fear of capture."

To this the Detroit Advertiser says:—"A paragraph like this from a foreign newspaper, is enough to make an American hang his head in shame and self-abasement.—That our ship-masters should be compelled to strike their own National colors, and assume the British flag, in order to ensure protection in an American port, in a depth of humiliation which even the most contemptible doughface in the land ought to quail under. The stars and stripes which have been the theme of so much self-glorification, and to which Americans in every portion of the globe have been accustomed to look with pride and self-assurance, to be driven from the mast head of American ships under the emergencies of domestic treason, and their places supplied by the cross of Great Britain which was itself supplanted by them more than eighty years ago! And to this degradation has the Union been subjected by the same Democratic party which is now trying to regain the power from which three weeks hence it will be driven.

THE POPULATION OF MONTREAL.

The Commissioners have not yet been able, we believe, to complete their work, so as to furnish any authentic figures concerning the population of Montreal, but if we are not misinformed, sufficient information has been collected to leave it beyond doubt that the population of the city is somewhat over 90,000. The census of 1851 showed a population of 57,715; but it was known to have been very defective and doubtless the true numbers were a little over rather than under 60,000. The increase in the 10 years has been therefore as nearly as possible 50 per cent. In 1831 the population was set down at 30,000. It has therefore trebled itself in thirty years. The increase in the 20 years ending in 1851 was 30,000. The increase in the last 10 years has been the same. Among the cities built on the line of water communication formed by the St. Lawrence and its great tributary lakes, Montreal ranks first after Chicago, Buffalo showing a population of 84,000 by the recent census and Chicago 110,000. But Chicago takes in within its limits a very liberal allowance of suburbs, while Montreal in cut sharply off by her toll gates in the middle of long streets of houses. Taking in the factories at St. Gabriel Locks, the Tanneries village, the rows of villas leading up to Cote St. Luc, and the villages of St. Jean Baptiste and Hochelaga the population of Montreal would fall very little if anything short of 100,000; nay it would very possibly exceed that number. This increase is most satisfactory; for though we cannot boast of the wonderful strides of our sister city on Lake Michigan, nor brag like London the loss of doubling ourselves in the ten years, or like Guelph of an increase of 140 per cent, yet an increase of 50 per cent per decade is not one with which the citizens of Montreal need be dissatisfied.—Quebec Gazette.

FROM KANSAS.

Atchison, Feb. 12.

A messenger from Hunter country, distant about 200 miles from here, arrived last night with heartrending tales of the suffering for want of food and clothing in the extreme south-western part of that State. He reports the winter as being the most severe yet experienced in Southern Kansas. Snow has fallen to the depth of 18 inches on the level—the cold intense, and stock of all description dying off with fearful rapidity.

Most of the inhabitants are reduced to Buffalo meat alone, and not a train able to make the journey through the snow.

He walked 26 miles before finding a track, after leaving the settlement, and 70 before reaching Europia, where he took the stage and came in.

The mail on the route laid out has carried through for fifty three weeks owing to the great depth of the snow and cold.—Horses and cattle were dying all along the route. Many lands were abandoned in the middle of the province, the teams having died or giving out, or the drivers had frozen their limbs and laid up such suffering in the nearest settlement to save their lives. Gun cases will have both his legs—another both his hands.

The Osage Indians had attacked a party of the settlers who were hunting wolves for their skins and killed two—one of whom they burned and beheaded. The other they scalped.

The messenger makes the most urgent appeals for teams and ample supplies to be immediately forwarded, which will be done without delay, as the committee are determined as long as their means hold out that none shall die for lack of food.

Urgent appeals are made from the extreme North western settlements for aid to be sent them, as they report that their teams are in such a condition that it is impossible for them to make the trip.

A man sent in from the Blue lost one of his horses from weakness on the road, and the other was unable to go. Teams loaded with supplies were immediately dispatched by the committee as the men reported many families with only a scanty supply of Buffalo meat left. God only knows what the end will be if the reports brought in from outside settlements are true, unless relief can speedily reach them. It is terrible to witness the distressing cases of suffering which are constantly brought before us.

FEARFUL FRESHET IN THE HUDSON RIVER.

Albany, Feb. 13, 1861.

The ice commenced moving in the river about quarter past eight this morning, opposite the city. The break up was sudden, attended by a noise like thunder.

Within twenty minutes after the start, the water rose four feet, and has been rising ever since, until at present the rise is about seven to eight feet (at half-past ten o'clock.)

The destruction of property is large, the ice being blocked below the city. The damage in the basins is roughly estimated at $60,000. Boats, propellers, and other craft, were driven by the force of the ice. A heavy tow boat and other boats were driven up by the force of the ice. A heavy tow boat and other boats were driven through the first story of the frame freight depot of the N. Y. Central Railroad, the whole front being knocked out, and the building, which is very long and two stories high, is very much damaged. Two machine shops, owned by Mr. Pumelon, were destroyed in a similar manner.

At the foot of Hamilton street a propeller was driven through the wall of the Dudley House, which stands on the corner of the Quay. Damage to produce and provisions in store is comparatively small, as the docks men had a strong force of hands out during the night, in anticipation of the danger.

The water in some places is up to Broadway. In Maiden Lane the flood already reaches Stanwix Hall. Cellars and basements as high as Green street are filling.—At present there is but little prospect of the abatement of the flood. State street and Columbia street bridges have both been broken to pieces and partially swept away.

Among the ruins of bridges, propellers, tow boats, barges, and other craft lie smashed together in a heap, it is impossible at present to give any adequate idea of the damage done, but the destruction has been more sudden and rapid than in 1849, though the water has not yet reached nearly so high.

Later, p. m.—The water has continued to rise slowly to-day, until the entire business portion east of Broadway is inundated, and business wholly suspended.

The water in several streets running parallel with the river in the northern section of the city is several feet high, and many families have been driven to a hasty retreat. In a number of instances families have been obliged at last to remove by means of boats from the second story windows.

South Broadway, from near the Atlas and Argus office, down to the steamboat landing, is navigable by boats. The Mansion, late Commercial Hotel, is entirely surrounded by water.

When the ice went out two men had a narrow escape. They saw the destruction of the ice when in the middle of the river, and ran for Hamilton street bridge. On reaching there they were overtaken by the flood and swept off. They got on a large cake of ice formed from a skating park on that part of the river, and were carried down but ran against the south ferry ship, and were rescued by means of ropes.

No description can convey a correct idea of the extent of the disaster. Steamboats, propellers, ferry-boats, vessels and canal boats, were jammed together in a promiscuous heap. At the ruin of the bridges all were more or less injured. Basements and cellars of all buildings, for some distance west of Broadway, are filld with water.

There is at present no signs of a fall.

DESTRUCTION OF SHEEP.

On Monday morning last, shortly before daybreak, Mr. Peter Fife, of Peelbank, was aroused from his chambers by the unusual barking of his dog. Getting up to ascertain the cause, his attention was drawn to his sheep-house, situated only a short distance from the dwelling. On entering this he found two of his valuable ewes lying dead, besides a number of lambs. On examining the sheep it was found that their throats had been cut, although the incision was so small as to be scarcely discernable, unless closely examined. Unable to account for so peculiar a destruction of his sheep, he repaired to Mr. Kenneth MacKenzie's, who gave it as his opinion that it was the work of a Lynx. After daylight they examined and found the tracks of two Lynx, leading to MacKenzie's swamp. Having ascertained that the animals had not left the swamp, they gave notice to their neighbours, and in a short time, although the rain was coming down in torrents, and the snow very deep and difficult to travel through, about twenty young men were assembled, with dogs and guns, and were soon on the track. They had not proceeded far in the swamp when up started one of the Lynxes; several shots were fired at him, and he "squatted," wounded, in the snow, so that he could not be found, the dogs not caring to venture very near them. The other took a tree, when a couple of shots brought him down.

Although severely wounded, he beat off all the dogs and was disposed of afterwards with pitchforks. The other could not be found, although traces of blood were discovered where he had been shot. The captured one was raised on the point of a pole and carried to Mr. Ingram's Inn, on Brock Road, where refreshments were partook of after the morning's exertions. The captured animal measured three feet five inches in length, and two feet in height.—The Township Council happening that day to be in session, resolved to offer a bounty for all such animals captured in the township, if no bounty is given by the county.

There have been fifteen sheep killed in the neighborhood during the winter and fall by these pests of animals, besides a greater number of turkeys, geese and other fowls. Mr. John McKenzie, 7th con., and nine valuable ewes destroyed by them last fall, and Mr. Hugh Reid, 5th con., above. It is high time to adopt some means to exterminate these destructive beasts, as it is believed they are getting very numerous throughout the country.

W. & T. LEMMING'S WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Montreal, Feb. 14.

We have little to note since our last Report; business generally has been extremely inactive, and through the non-arrival of the Canadian Steamer, (now 16 days out) we have nothing to record respecting foreign markets. Shippers of Wheat and Flour are holding off, and one of the largest of them has confined his purchases for the past week to retail lots. We are still embarrassed by the unavoidable detentions on Grand Trunk Railway.

WHEAT.—U. C. Spring—No positive change, as there are no transactions, but tendency downwards. Nominal prices $1.16 to $1.17 on the spot; and $1.20 to $1.22; for May delivery. Lower prices have been offered.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY GEORGE REDDY, OF OTONABEE, C. W.

PART VII.

In commencing to build I would suggest that the most pleasing and picturesque spot on the farm, compatible with convenience should be chosen. Let the kind of house which will be required for the use of the family be considered, and the cost of construction be estimated with the means available for that purpose. And should the means not be sufficient for the purpose, reduce the cost by abandoning those items in the plan which could be dispensed with at the least sacrifice of comfort; but by all means rather live in the old house for a year or two longer than erect a new one which for want of money must be constructed in a cheap and unsubstantial manner. The different kinds of material—brick, wood or stone—are used according as they are most easily obtained, or the taste of the proprietor. There is no doubt that stone or brick is not only much more comfortable than wood, but also much more durable. On the other hand wood is in most part of Canada still considerably cheaper. It will be for the individual about to build to take all these circumstances into consideration, and decide on which kind suits his means and fancy.

In arranging the plan of a dwelling house two important points should be kept in view namely, economy of room and convenience of arrangement. Many hundreds of miles of walking may be saved to the members of the family in the aggregate annually by the distance between two principal points being lessened a few feet. Another desirable object is to arrange the rooms in such a manner as to avoid as far as possible the necessity of passing through one room to get to another. This cannot always be entirely avoided, but a little consideration and thought in the arrangement of the plan will obviate it in a great degree.

In collecting the material of whatever kind it is proposed to build, it should be borne in mind, that the best of its kind is always the cheapest, because it not only makes a more substantial and permanent building, but requires less labour in its construction. The best workmen also will be found more satisfactory in the end than poor hands even if they should charge a higher rate of wages. It is now a common custom to let buildings by contract; the contractor sometimes finding material, and sometimes only performing the work. I think on the whole the better way is to hire by the day. Not that the work may not be as well done by contract, but for the reason that alteration in the plan will sometimes occur during erection, and if the work is let by contract there is more difficulty in having them carried out than if the mechanics were hired by the day.—However, alterations in a plan often the erection is commenced, are not desirable and for this reason the plan should be well digested beforehand. A great error is often committed in building by excavating too deep for the foundation. I never could understand the advantage of digging into the ground for a habitation while there is plenty of room upwards. The excavation for the cellar is often so deep that the floor of the first story is nearly level with the surface. There is no need for digging more than 3 feet deep, and with the earth which is taken therefrom the surface immediately around the walls should be grouted so that the house when finished will appear to stand on a slight elevation. About four feet of the cellar will thus be under ground, and there should be 3 feet overhead to give space for light and ventilation.

It would be impossible in the limits of a treatise of this kind to give plans and specifications for building by. I would merely remark that while all flimsy gingerbreadism should be avoided, yet both the interior and exterior should have a neat and graceful appearance, and to accomplish this a certain amount of ornamental finishing is absolutely necessary. Of course all woodwork should be painted if the house is a wooden structure, the outside will require several coats of paint to protect it from the weather, the best or outside coat should be of a lively, cheerful colour, and if stone, the window and door frames should be the same; nothing looks more gloomy to my taste than a house with small windows and narrow doors with the casings and sash painted black, it gives it a prison like appearance which no beauty on the still or surrounding objects can dispel.

But, in order to give a pleasing effect to a country residence it is necessary that the grounds in the immediate vicinity should be tastefully laid out and ornamented, and neglect in this is the more inexcusable in this country, because of its easy accomplishment. It needs only to be enclosed with a substantial fence and planted with a few trees, of which our forests afford an abundant supply of the finest kinds. There should be a judicious mixture of evergreens and deciduous to give variety, not in straight rows, or geometric form, as was formerly the practice, but in irregular groups, to resemble nature as much as possible; but as this is a subject which would require a book of itself, I will not pursue it further, but conclude by saying that in the whole arrangement of house and grounds, the aim should be to combine comfort and convenience with a look of cheerful domestic happiness.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE SCOURGE OF DEATH.—We must die alone. To the very verge of the stream our friends may accompany us; they may bend over us, they may cling to us there, but that one long wave from the sea of eternity washes up to the lips, severs us from the shore tied we go forth alone! Is that untried and utter solitude, then, what can there be for us but the patration of that assurance—"I am not alone because the Father is with me!"

THE most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for the relief of all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat, &c.

These Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organ is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS
these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most hoarse occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional Vocalists.

ALL TIPSY BUT ME.

Out of the tavern I've just stepped to-night;
Street! you are caught in a very sad plight;
Right heard and left hand are all out of place,
Street, you are drunk; 'tis a very clear case.

Moon, 'tis a very queer figure you cut;
One eye is staring while t'other is shut;
Tipsy, I see, and you are greatly to blame;
Old as you are, 'tis a horrible shame.

Then the street lamps—what a scandalous sight
—None of them soberly standing upright;
Rocking and staggering,—why on my word,
Each of the lamps is as drunk as a lord:

All is confusion; now, isn't it odd?
Nothing is sober that I see abroad;
Save it were such who this new to remain,
Better go into the tavern again.

Glasgow, Scotland.

[The following letter from a correspondent of the Montreal Pilot is a true pen picture of the great Scottish Metropolis and its environs. Those who have lived in "old St. Mungo" will recognize in the following a faithful sketch, and to all who have ever heard the name of Glasgow it will be found an interesting letter;—the descriptions of the Cathedral and Old Necropolis are very good.]

Glasgow, Jan. 23, 1861.

When I closed my first and last letter, some two months since, I promised that, if it was in my power, and time permitted, you would hear from me again, and I now fulfil that promise. I left off in my "Atlantic Trip," when I found myself snugly quartered at Lyne's Waterloo Hotel, Liverpool. After resting there for a day or two, and obtaining possession of my land legs once more, I started for this the chief city of old Scotland. Two routes to get thither presented themselves, one by rail, the other by sea, and I chose the former. It was a cold, but clear and beautiful day, in the latter portion of the month of November, when, taking a seat in an apartment in the Caledonia Railway, I bade adieu to Liverpool, with its miles of magnificent docks, and its forest of shipping. It is needless for me to describe an English railway carriage—every one knows how they are made.—However well they do for a ride of an hour or two—for a ride of eight or ten hours I pronounce them an intolerable nuisance.—To sit in one position during eight hours is, in reality, doing penance; and I think the sooner the American system of railway carriages (which allow room to stretch one's extremities when weary) is adopted, the better. The railway passes through a rich and fertile country, with some grand snatches of mountain scenery to diversify it. It seemed strange, as we passed through the mountainous portions, to see the fields at the foot of the hills clothed in green, with cattle quietly grazing, while their summit was covered with a mantle of snow. Even at this late season the hedges seemed green, and I could not help a sigh escaping me when I thought that in my own beloved Canada this hawthorn hedge will not flourish. It forms such a beautiful means of dividing fields. It would, indeed, be an agreeable substitute for our rail fences. As far as the town of Carlisle, my fellow passenger was an old gentleman of about seventy, who, about thirty years ago, resided quite a length of time in Montreal, and the time passed most agreeably. He made numerous enquiries regarding persons whose names were familiar to me from hearsay—many of them having passed to their rest. From Carlisle, till within a few miles of Glasgow, I had the apartment to myself. As we came near the great city, I was astonished to see the sky all around me have the appearance as if a fearful conflagration was raging somewhere. Putting my face to the window, I saw away in the distance what I thought was a house on fire; when looking out of the other side of the carriage, I saw another, and then another; and then in a few minutes, at the rate of forty miles an hour, we rushed over a small town, which to me, in my utter ignorance, seemed to be on fire in every quarter. At the rapid rate at which we were going I could not distinguish anything, and having no one near me to whom I could ask for an explanation, my mind, in trying to obtain one, became perfectly bewildered; and it was not until I reached my hotel in Glasgow that I learned that what seemed to me to be houses on fire, were the celebrated iron furnaces of Scotland. No one can form any idea of the grand sight which these furnaces present at night. They must be seen to be appreciated. At night the outskirts of Glasgow seem to be on fire, and to me it seemed very strange at first. It was then o'clock, and a Saturday night, when I arrived in Glasgow, and even at that hour the bustle was very great in every street through which I passed on my way to the hotel. I put up at one much frequented by Canadians, Graham's London House, Maxwell Street, and found it exceedingly comfortable. Still, I must in truth confess, that, taking the English in toto, and the Americans the same, I much prefer the oysters on which the latter is conducted. No register of arrivals, so far as I could see, is kept, and if you wish to find out any one who is staying there, often they cannot tell you—not knowing (very often) the names of their guests. I will give you an example. A few days since, I met on the street a gentleman from Montreal. He told me he was staying at a certain hotel. Next day, wishing to dine him on some hot-pot, I called there, and was strongly astonished that he was not stopping with them. I assured them that he was, but to no purpose. Coolly out of the door I met the gentleman coming in, and returning with him, pointed out the mistake made. The expression—they did not know his name. This was at the largest and most fashionable hotel in Glasgow. But to return to my stay up to the present station on the Midday Pilot of the Atlantic, and with reference to entering upon the first day of George Square, in conjunction with Dr. Connell, of Woodstock, New Brunswick, one of the Hon. Chief Commissioners, and Postmaster General of New Brunswick, now all concerning them is lost in the obliterations depths of time. Two or three ancient stone coffins were pointed out, the covers of which have been in part removed, and on looking in I found that they contained—a little dust. Such is mortality. The crypt has received additional interest from the magic touch of that master hand, which has rendered classic so many of the localities in Scotland. The author of Waverley has made it the scene of a striking incident in one of his novels—"Rob Roy," and has bestowed upon it no small portion of those descriptive powers, which he beyond all his contemporaries, seemed to be gifted. No one who has read "Rob Roy" —and who of taste has not?—but will recall to his recollection that it was to this very crypt that Andrew Fairservice, led Francis Osbaldistone, that they might listen to "the real saveur of doctrine" rather than to the "caulrife hewark—carnal mortality; as dead and as fusionless as roe leaves at Yule," which according to Andrew, was going on in the upper part of the building. Having ascended from the Crypt, and before taking leave of the Cathedral, perhaps the most interesting modern addition which will attract the eye, will be a beautiful white marble monument to the officers and men of the 78th Highlanders, who fell in action during the Crimean campaign. As one gazes at this tribute to those noble men, he cannot but think of their noble courage, and how bravely they upheld their country's honor.—Above the monument is placed their tattered colors of this fine regiment; little of them are left, but they indeed speak of "many a well-fought day."

Around the Cathedral is the ancient burying-ground, where, for upwards of a thousand years, have been deposited the worthies of Glasgow. The very earth is evidently raised higher from the heaps of dead laid to rest there. In one part the ground is quite paved with grave stones (this is the old style of monuments), bearing various inscriptions, in another the grassy heaps lie close together. How appalling is the contrast between the bustle and activity all around, and of this death and repose. None intrude here save some visitor like myself, pondering over the ancient tombstones, and reading the simple memorials or pious ejaculations engraven thereon. At the North side of the Cathedral is a tablet, erected in more peaceful times, to the memory of the Covenanters, who, in 1684, were hanged in Glasgow. Their bodies are buried under it. The inscription concludes with these homely lines,—

"These nine, with others in this yard,
Whose heads and bodies were not spar'd;
Their testimonies fixed to bury,
Cans'd beat the drums then in great fury;
They'll know at resurrection day
To murder saints was no sweet play."

Not far from this tablet is pointed out the spot where, in 1538, two men were burnt at the stake for having espoused the doctrines of the Reformation, then beginning to spread.

In August, 1849, Her Majesty the Queen visited the Cathedral, and was deeply impressed with its beauty and antiquity, and a day or two after my visit, the beautiful Empress "Eugenie" spent some time within its walls. As one looks at this venerable and magnificent building, he cannot help wishing that others more beautiful in the land were not spared to grace the land. I have thus given a brief sketch of the Cathedral, and I trust that it may be interesting to your readers. I had hoped to have embraced everything connected with Glasgow in one letter, but I find that to be impossible.

The middle verse in the Bible is Psalm cxviii. 8.

The spontaneous gifts of Heaven are of high value, but the strength of perseverance is the prize.

If some man's bodies were put straighter than their minds they would be crooked enough to make hoops of, even now.

He who can suppress a moment's anger may prevent many days' sorrow.

A man with an intemperate habit of talking, is generally one who is full of himself, and has no room for anything else; he is like a vessel filled to the brim, which will hold no more than it contains.

ARISTOCRATIC AIRS AND TITLES, on MODERN DANDYISM.

The adjective standing at the head of this article, according to McCrea of Glasgow, in his Dictionary of Derivatives, signifies the best; and hence it is applied to those who are supposed to belong to the higher ranks in society. In its primitive meaning it signifies the best of anything; but your readers who have lived 20 or 30 years in the world will have long ago perceived that the term in our day refers chiefly to the sons of wealth. I have read of a servant girl who married a baronet, and, therefore, was a lady of title, and after his death was united to a merchant, but did not want her dignity, because he was poor. Sensible people laugh at titles if they are not accompanied by something more substantial than the possession of wealth. The possession of wealth, however, is, in the estimation of many, the one thing needful. "A poor Lord or Squire," is a kind of spadescript in this world, whom he can throw, and at whom every one simpers. This poor do, not like to call him brother, because he has the misfortune to have a title, and the rich reptant cannot own him because he has no money. We have known the cards of the nobility left at the house of a rich "cotton Lord," in Scotland, whose father was a poor plebian, and yet this corseted "mortal" drove past the doors of men of his own order, whose acres had diminished, and whose purse was low. And do we not find the same spirit manifested by editors and contributors of not a few obscure Canadian newspapers, remarkable only for scurrility and the advocacy of every kind of political dishonesty. These facts demonstrate how unhealthy is the state of society, and what a deal of work there is for moral reformers to do before we shall have the minds of men so manly and noble that they will deem the mere possession of titles and wealth things that will not elevate the truly good, and useless to those who are foolish, wicked and depraved. You may have all the intelligence of a Newton, and the piety and benevolence of an angel, you may have "all faith and knowledge," yet, in the estimation of many in Canada West, if you have not money, you are nothing. Hence, in many circles among us, we have as much caste as in India. It is amazing how soon some persons, originally of very mean parents, after they have obtained the possession of a few hundred dollars, or a new bonnet with a few ribbons on, begin to play the Lord and Lady over those better educated and more respectably reared, but who are not so rich or so smartly clad as themselves. But the best of the joke is, that many of these folks who are so monstrously haughty because rich by mean and dishonest tricks, or are wearing robes that are not paid for. The tailor and shoemaker swell with pride when they look on the humble ditcher. The man who deals in silks and cottons, and he whose profits are derived from the sales of teas, &c., are higher in their own estimation than those "vulgar" mechanics, farmers, &c., who have not like them succeeded in making a fortune. Did you ever in your time, Mr. Editor, light upon one of those should be gentlemen with which, in our day, every town and city in Canada is crowded.—Observe how, in peacock fashion, he struts about, and with what a dignified air he looks down upon his more humble fellow-mortal. Poor fellow! his neck and chin are so stiff that he moves body and head together at the same time. He is so near to a machine, and stoops and turns with such aristocratic difficulty, that one might imagine him made of cast iron. This aristocratic spirit is a desolating thing, and thousands of the children of men have been ruined by it. As soon as it enters the soul of its victim, then farewell to humanity, to reason, to justice, to benevolence and brotherhood, to religion, aye, even to nature and natural affections. What Addison, in the Spectator, wrote concerning the foibles of British society, in his day, is as truly applicable to many in our's in Canada West. I refer to the story of the "Mole Hill;" it is truly sarcastic, but not the less true. Its perusal will be beneficial to all, but more especially to those bipeds who pride themselves on the possession of wealth, when everything more solid and elevating is wanting.

N. MONAGHAN INTELLECTUAL IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY.

The inaugral lecture of the season, under the auspices of this Society, was delivered in the Town Hall, Monaghan, on Wednesday evening, the 16th ult., by the Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook; subject, "Old age; source of its uncomfortable and defective." The chair was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Elsie, and a large and respectable assembly was present, who seemed to appreciate the excellent address.

For upwards of an hour and a quarter the lecturer held the attention of his audience. He commenced by saying that if he were to say many others of the reputation he would not have been there that evening. As numerous engagements up to the time of his starting, prevented him giving the subject that study which it required. But before he concluded, the large assembly present were evidently quite satisfied that although the lecturer might not have spent as long time as he considered necessary in preparation, he came well prepared.

This was the third consecutive time that the esteemed and learned gentleman gave the opening address of the Association, and although, you have kindly opened your columns for such communications, I regret very much their passing duties have prevented me from giving an outline of an address which I feel must certainly would be read with pleasure by those interested in the progress of the Association. I trust of the gentleman, that in point of ability, correctness of perception of nature, elevated sentiments, clearness and perspicuity of language, and ease and force of delivery, it fully equalled, if not excelled, any of his former lectures.

On Wednesday, the 23rd ult., the Rev. M. Clemenli, of Peterborough, delivered a lecture at the Hall, under the auspices of the Society, subject "Patriotism." He commenced by stating that although unaccustomed to appear before the public in his ministerial capacity, this was the first time he attempted to deliver a public lecture. The history of all nations, from the earliest ages down to the present time, was interrogated in order to show the benefits which mankind have derived from Patriotism.—Amongst the heroines named, Joan of Arc, the maid of Saragossa, and Florence Nightingale, stood prominent. The lecture was very instructive, but it would be vain to attempt to give a fair impression of it in brief; I would wish to take it in extenso. Indeed, I am of the opinion that we have no little cause for congratulating ourselves, not only for securing a lecture from the reverend gentleman, but particularly in bringing him forth to occupy a new position, the duties of which he seems so well qualified to discharge.

It had been announced that the platform would be open, on Wednesday evening, the 30th, to the members of the Association, and, in addition, that Mr. John Kennedy, of Peterboro', would deliver a short address on the benefits of Music. The evening was very stormy, which prevented the Hall from being as well filled as usual. Mr. Kennedy's address was stripped of those technicalities which frequently confuse the uninitiated; and assisted by the Masters Kennedy, established the truth of his proposition by performing some well selected pieces in good style, which were well received by the audience. Some of the members of the Society spoke during the evening, when they adverted to the value of time, the changes which it produces, especially upon ourselves; the benefits of engaging in the study of history, geography, geology, astronomy, philosophy, and physiology. A most agreeable evening was brought to a conclusion by singing the National Anthem.

TAKING HIM AT HIS WORD.

The people of Niagara have an interesting little dispute about church matters just now. Dr. McMurry is the rector of St. Mark's (Episcopal) Church, in that town, several of the pew-holders of which have neglected to pay their pew-rent for the past year; and the worthy doctor, although well able to live without the money, has been extremely sharp in his "dunning." All remonstrances, however, failed to bring the defaulters to the mark, and as a last resort, the worthy man sent for the Rural Dean, the Rev. Dr. Fuller, of Thorold, to exhort him to bring the grumblers or moneyless ones "to law." Dr. F. preached a tremendous sermon against defaulting church members, telling the congregation that there was one of two ways of settling the matter—either for those to pay up, or close the church, and allow the glebe to pay off the debt, which will take two or three years.—The congregation were a little surprised at the tenor of the reverend gentleman's remarks, and on Monday following a vestry meeting was called when it was voted unanimously to close the church, and allow the glebe to do what the rector required, viz: pay up the indebtedness of this church, or they did not, they said, believe in keeping a "machine" which would not pay running expenses.—St. Catherine's Journal.

THE CUP OF COLD WATER.

A young Englishwoman was sent to France to be educated in a Huguenot school in Paris. A few evenings before the first massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day, she and some of her young companions were taking a walk in some part of the city where there were sentinels placed on the walls. When a soldier is on guard, he must not leave his post until he is relieved, that is, until another soldier comes to take his place. One of the soldiers, as the ladies passed him, besought them to have the charity to bring him a little water, adding that he was very ill, and that it would be as much as his life was worth, to go and fetch it himself. The ladies walked on, much offended at the man for presuming to speak to them, all but the Englishwoman, whose compassion was moved, and who, leaving her party, procured some water and brought it to the soldier. He begged her to tell him her name and place of abode, and this she did. When she rejoined her companions, some blamed and others ridiculed her, but they soon had reason to impress what they had not been equally compassionate, for the grateful soldier cautioned us the night of the massacre, to save the young Englishwoman, while all the other inhabitants of the house she dwelt in were killed.

BURGLARS DEFEATED BY A PARROT.

For centuries gems have held a place in the halls of fame, an ornament of the coronets rendered by some of their family to ancient Rome. The parrots have contemporaneous publicity in the same line of notoriety. The pets of Mr. John Hutchinson, of Camden, N. J., has done service of the most unique, especially as a protector. On Saturday night there burglars broke into the house, and, as they came just on the point of securing the plate, they heard a loud voice exclaim, "pass up, boys, I see you! John, bring my revolver!" They made one rush for the window, and in their precipitation got into the yard of a neighbour who had a large dog. A great noise over the roofs, and the police combating, the of the three were soon captured.

One day some time ago, about thirty years ago, the Rector of a country parish in Scotland, visiting the Province of Dumfries, found the house of a poor, respected man, who had been confined to his bed for some time, and was then dying. Perceiving that the man was in a state of mind which required the consolations of religion, he began to converse with him on the subject, and found that he was entirely ignorant of the way of salvation. He therefore explained to him the plan of redemption, and the method of obtaining the pardon of sin, and the favour of God. The dying man listened with attention, and when the minister had finished, he said, "Sir, I am very much obliged to you for your kindness, and for the information you have given me; I am sorry that I have lived so long in ignorance, and that I have not known these things before; but I am now old, and I am going to die, and I hope that God will have mercy upon me, for the sake of Jesus Christ, whom you have told me of."

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

London, Tuesday, Feb. 5.

My Lords and Gentlemen:—It is with great satisfaction that I again meet you in Parliament, and have recourse to your assistance and advice. My relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly and satisfactory, and I trust that the continuation of the powers of Europe will prevent any interruption of the general peace.

Events of great importance are taking place in Italy. Believing that the Italians ought to be left to settle their own affairs, I have not thought it right to exercise any active interference in those matters. Papers on the subject will be laid before you.

I announced to you at the close of the session of Parliament that the atrocities which had been committed in Syria had induced me to concert with the Emperor of Austria, the Emperor of the French, the Prince Regent of Prussia, and the Emperor of Russia in entering into an engagement with the Sultan, by which temporary assistance was to be afforded to the Sultan for the purpose of establishing peace in that part of his dominions.

That assistance has been afforded by a body of French troops, who have been sent to Syria as representing the allied powers. The Sultan has also placed a considerable artillery force in Syria under the direction of an able officer, and I trust that tranquility will be re-established in that province and that the object of the convention will have been fully attained. I announced to you also at the close of the last session of Parliament that the Pacific overtures which my envoy to China had made to the Imperial government at Pekin having led to a satisfactory result, my naval and military forces and those of my ally, the Emperor of France, were to advance toward the Northern provinces of China for the purpose of supporting the just demands of the allied powers, and that the Earl of Elgin had been sent to China as special ambassador to treat with the Chinese government.

I am glad to inform you that the operations of the allied forces have been attended with complete success.

After the capture of the forts at the mouth of the Peiho and several engagements with the Chinese army, the allied forces became masters of the imperial city of Pekin, and the Earl of Elgin and Baron Gros the ambassador of the French, were enabled to obtain an honorable and satisfactory settlement of all the matters in dispute. Throughout the operations and negociations which followed them, the commanders and ambassadors of the allied powers acted with most friendly concert. Papers on this subject will be laid before you.

The state of my Indian territories is progressively improving, and I trust that their financial condition will gradually partake of the general amendment.

An insurrection of a portion of the natives of New Zealand has interrupted the peace of that colony, but I hope that the measures which have been taken will speedily suppress these disturbances and enable my government to concert such arrangements as may prevent their recurrence.

Serious differences have arisen within the states of the North American Union. It is impossible for me to look without great concern upon any events which can affect the happiness and welfare of a people nearly allied to my subjects by recent and closely connected with them by the most intimate and friendly relations. My heartfelt wish is that these differences may be susceptible of satisfactory adjustment. The interest which I take in the well-being of the people of the United States cannot but be increased by the kind and cordial reception given by them to the Prince of Wales during his recent visit to the continent of America.

I am glad to take this opportunity of expressing my warm appreciation of their loyalty and attachment to my person and those manifested by my Canadian and other North American subjects on the occasion of the residence of the Prince of Wales among them.

I have concluded with the Emperor of the French a convention supplementary to the treaty of commerce of the 23rd of Jan 1860, and in furtherance of the object of that treaty I have also concluded with the King of Sardinia a convention for the reciprocal protection of copyright. These conventions will be laid before you.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I have directed the estimates for the ensuing year to be laid before you, and they have been framed with a due regard to economy of several branches of the public service.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

Measures will be placed before you for the consolidation of important parts of the criminal law—for the improvement of the law of bankruptcy and insolvency; for removing more easy the transfer of lands; for establishing a uniform system of rating in England and Wales, and for the general purposes of public usefulness.

I confidently commit the great care of my empire to your wisdom and care, and fervently pray that the blessings of the Almighty may attend your councils and guide your deliberations to the attainment of the object of my constant solicitude—the welfare and happiness of my people.

THE EMPEROR'S SPEECH.

Paris, Feb. 4.

The French Chambers were opened at 12 o'clock by the Emperor, who delivered the following speech:—

Messieurs les Senateurs, Messieurs les Deputes—The speech at the opening of each session restores, in a few words, past acts and future projects. Until to-day this communication, restricted by its nature, did not place my government in sufficiently intimate relations with the great bodies of the state, and these latter were deprived of the faculty of fortifying the government by their public adhesion, or of enlightening it by their counsels. I have decided that every year a general exposition of the situation of the empire shall be placed before you, and that the most important dispositions of diplomacy shall be laid on your tables. You will, also, be able in an address, to manifest your sentiments on the facts which are being accomplished; no longer, as formerly, but a simple paraphrase of the speech from the throne—but a free and sincere expression of your opinions. This modification more amply initiates the country into its own affairs, causes it to become acquainted with those who govern it as well as with those who sit in the Chambers, and, notwithstanding its importance, in no way affects the constitution.

You are aware that formerly the suffrage was restricted. The Chamber of Deputies had, it is true, more extended prerogatives; but the great number of public functionaries by whom it was constituted afforded the government a direct action upon its nominations. The Chamber of Peers also voted the laws; but the majority were liable at every moment to be destroyed by the right of the government to add new members. Besides, the laws were not always discussed sufficiently by their real value, but with a view to the advantage which their adoption or rejection might offer for maintaining or subverting a ministry. Things were like little concerns in the deliberations, the instability in the progress of the government, and the slight amount of useful work accomplished.

Every law is now prepared with care, and matured by a council composed of enlightened men, who give their advice on all the measures to be adopted. The Senate, guardian of the fundamental pact, and whose conservative power only receives its initiative in grave circumstances, examines the laws solely as to their constitutional character; and as a real political court of cassation it is composed of a certain number of members which cannot be exceeded. The Corps Legislatif does not, it is true, interfere in all the details of the administration, but is directly appointed by universal suffrage, and does not count among its members any public functionaries. It discusses the laws with the most entire liberty. If they are not approved of, it is a notification which the government takes into account; but this rejection does not shake the government, does not arrest the progress of affairs, and does not oblige the sovereign to take for counsellors men who do not enjoy his confidence.

Such are the present differences between the present constitution and the one which preceded the revolution of February.

You will, gentlemen, during the voting of the address, closely enter into all discussions according to the measures of their gravity, in order that you may afterwards be able to devote yourselves to the affairs of the country; for if the former claim a profound and conscientious examination, the interests of the country are in their turn important for prompt action.

On the eve of more detailed explanations, I shall confine myself to summarily reviewing what has been done at home and abroad.

In the interior all measures taken tend to augment agricultural, industrial and commercial production. The increasing dearness of everything is the inevitable consequence of a growing prosperity; but, at least, we were obliged to make the articles of primary necessity as cheap as possible. It is with this object that we have diminished the duties on those articles, have signed a treaty of commerce with England, have conceived the project of concluding others with neighboring countries, and have everywhere facilitated the means of communication and transport. In order to realize these economic reforms we have hitherto at our ease had to renounce ninety millions of our annual revenue. Nevertheless the budget, as I informed you last year, will be presented to you balanced without its being necessary to have recourse either to the creation of new imposts or to public credit.

The changes which have taken place in the administration of Algeria have placed the superior direction of affairs in the midst of the population. The illustrious services of the marshal who has been placed at the head of the colony, are sure guarantees of order and prosperity.

As regards the exterior, I have endeavored to prove, in my relations with foreign powers, that France sincerely desires peace; and that, without renouncing a legitimate influence, she does not pretend to interfere in any place where her interests are not concerned; and finally, that if she sympathizes with all that is great and noble she does not hesitate to condemn everything which violate international right and justice.

Events difficult to be foreseen have combined in Italy to complicate a state of things already embarrassed. My government, agreeing with its allies, has considered that the best means of obviating the greatest dangers was to have recourse to the principle of non-intervention, which leaves each country master of its destiny, localizes questions, and prevents them from degenerating into European conflicts. I certainly am not ignorant that this system possesses the inconvenience of appearing to authorize many grievous excesses. Extreme views would prefer another course: some that France would participate in and make common cause with every revolution, others that France should place herself at the head of a general reaction. I will not allow myself to be diverted from my path by these opposite inducements.

It is sufficient for the greatness of the country that its rights be maintained in the quarters in which they are incontestable, to defend its honor wherever it may be attacked, and to afford its support where it is supplicated by a just cause.

It is thus that we have maintained our rights in causing the occupation of the cession of Savoy and Nice. These provinces are now irrevocably united to France.

It is thus that to avenge our honor in the extreme East, our flag, united with that of Great Britain, floats victoriously over the walls of Pekin, and that the cross, the emblem of Christian civilization, again surmounts in the capital of China the temples of our religion which have been closed more than a century.

It is thus in the name of humanity our troops have gone to Syria, in virtue of a European convention, in order to protect the Christians against a blind fanaticism.

At Rome I have considered it necessary to increase the garrison, when the security of the Holy Father appeared to be threatened.

I have sent my fleet to Gaeta, at the moment when it seemed that it must be the last refuge of the King of Naples. After having allowed it to remain there for months I withdrew it. However worthy of sympathy might be a royal misfortune so nobly defended, the presence of our war vessels obliged us to depart every day from the system of neutrality which I had proclaimed, and gave rise to erroneous interpretations. But you know that in politics one hardly believes in the possibility of a purely disinterested step.

Such is a rapid exposition of the general situation. Let my apprehension therefore be dissipated, and let confidence be re-established. Why should not commercial and industrial affairs assume a new development. My firm resolution is not to enter into any conflict in which the cause of France should not be based on right and justice. What, then, have we to fear? Can a united and compact nation, numbering forty millions of souls, fear to be drawn into struggles the aim of which she could not approve; or to be provoked by any menace whatever? The first virtue of a people is to have confidence in itself, and not to allow itself to be disturbed by imaginary alarms. Let us, then, calmly regard the future in a full consciousness of our strength, as well as of our honorable intentions. Let us engage, without exaggerated pre-occupations, in the development of the germs of the prosperity that Providence places in our hands.

☞ On Monday night last, about midnight, a fire broke out in the three-story brick block, Bonaventure, owned by Mr. M'Murray, adjoining the old Montreal Bank Building, and before it could be checked, the entire block became a mass of ruins. The premises were occupied by Wm. M'Murray's Dry Goods Store, Mr. John M'Murray's Grocery, Miss Sinclair's Millinery and Fancy Goods establishment, and Mr. Marshall Foster's Harness and Saddle Shop.

GREAT CONFLAGRATION AT SEA.

Liverpool, Feb. 2.—We have to record the entire destruction by fire of the Mary Carson, 692 tons burthen, bound from Charleston to this port, and having on board a large quantity of cotton and five hundred barrels resin.

The particulars of the disaster have been brought by the ship Henry Brigham, Capt. Potter, which arrived here from Savannah last evening, having on board Capt. Jones and the crew of the ill-fated vessel. The captain of the ship Henry Brigham, reports that on Wednesday January 16, about one o'clock, a. m., when in lat. 42 N., and long. 42 W., they saw a light S. E. Thinking it might be some ship in distress, they bore away and run for the light until nearly half past two o'clock, when the light disappearing, they again put the ship on her course.

Shortly afterwards, however, the light flashed up a second time, when Capt. Porter decided to ascertain the cause, and again bore away in the direction of the light. At five a. m. he became satisfied that it was a ship on fire, and in an hour and a half afterwards they came up to the burning vessel. At that time the top sides and decks were all burnt, and the whole centre of the ship was one mass of flame. The masts were lying under the lee of the vessel, and as the Henry Brigham passed her bows the stern fell in with a tremendous crash. Subsequently, at about a mile from the burning vessel, they saw a boat, and stood for it, and on coming up to the boat they found that it contained the first officer, the carpenter, and a seaman, belonging to the british barque Mary Carson, which was the vessel on fire.

Shortly afterwards they came up to another boat, containing Capt. Jones and thirteen others, being the crew of the ill-fated vessel, all of whom they took on board.—They learned from Captain Jones that the Mary Carson, which was the property of Messrs J. S. De Wolfe & Co., of this town, was on her passage from Charleston to this port, having on board 2,257 bales of upland cotton, 150 bales of sea island cotton, and 500 brls. of resin. The vessel took fire shortly before midnight on Tuesday, Jan. 15, when every exertion was made to subdue it, but without effect. The combustible nature of the cargo on board caused the flames to spread rapidly, and in less than an hour after the fire first broke out the boats were lowered, and the captain and crew were compelled to abandon the ship.

CAPTURE OF A SLAVER.

The Espoir, screw, commander S. Douglas, succeeded in capturing a valuable prize on the 4th Dec. last. The Espoir was on her way to Ascension under canvass, and had arrived within 200 miles of the island, but being rather to leeward steam was got up to get her into the anchorage. The commander had just finished taking his sights at noon (the master being sick,) when the man who was at the mast head reported a sail on the weather bow. The commander went below and fixed the position of the ship to his observations. On coming again on deck and looking at the stranger he was seen suddenly to change his course. "Starboard!" "Go on full speed!" were the orders given on board the Espoir, and the little vessel was in her chase, the stranger heating his wind and taking in his studding sails.

At 3 20 p.m. the Espoir was up with the chase and captured her. She proved to be the barque Clara Windsor, of New York, without colors or papers, 260 tons burthen, 720 slaves stated by her crew to be on board, with a crew of fourful looking miscreants, 23 in number. The prize crew were taken out of her and placed on board the Espoir, while Lieutenant Stevenson with twelve of the Espoir's crew, took charge of the prize and commenced beating their way up to Ascension. The Espoir kept on under steam, but her engines broke down the same night, and it was consequently a week before she reached the island.

The prize arrived two days afterwards, short of water, and with twenty deaths among her cargo. This latter must be regarded as a small average, when it is considered that the slave deck of the ship on which these 720 human beings had been packed was only four feet in height. The prize was supplied with water and sent on from Ascension to Sierra Leone for adjudication. Slaves at Cuba were stated to be fetching six hundred dollars each, therefore the Clara Windsor's freight represented a market value of £86,400.

The cost of the "article" was $60 each, or £3000. £5 10s per head is allowed for each slave captured by our cruisers and delivered alive, and half that sum for each slave who may die after the capture of the vessel. The proceeds of the sale of the vessel's stores and outfit are reckoned in the present instance to cover the expenses, leaving the sum allowed for the hull to be added to the spoil to be shared by the lucky captors.

TRADE AND FINANCE.

From the London News.

We regret to observe that the complaints of slackness in various departments of trade are rather increasing than diminishing.—Although with the cessation of the foreign drain of gold, and with the improvement in the American exchange, the prospects of the money market have decidedly brightened, there are many considerations of an adverse character in operation at present. Amongst these are the high rate of discount, the extreme caution which prevails in monied circles, the numerous failures in the Greek and Levant trade, and the withholding of orders for our manufactures from America. The latter is perhaps the most important of all its effects. The consolatory view to be taken is, that on the pecuniary position of America becomes easy her trade with this country will resume, at least to some extent, its ordinary channels. Enterprise must be checked as long as political disquiet prevails in the United States; but as the great bulk of the articles which the Americans take from us are pre-eminently articles of utility, it stands to reason that, so long as they have the pecuniary ability to procure them—and their ability is at present undoubted—they will continue to do so. It will probably be different with France, the consumption of whose silks, and other luxurious and fanciful productions may be rigorously curtailed in America, at the time when no one knows what trouble the future may bring forth. Meanwhile, it is to be observed that manufacturing industry in this country, despite all the immediate drawbacks, is at present far more active than it is in America or France. Our security lies in the multitude of our customers. While our trade with America is momentarily dull, and that with the Levant disorganized, the Australian markets appear to be in a fair way of recovery from their long depression, and those of China and Japan are hopefully opening.

A PARALLEL TO THE ANDERSON CASE.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE OF A WELSH SAILOR ENSLAVED IN SPAIN.

The Anderson case, which is exciting so much attention in England and Canada, finds a parallel in the history of a Welsh sailor, a slave in spain. The incidents are related in Motley's "History of the New Netherlands." He represents the Spanish Armada as tossed about in a severe storm, in the Bay of Biscay, this Armada having on board numerous English mariners as galley slaves, and says:—

"There were those in the Armada, however, to whom the storm was a blessing—David Gwynn, a Welsh mariner, had sat in the Spanish hulks, a wretched galley-slave—as a prisoner of war—for more than eleven years, hoping year after year for a chance of escape from bondage. He sat now among the rowers of the great galley, the Vanzea, one of the humblest instruments by which the subjugation of his native land to Spain and Rome was to be effected. Very naturally, among the ships which suffered in the gale were the four unwieldy galleys—a squadron of four under Don Diego de Medrano—with their enormous turrets at stem and stern, and their low and open waists.—The chapels, pulpits and gilded mahogany proved of little avail in a hurricane. The Diana, largest of the four, went down with all hands; the Princess was laboring severely in the trough of the sea, and the Vanzea was likewise in imminent danger. So the master of the galley asked the Welsh slave, who had far more experience in seamanship than he possessed himself, if it was possible to save the vessel.

"Gwynn saw an opportunity for which he had been waiting for eleven years. He was ready to improve it. He pointed out to the captain the hopelessness of attempting to overtake the Armada. They should go down, he said, as the Diana had already done, and as the Princess was likely at any moment to do, unless they took in every rag of sail, and they did their best to gain the nearest port. But in order that the rowers might exert themselves to the utmost, it was necessary that the soldiers who were a useless incumberance on deck, should go below. Then only could the ship be properly handled. The captain, anxious to save his ship and his life, consented.—Most of the soldiers were sent beneath the hatches; a few were ordered to sit on the benches among the slaves. Now there had been a secret understanding for many days among these unfortunate men, nor were they wholly without weapons.

"They had been accustomed to make tooth-picks and other trifling articles for sale out of broken sword-blades and other refuse bits of steel. There was not a man among them who had not thus provided himself with a secret stiletto. At first Gwynn occupied himself with arrangements for weathering the gale. So soon, however, as the ship was made comparatively easy, he looked around him, suddenly threw down his cap, and raised his head to the rigging. It was a preconcerted signal.—The next instant he stabbed the captain to the heart, while each one of the galley-slaves killed the soldier nearest him, then rushing below, they surprised and overpowered the rest of the troops, and put them all to death."

In other words, to get free from slavery [and by the laws of Spain they were slaves] they killed every soldier. Anderson killed the man who tried to keep him a slave.—Dr. Mothey proceeds:—

"Coming again upon deck, David Gwynn deserted the fourth galley of the Squadron called the Royal, commanded by Commodore Medrado in person, bearing down upon them before the wind. It was obvious that the Vanzea was already an object of suspicion. 'Comrades,' said Gwynn 'God has given us liberty, and by our courage we must prove ourselves worthy of the boon.' As he spoke there came a broadside from the galley Royal, which killed 9 of his crew. David, nothing daunted, laid his ship close alongside of the Royal, with such a shock that the timbers quivered again. Then at the head of his liberated slaves, now thoroughly armed, he dashed on board the galley, and after a furious conflict, in which he was assisted by the slaves of the Royal succeeded in mastering the vessel and putting all the Spanish soldiers to death.—This done, the combined rowers, welcomed Gwynn as their deliverer from an abject slavery which seemed their lot for life, willingly accepted his orders. The gale had meantime abated, and the two galleys well conducted by the experienced and intrepid Welshman, made their way to the coast of France and landed at Bayonne on the 31st, dividing among them the property found on board the two galleys. Thence, by land, the fugitives, 406 in number—Frenchmen, Spaniards, Englishmen, Turks and Moors made their way to Rochelle."

Gwynn was never returned to slavery. Henry of Navarre rewarded him for his bravery, and the English court commended his actions.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE.

A San Francisco correspondent narrates the following concerning the daring attempt of a number of desperadoes to escape from jail:—

Some thirty convicts in our State Prison paid, last week, a costly tribute to the liberty that they adore for oil. Seldom have convicts essayed to obtain their freedom under more desperate discouragements. A watercart was just passing outward through the gate of the high wall that surrounds the yard, when suddenly these 30 made a desperate rush for the open gate. There were three guards by the gate, and Sheriff Kinnard, of Sutter County, who had just lodged a prisoner at the office, stood near them.—The convicts divided into four squads, and each squad sustained a freeman to use in the fight, as a shield from the shots of the guards on the wall. The ringleader picked up the Sheriff, and throwing him over his shoulder, wore him as a Digger wears a papoose.

The Sheriff, finding all his struggles vain, finally threw his own cloak over the face of his "old man of the sea," when he was dropped like a hot potatoe. But once coming upon another armed guard, the convict shouldered him, and was making good time when a shot in the rear stretched him dead upon the ground. The officers of the prison, meanwhile, had picked up their arms, and were giving chase to the fugitives, whose numbers would have been indefinitely increased if a trusty prisoner had not slammed too the gate, and so prevented a general delivery. The officers blazed away as they ran, and with very good effect. Seven men, who had used between them Deputy-Warden Penny, as their cover once fell, the Deputy himself crawling over half in the others, shattering the bones and making it probable that he will lose his arm. When three of the prisoners had been killed, and thirteen others wounded, all but one, who is still missing, of the unharmed wheeled about, surrendered, and were marched back to quarters. Every fellow who engaged in this race for liberty, was a long-term man, and all were Mexicans.

AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

The most important news from the new disunited States is the progress of the President elect, Abraham Lincoln, on his way to the National Capital, Washington, there to be inaugurated President, on 4th of March. It was at first intended that he should take a Southern route, but rumors reaching him of plots of assassination, he subsequently decided to proceed via New York. He accordingly left his home in Springfield, Illinois, on Wednesday of last week, amid the prayers of the people for his safety. In Cincinnati, Ohio, he met with an enthusiastic reception at the hands of men of every political creed. He was induced to speak; he briefly stated his policy to be "No concession, no compromise," and his intention to carry out the articles of the Chicago platform, on which he was elected by the people to the high office he will shortly occupy. From Cincinnati to New York his progress was one grand ovation. At Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Albany, and other places, he was presented with addresses, and great demonstrations paid honor to his presence. At New York his reception was fully up to that of the Prince of Wales, and enthusiasm reached its climax. He quartered at the Astor House, and a public levee took place on the second day of his stay there, when it is said he earned golden opinions from all sorts of men. From New York he proceeded to Philadelphia on his route, where he arrived on Friday last, the 22nd inst., the anniversary of Washington's birth-day, and there he was cordially received by the people, and members of the State Legislature. The day being a holiday in that city, and the condition of the country rendering it a more than ordinary celebration, a grand ceremony took place, in which their distinguished guest was a prominent object. After the raising of the American flag on the liberty pole Mr. Lincoln was called on to speak, when he is reported to have said:

Allusion has been made to the fact—the interesting fact, perhaps we should say—that I for the first time appear at the capital of the great Commercial wealth of Pennsylvania upon the birthday of the Father of his country, in connection with the history of this country. I have already gone through one exceedingly interesting scene this morning in the ceremonies of Philadelphia. Under the high conduct of gentlemen there, I was for the first time allowed the privilege of standing in old Independence Hall—(enthusiastic cheering)—to have a few words addressed to me there and opening up to me an opportunity of expressing with much regret that I had not more time to express something of my own feelings, excited by the occasion, somewhat to harmonize and give shape to the feelings that had been really the feelings of my own life. Besides this, our friends there had provided a magnificent flag of the country. They had arranged it so that I was given the honor of raising it to the head of the staff—[applause]—and when it went up I was pleased that it went up by the strength of my own feeble arm. When, according to the arrangement, the cord was pulled and it floated gloriously to the wind without an accident, in the light glowing sunshine of the morning, I could not help hoping that there was in the entire success of that beautiful ceremony at least something of an omen of what is to come.—[Loud applause.] Nor could I help feeling then, as I often have felt, in the whole of that proceeding I was a very humble instrument. I had not provided the flag, I had not made the arrangements for elevating it to its place, I had but applied a very small portion of my feeble strength in raising it; in the whole transaction I was in the hands of the people who had arranged it, and if I can have the same generous cooperation of the people of the nation, I think the flag of our country may yet be kept flaunting gloriously. [Loud, enthusiastic, and continued cheering.] I reserve for a moment but to repeat some words uttered at the hotel in regard to what has been said about the military support which the general government may expect from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in a proper emergency. To guard against any possible mistake, do I recur to this. It is not with any pleasure that I contemplate the possibility that a necessity may arise in this country for the use of the military arm.—While I am exceedingly gratified to see the manifestation upon your streets of your military force here, and exceedingly gratified at your premise here to use that force upon a proper emergency — while I make these acknowledgments, I desire to repeat, in order to preclude any possible misconstruction, that I do most sincerely hope that we shall have no use for them—(applause)—that it will never become their duty to shed blood, and most especially never to shed fraternal blood. I promise that so far as I may have wishes to direct, if so painful a result shall in anywise be brought about, it shall be through no fault of mine. (Cheers.) Allusion has also been made by one of your honored speakers to some remarks recently made by myself at Pittsburg, in regard to what is supposed to be the especial interest of this great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. I now wish only to say, in regard to that matter, that the few remarks which I uttered on that occasion were rather carefully worded. I took pains that they should be so. I have seen no occasion to add to them or substract from them. I leave them precisely as they stand—(applause)—adding only now that I am pleased to have no expression from you, gentlemen of Pennsylvania, significant that they are unsatisfactory to you."

How elated must Mr. Lincoln have been at such displays of confidence and respect.

Harrisburg was the next stopping place, and there he was received well. But a scene of a very different description in the drama from anything he had yet experienced on his way was about to be enacted. Mr. Lincoln had quietly gone to rest for the night, when a messenger arrived from Washington with the startling intelligence that an organized plot to assassinate him at or near Baltimore, the following morning, had been discovered. There was no time for delay, as a special train was soon at his service; and disguised, wearing a military cloak and a cloth cap, he was hurried to the station, and before the time at which it was understood he was to leave Harrisburg, he was safe in Washington, under the protection of Gen. Winfield Scott. From what has subsequently transpired it is evident that a deep-laid, diabolical scheme to assassinate the President elect was arranged, and had it not been for the Providential discovery he would have perished at the hands of his fiendish enemies.

This is the way affairs progress in the model Republic, and what the end will be no man can foretell. Mr. Lincoln seems determined to stand firm to the Constitution and the Union, and to put down Rebellion, and in this he will be supported by a large party at the North. The South on the other hand has formed a separate Confederacy, elected a President and Vice, and are determined to resist to the death all attempts of the Republican Government to rule there. Soon we may hear of the breaking out of a bloody civil war in the United States; even now that war may have commenced. Let us be thankful we are not involved in its awful consequences.

THE ELECTION IN GREY.

The result of the election in the County of Grey is looked forward to anxiously by all parties. Hon. J. C. Morrison, Solicitor General West, is the Ministerial candidate; Mr. Purdy, a native of the County, is on the Opposition ticket, and Mr. N. C. Gowan is the nominee of the Orange Conservative party. The constituency is the one rendered vacant by the disappearance of Mr. Hogan, and has heretofore been considered a ministerial stronghold. At the nomination Mr. Purdy had the show of hands, but the friends of the other candidates regard the fact as no evidence of the feeling throughout the County. It will be remembered that Mr. Morrison was twice rejected in 1858; the office of Solicitor General becoming vacant, he was called into the Cabinet without being the representative of any constituency, about a year ago, and much indignation resulted thereby. The Opposition make it a test of the strength of the Ministry in the West, and it is accepted as such by many ministerialists. A day or two more will decide the contest, and we will not be much surprised to learn that the Solicitor General of the Cartier-McDonald Government has been rooted for the third time.

SCHOOL LECTURE IN ASHBURNHAM.

The Rev. J. S. Douglas having been appointed Local School Superintendent for the village of Ashburnham delivered the Annual Lecture required by Law on Wednesday, 20th inst.

F. H. Armstrong, Esq., was called to the Chair.

The subject of the Lecture was "The advantages of commencing one's education at a Common School." The lecturer after remarking that one may learn from contrast as well as from comparison, and that then the size of the pitcher he brought would be the amount he would carry away, proceeded to lay it down as a reasonable opinion derived from the "nursery" and the small beginnings of the greatest men, that small beginnings in learning are always best; that this opinion is supported by experience, the best scholars at Academies and Colleges being upon the average from country schools, or one-teacher schools in Towns; that the rate of progress at School is found to be nearly double in the early stages in these than in multiple-teacher schools; and that the reasons are sufficient to account for the rate of progress and the results, and to sustain the principle founded on analogy. In regard to the School, the simplicity of the plan which is "read and read on," "write and write on," without that confusion of memory which arises from a complicated plan—the direct teaching of a master, whom the child respects and loves, and who pours his knowledge straight and gently into their narrow capacities, and his presence ever near to keep their minds steadily yet lightly at work; the steady head of the older scholars' industry, the greater influence of an example immediately in advance, the kindly feelings between brothers and sisters, thus infused into a school, and the moral power which it exerts; the unbroken line of progress; the continuous emulation upwards from the youngest to the oldest like a chain of cutters on a track; and above all the liberty and self-reliance and personal effort that are exercised—and the robust health enjoyed—are powerful reasons why the punished mind thus developed and trained, should eventually rise to greater eminence than when the opposite combination of things prevailed.

Then, with the illustrations, filled up an hour, at the close of which the lecturer concluded with urging upon the young people, more of whom were present than their parents, the necessity of taking advantage of their favorable opportunities for improvement, because many so situated turned out dunces after all, as unless their eyes were opened they would not see at noonday, they would not learn anything though they should travel the wide world over.

After a vote of thanks, the lecturer intimated that he would, God-willing, give another Lecture on Education about the same time next year. (Com.

TESTIMONIAL.

At the close of Mr Pencille's first course of lessons last night, the following testimonial was presented to him by his scholars:

"We having received Mr. Pencille's course of instructions in this Town deem a public expression of our unqualified approbation of his peculiar method of teaching Writing, due alike to his abilities and persevering attention. We are satisfied that pupils of ordinary genius devoting as much assiduity for improvement as Mr. P. does to them in his vocation, can scarcely fail to become in a brief period, expert and graceful Penmen. While we therefore reflect on our own rapid improvement under his tuition we cheerfully present him to the confidence of our friends and the public."

We believe it is the intention of Mr. Pencille to continue his instructions.

Mr. ESSON'S DEFENCE.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It is an unpleasant task to defend ones self against low blackguardism. If a well disposed citizen is attacked by a street rowdy and is compelled to knock him down in self-defence he feels as if he would not like everybody to know it, the very fact of being compelled to recognize the unprovoked assaults of a pugnatical puppy is of itself a disagreeable annoyance.

It is with feelings of this kind that I am again forced to notice the malignant vituperation of the Peterborough Review, and one of his correspondents, a certain John Lucas, whom I need not describe as I will have occasion to analyze the being more minutely before I close this letter. In the Review of the 15th inst. the editor honors me, with another notice in his own peculiar style, in which the terms villainous rascality, villainous attack, libeller, &c., are freely used. Now, sir, I hold the doctrine which I presume no one will dispute, that "villainous rascality" can only be perpetrated by a person who is a villain and a rascal, and I hold also that these are two characters which every honest, well disposed man should hold in abhorrence. Now, sir, I have had a business acquaintance with the editor of the Review for some five or six years, and we have always been on the most friendly terms. I cannot recollect a single occasion on which he evinced the slightest repugnance towards me, or gave me to understand either by word or action that his opinion of me was otherwise than favorable. The last occasion on which we met he proffered me his hand in the most friendly manner; did the editor of the Review behave then towards a person whom he candidly believed to be a villain and a rascal? if so he is the most contemptible hypocrite that ever smiled to hide a rotten heart; the most sycophantic wretch that ever lied for his daily bread,—or were the terms used in a premium of rage because I had stated some unpalatable facts which he was unable to refute. Was he compelled to resort to abuse because he was worsted in argument, and endeavored to divert attention from the subject under discussion by exhibiting his knowledge of the vocabulary of Billingsgate? if so I shall not follow him. I do not pretend to be able to cope with him in that kind of warfare, nor do I desire such an attainment, for I consider the accomplishment should be incompatible with the right to live in a moral community, but I submit that the attempt to injure the reputation of an opponent to lessen the force of his statements is mean and unknightable. I have written nothing which I am not prepared to back up with proof, and I am treated with the most unmeasured abuse. I submit, sir, that the term "villainous rascality" might be applied to such conduct without exceeding the bounds of propriety.

I shall now proceed to notice a few points of Mr. Lucas' communication, and in this I shall be very brief, for there is very little in it worth noticing. Near the beginning he says, "By his own admission he" (meaning himself) "only travelled off the main road through a small portion of Lutterworth." The statement is an unmitigated falsehood. I never made any such admission. Further as in speaking of the effect likely to be produced by my letter he puts in the words (especially to any one not acquainted with the man) insinuating that my assertions would not have much weight where my character was known. It is not for me, sir, to enter into a discussion in regard to my own character. I was born on the neighborhood where I now reside, and there I hope to live and die; my life and conduct is before the people amongst whom I hope to spend my days. Whether it has been such as to command respect it is for them to judge, but the insinuation thrown out by Mr. Lucas is a mean, contemptible exhibition of impotent spleen which no one but a pusillanimous coward would be guilty of, and is of a piece with the rest of the miserable, dirty attacks which have been made upon me by parties who are afraid that the honest truths I have told will unveil their corrupt profits.

Mr. Lucas then goes on to criticise my ability as an agricultural writer. I cannot perceive what connection this has with the Bobcaygeon settlement, and I must make haste to close. But I cannot forbear applying to Mr. Lucas a remark: I have read I cannot say where at present, that no man should attempt to speak or write on a subject until he has first learned something of it. Mr. Lucas knows no more about farming than I do about reading a sail, which is just nothing. It is reported that he did make an attempt to farm once in a neighboring township, with what ability I know not, but the result was that his wife has for the last three years obtained food and shelter for herself and children in her father's house. I shall deal with but one more point; he asserts that the same hand did not write the agricultural essay and the letters on the Bobcaygeon road, implying that the letters over my signature were not written by me. I will be very brief on this point, I will allow Mr Lucas to take his choice of three things: either withdraw the statement, produce sufficient proof of its correctness, or bear the brand of a liar!

There are a few other things connected with this subject I would like to notice, but as I may have occasion to write again I will trespass no further at present.

The Kangaroo arrived this morning, with Liverpool dates of the 7th; one day later than the Fulton. Advices unimportant.

Both Houses of Parliament had voted addresses responsive to the Queen's Speech. Lord Derby said the address needed no amendment. Notwithstanding sundry omissions in the speech, he regarded the references to the United States as the most important topic, and said every one viewed with the deepest regret the recent events in that country, on which the manufacturing interests of England so greatly depend. He condemned the course of Sardinia in Italy, and expressed dissatisfaction with Napoleon's Speech. Earl Granville responded, deeply lamenting the disruption in America, but he felt confident the results to England would not be as serious, as the resources of India for cotton would be at once brought into play. He said that our foreign relations, particularly with France, were most satisfactory. The address was agreed to.

In the House of Commons, Mr. White moved an amendment to the address, declaring it the duty of the Government to introduce reform measures. Mr. Disraeli thought there was not much encouragement for the Government to do this, and Lord John Russell said there was not sufficient popular feeling to carry a satisfactory measure. He was sick of introducing abortive bills. He defended the foreign policy of the Government and the course of Sardinia. Mr. Bright condemned the apathy of the Government in relation to reform. The amendment was rejected and the address voted. American affairs were deplored during the debate in the Commons.

He believed the case, according to the treaty, was quite clear, and that the claim of the United States must be established by showing that Anderson was guilty of murder according to the laws of England. No English jury would convict Anderson of murder, and the claim was not likely to be substantiated.

ANOTHER ASHBURTON TREATY CASE.

As stated in our last issue, a man named R. S. McConnel was arrested at the Royal Exchange, for having upon his person unlawful weapons. His trial terminated on Wednesday last, and resulted in the accused being fined $15. It seems McConnell is an American, and was traveling through Canada with a large sum of money about him, and, as a protection for his person and property in a strange land, he had purchased a revolving pistol, a bowie knife, and a pair of knuckles, in ignorance of there being a law in Canada preventing him carrying them. During the whole investigation McConnell's conduct was straight forward, and was not such as would lead any man to suppose that he was either a robber or a "hard case," as the phrase goes. On the contrary he readily told where he came from, where he was going to, and that his business was that of a drover. The Police Magistrate in delivering his charge made some very appropriate remarks, and took occasion to say that everything appeared in McConnell's favor, nevertheless it was against the laws of the Province for any person to carry about the instruments found upon his (McConnell's) person, yet on account of his being a foreigner and probable ignorant of Canadian law, he would impose the lightest possible fine the law allowed. McConnell paid the fine without any words. The bowie knife and knuckles were broken up in court. Since the denouement of the unlawful weapon case, the position of McConnell has been shifted to new ground. Last night two detective officers—one from Windsor and the other from Cleveland—arrived in Chatham, and arrested McConnell on a charge of forging notes to a considerable amount. McConnell was taken off on the first train to Windsor, where it will be attempted to convey him to the States for trial. If this charge turns out to be true, the feat of McConnell's having such a large sum of money on his person will be accounted for.—Chatham Planet.

A CINCINNATI BELLE TURNS INTO A NEGRO GIRL AND ELOPES.

A burnt-cork comedy in real life was played on Wednesday upon the steamer Glendale, then lying at the landing in this city, the particulars of which are these:—A young and ardent couple were connected, and, now and loved each other, in all of which there is nothing astonishing, as the gentleman is [illegible] and accomplished—the lady beautiful and amiable. The parents of the latter were decidedly opposed to the consummation of a union of the young people, and the fair one was commanded to think no more of her lover. Alternate weeping and fainting produced no effect upon the hard-hearted parent," so, as a last expedient, she embraced the proposition of her lover and eloped. The gentleman is connected with a mercantile house in Memphis, for which port the Glendale was then upon the eve of starting; but fearful that a search would be instituted for the runaway maiden, he had recourse to a stratagem which we believe was original. In the afternoon of Wednesday, a gentleman attended by a large girl, went on board the boat, and arranged for the passage to Memphis for himself and servant, and after registering a name which he borrowed for the occasion, he left, and did not again make his appearance until a few moments before the plank was drawn and the wheels commenced revolving. In the meantime the inexorable pages of the daily [illegible] the pair would make their way to Memphis, and knowing that the Glendale was up for that port, in connection with a packet officer paid her a visit, and with the consent of the captain a thorough search was instituted, in the course of which the anxious father was brought in close proximity with the young negro girl, who sat demurely in the corner of the ladies' saloon, busily engaged in darning a coarse pair of worsted stockings.—After examining every available spot, including Texas, the gentleman and his official companion retired, satisfied that his fleet bird had not taken refuge in that snowy tower; but, wonderful metamorphosis, that same evening, while the boat was merrily dashing through the waters, and a rush of a cascade was heard within the wheel-house, a young and beautiful stranger emerged from one of the ladies' state-rooms. About an hour previous, the negro girl having completed darning the stockings, entered that same apartment, where she mysteriously disappeared. The passenger to Memphis had lost one "institution" to find a more agreeable one in the person of a wife, for previous to going aboard a convenient magistrate had tied the marriage knot.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

MAIL CARRIER FROZEN TO DEATH.

From the Huron Signal.

The mail for Goderich left Kincardine during the dreadful storm on Thursday morning, at about 9 o'clock in a sleigh drawn by two horses, and in charge of Francis M'Nab, one of Mr. Hobson's stage drivers. There were no passengers.

When leaving, the mail carrier told the post-master that he was afraid he would not be able to reach the next post-office. His presentiment was verified—he did not live to reach Largan, a post office distant about ten miles from Kincardine.

The actual facts as they occurred during the poor carrier's struggles for life while nobly discharging his duty, are gleaned only from indications which have since been discovered. At about two miles north of Pine river, near where the plains commence, he appears to have unhitched the horses from the sleigh, where he abandoned the mail, having first mostly done up the lines. He evidently mounted one horse, wrapped himself in the buffalo robe, and with mail bag in front proceeded, leading the other horse.—In this manner he must have travelled with both horses until shortly after he had crossed Pine river bridge, when, probably, becoming benumbed he abandoned one horse and still toiled on. Some distance further on the mail bag seems to have fallen next, a little further on the buffalo robe dropped from his inanimate form, and still a little further and the dead body of the hapless mail carrier came down amid the terrible drifts of snow.

These facts are presumed from the position of the articles when found, and the attitude of the limbs of the unfortunate man when discovered. This mail route is a dreadful cold one, being exposed to the north and west winds from Lake Huron, nearly the whole way, and it does not appear that the deceased made an attempt to stop at any one of the many houses along the road.

Francis McNab was about 40 years of age and unmarried. He is said to have a mother and sister living somewhere near Ottawa city. The horses were recovered alive on Saturday last, in a very bad condition — one of them was found some distance out on the ice on the lake.

☞ The St. Catherine's Post has a horrible account of a fatal scuffle at St. Davids, between a tavern-keeper and a licensed quart grocery-keeper. The first had refused more liquor to a woman already partially intoxicated. The latter supplied her, illegally, and she came back drunk to stay at the tavern for the night. The tavern-keeper could not thrust her out in a cold night, when she would be almost certain to perish, but remonstrated in the morning, in vigorous terms, with the keeper of the grocery, whose father, a violent man, interfered, and, after a scuffle, killed the tavern-keeper with a blow of a sleigh-stake. The murderer, whose name is Farrel, was afterwards arrested on the American side.

Modesty is attended with profit; arrogance brings on destruction.

BY GEORGE GEDDES, OF ONONDAGA, C. W.

PART V II

The construction of frame buildings is not less important than that of the dwelling house, for on their comfort, convenience, and adaptability to the wants and circumstances of the farm, the health and comfort of domestic animals, and consequently the profits of the farmer, depends. The first thing to be considered in the erection of barns, stables, &c., for the accommodation of stock and storing of produce, is to have them of a size and description suited to the wants of the system it is intended to pursue. If grain raising is the main feature of the business, the barn-room will not require to be so extensive, because the saving of straw not being an object, it can be stacked out when threshed; but if stock raising is to be combined with grain-growing, as is general in this County, the barns should be sufficiently commodious to hold all the grain, and have room left for the straw after threshing, and besides there should be sufficient stable or shed room to accommodate all stock of whatever kind. There is a good deal of difference of opinion, even amongst good farmers, as to the advantages of the different methods of accommodating stock, especially cattle, some contending for the plan of tying them up in stalls, others for allowing them to run in open sheds. My opinion is that the question for us to consider is, how can we secure the greatest degree of comfort to the animal; and I have no doubt that animals would be more comfortable in the open air with plenty of litter than confined in what is sometimes called stables; but, at the same time, I am decidedly of opinion that a good stable is much more comfortable than an open shed. However, with good sheds and the stock properly assorted into lots of about the same size and condition, they may be wintered in tolerable comfort. Still I think good warm rooms, and well lighted and well ventilated stalls, is not only the most comfortable for the stock, but the most economical of time and labour in attending on them. In proceeding to give my views on the construction of frame buildings, it will be well to give a general outline of the whole plan before describing minutely the different departments. The cheapest, most convenient and labour saving arrangement is to have the accommodation for every kind of stock in the same building which is to contain the food designed for that particular kind. The advantages of this plan are: it is generally less expensive, it is more convenient, as the labour of carrying fodder from one building to another is saved, and the stables can also be kept warmer, as there is no necessity for keeping the door open during the time of feeding, as must be done when the food has to be carried from another building. Another reason for keeping the different kin's of stock in separate yards is the great danger of some accident, when allowed to run together. Horses, especially young ones, bust the cattle by chasing them around; cattle, in turn, are apt to hook sheep and pigs, which retaliate by destroying the fodder by running on it, and there is considerable danger of the lambs being devoured in Spring by hogs, particularly if there happen to be a breeding sow in the lot. In view of all these contingencies, it is the safest course to keep every kind of stock in a separate yard, and to economize time the foodshould be stored in the place designed for them. A complete sett of farm buildings, then, should consist of three distinct departments or wards, for cattle, sheep, and horses, besides a piggery, which need not be very extensive, as no room is required for storing fodder. To commence with the accommodation for cattle, the principal objects sought to be secured in construction should be plenty of room, warmth, light and ventilation, and this remark will apply equally to all other buildings. The most convenient and economical plan for a cattle stable, where practicable, is what is called a side-hill barn, with the stable in the basement and barn overhead, but this may not always be suitable; where it is, the stalls should be arranged in two rows, face to face. If the barn is wide enough, and it is desired to have all the basement filled with stalls, they should run lengthwise of the barn, to economise room. There should be a passage between them six feet wide, wherein the fodder should be thrown down from the barn above; the sides of this passage should be boarded four feet high, so that the animals can be fed from the passage. The stalls should be separated by partitions also four feet high, extending six feet back; each stall for full grown cows at least four feet wide, and for other cattle in proportion. Against the head boarding a box should be placed about one foot deep, eighteen inches wide at top and twelve at bottom, for holding the feed. It is recommended by some to have the bottom of the feeding box 20 inches above the floor, but I think it should not be raised more than six inches, and indeed I can see no advantage in raising it above the floor at all. The natural position of the animal eating is that which it assumes when grazing in the field, where it lays hold of its food on a level with the ground on which it stands, or nearly so, and I cannot see why it should not assume the same position in the stable with the same ease. If we allow six feet for passage, eighteen inches for each feeding box, 8 feet for a full-grown cow to stand on, and at least 6 feet for a passage behind, a stable with two rows of stalls will require to be 37 feet wide, and allowing for the thickness of the walls the whole width of the building should be at least 40 feet, if the stalls run lengthwise of the barn; but I think it desirable to have a part of the stable appropriated to loose boxes, one for the accommodation of calves, which are very troublesome to tie, and another for any animal we may wish to separate from such as cows at calving.

$100 A YEAR

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other for the above purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 15 to 25 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by cast-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired as a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

PRICE $60.

All orders directed to "M. Mowry, Ashburnham, Peterborough," will be promptly attended to.

Mathew McIndoo, Cavan. Joseph Walton, Smith. Francis Best, Emily. W. Elliot, do
G. Harkness, do S. Dickson, Peterboro'.
W. Armstrong, Otonabee. C. Gifford, Cobourg

The inventor, Aldus Mowry, will sell to any one desiring it, the right to manufacture and sell the Machine in any limited locality.

Address, "Aldus Mowry, Peterboro', C. W."

N. B.—Any persons infringing upon this Patent, will be prosecuted to the utmost extent the law will allow. Patent dated March 16th, 1859.

BLADES.

I am manufacturing for the approaching harvest, and invite those who contemplate purchasing, to inspect my work and materials before giving orders elsewhere. I feel confident that for lightness of draught, the amount of grain they are capable of cutting, and their durability they cannot be surpassed if equalled, by any other Machine in the Province.

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corrupt or viscerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which ganders in the blood, depresses the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently, vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all our people are scrofulous; their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from the system we must renovate the blood by an alterative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in the most effectual remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this every where prevailing and fatal malady. It is combined from the most active remedials that have been discovered for the expurgation of this foul disorder from the blood, and the rescue of the system from its destructive consequences. Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as Ebuptive or Skin Diseases, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose, or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Blains and Boils, Tumors, Tetters and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Rheumatism, Syphilitic and Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Debility, and, indeed, all Complaints arising from Vitiated or Impure Blood. The popular belief in "impurity of the blood" is founded in truth, for scrofula is a degeneration of the blood. The particular purpose and virtue of this Sarsaparilla is to purify and regenerate this vital fluid, without which sound health is impossible in contaminated constitutions.

Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so compound that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search out and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. Many eminent lawyers consent to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Mild Inactions of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly proclaiming the benefits they have derived from its use. Clergymen, Lawyers, Statesmen, Merchants, Editors, Orators, Actors, Singers, and other public characters, have found in it the greatest protection of the lungs they ever met with. Hence it is the opportunity now of the agent, wherever he may be, to say to the people, that they are not only invited to call for this remedy, but that they may confidently rely upon it as the best protection against pulmonary complaints that has ever been discovered. Many eminent clergymen have called at the laboratory where it is made, to say that they have been restored to health by it, when all other remedies had failed, and have directed their friends to use it. Many lawyers, who have been obliged to relinquish their business, have been restored to practice by it. Many singers and actors have declared that it has given them a power of voice they had lost and deemed gone forever. Many statesmen have said that it has saved them from the grave, when they had given up all hope, and were preparing to die. Many merchants, who have been prostrated on beds of sickness, have been restored to their families and business by it. Many editors have published the facts of their own cures, that the whole community might be informed of the matchless virtues of this remedy. Many public orators have declared that it has given them power to command their audiences, when they had become hoarse and could hardly speak above a whisper. Many judges have given certificates that they have been relieved from pulmonary complaints of long standing by it. Many druggists have said that it is the best medicine they have ever sold, or that has ever been known to the people. Many postmasters have said that it has performed more cures than all other medicines combined. Many physicians have said that they have found it the most effectual remedy they could employ in their practice. Many clergymen have said that it has done more to relieve their congregations of pulmonary complaints than all other means combined. Many parents have said that it has saved their children from the consumption, when they had been given over by the family physician. Many lovers of music have said that it has restored the voice when it was lost, and that it is the only thing that will do it. Many singers have said that it is the only thing that will keep the throat in order. Many public speakers have said that it is the only thing that will prevent hoarseness. Many have said that it is the only safe expectorant they can take. Many have said that it is the only medicine they can rely upon in cases of emergency. Many have said that it is the only thing that will break up a cough in season. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure a cough in time. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure a cough at all. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure a cold. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure croup. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure bronchitis. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure influenza. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure hoarseness. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure consumption. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure asthma. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure whooping cough. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure incipient consumption. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure advanced consumption. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure the disease in any stage. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure the disease in any part of the body. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure the disease in any part of the world. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure the disease in any part of the universe. Many have said that it is the only remedy that will cure the disease in any part of the solar system. UNION OF THE COLONIES.

From the Fredericton Head Quarters.

The question of the Federal Union of the Colonies is well nigh ripe for solution; the advantages of such a measure, and objections to it, have been pretty well canvassed, but all this debate will be brought before the Provincial Legislatures in an authoritative manner.

* * * * *

The great point in favor of Federation, and the one that seems to recommend itself so strongly to the judgment of so many, despite of the numerous difficulties they see in the way of a well balanced Union, is the consolidation of a number of disjointed Provinces, whose laws, tariffs, currencies and commercial interests differ from, and clash with our mother, into one homogeneous whole; the erecting into one great nation, whose heart and interest would be single, the population of a desperate character, and the whole being a great part of the force and intellect of all would have on the whole great nation of which they would form parts. This is the great living idea that men will endeavor to realize, and which will survive through beaten at the first onset.—The objections to Union are many and strong. The objection that it is nonsense to speak of a Federal Union of the Provinces, till they are more closely brought together by the agency of railways might be thus met:—Union will sooner bring about building of railways than the building of railways bring about Union, for, if the Union were once effected people would at once see that it would be for the general interest of the whole nation to build connecting lines at once but, if the consideration of Union were left over till those railways were built very many years might elapse before, and many difficulties might be raised up to retard its accomplishment. Another objection is, that as the Canadas have a preponderating population, and the greatest extent of territory and that as they are the most numerous and wealthy they would control the whole Federation, and the other Provinces would gain nothing but an increased burden of taxation. This objection would be more difficult to overcome perhaps than the other. But if the Union of the Colonies were to be made a question of debate in the different Provincial Houses of Assembly, and it was carried by a general unanimity in each wish of consolidation the Union might proceed by forming a convention of members of the different Provincial Parliaments and to prevent all jealousy, as far as possible, the greater over-riding the less, the representatives of the lower or more Provinces might be made equal in number to those of the Canadas, and one of the articles of the constitution of the Union might perpetuate this equality of representation in the Federal Parliament.

The objection that the public debt of Canada is so much greater than that of the individual Provinces is the assertion of those who are strongly opposed to the Union:—if this question were quite valid, it is a question of the excess of the Canada debt, equally distributed over the whole Confederation, would impose a very great burden on the Lower provinces, supposing it a necessary condition of Union that there should be such a distribution; at any rate such an objection should not be considered insurmountable. The benefit that Union would confer might well ask some little sacrifice; besides such a question should not be met in a mere mercantile spirit, it should not be looked to only on its profit and loss sides. The grand, general, idea should be comprehensively grasped, and the benefits that would result not only from its realization, but which would demand some little concession, should be more strongly insisted upon than the particular objections which might easily be made numerous and difficult enough. In the great idea is generously entertained the particular objections will not be insurmountable. The adjustment of those difficulties will bring out the mental and moral resources of those on whom it will devolve to carry out the idea to its settlement. The serious agitation of this great question of Union will be as good a thing as could befall the Province; instead of trivial party bickerings that engender bitterness, it will have a great principle, a real policy to contend for

MR. LINCOLN'S JOURNEY

From the New York Herald, Feb. 25.

A hundred years hence the night journey of the President elect of the United States in the year of grace 1861, from Harrisburg, the capital of Pennsylvania, to Washington, the capital of the United States, will be read by wondering schoolboys, with all the circumstances and dreadful rumors and apprehensions resulting in this expedition, in the same frame of mind in which the rising generation of our time ponder over the flight of Mahomet or the adventures of Sinbad the Sailor. The particulars of this remarkable journey between two days, so far as received, are before our readers in the various despatches on the subject which we publish this morning.

Since last autumn there have been threats and rumours that he would never be inaugurated; "and reported conspiracies to cut him off from the White House have resulted in the concentration at Washington, by General Scott, of a thoroughly disciplined force, of every arm of the regular army, to make good the approaching inauguration.

These things, together with the fearful excitement, spirit and movements which have made a military camp of the secured [illegible] to impress them in the minds of the people [illegible] with a sense of the [illegible] though we have no doubt that the journey to Washington, according to the programme, would have been a continuous ovation all the way through, including a very flattering reception at Baltimore.—But there might have been some unpleasant manifestations. For instance, it appears that two or three sets of scheming Baltimore politicians were anxious to monopolize the coming event, after the squabble between the [illegible] and the Legislature at Albany, were [illegible] that Mr. Lincoln thought it a most desirable to avoid any more manœuvres of that description. We have, also, every reason to suppose that General Scott's advice had something to do with this ride by the light of the moon.—Certainly his military precautions at Washington have been calculated to give a degree of plausibility to the wildest rumours of dark conspiracies leveled at the incoming administration.

THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY SEND A SPECIAL ENVOY TO WASHINGTON.

New York, March 4.

Letters from Montgomery received in Washington, say, that a special envoy left the former place several days ago for the federal capital, and is supposed to be now there. He was instructed to present his credentials after the inauguration as ambassador from the Southern Confederacy, and will ask its recognition by the United States. He will insist upon an immediate answer, and in case of refusal will return. His failure to obtain recognition, it is understood at Montgomery, will be followed by an attack on Forts Sumter and Pickens, and thus an issue of force will be precipitated on the new administration. Whether this programme will be carried out depends somewhat probably on the character of Mr Lincoln's inaugural.

THE END OF COTTON.

From the New York Tribune.

Only fifty years ago, the first cargo of coffee was exported from Brazil, yet that country now supplies two-thirds of all the coffee consumed by the world. Previous to the revolution in St. Domingo, that island exported 177,000,000 pounds of coffee per annum. Europe was almost wholly dependent on that little spot for its continually increasing consumption, just as it is now for cotton. The revolution of 1792 nearly destroyed the coffee culture in St. Domingo and transplanted it to other regions, but keeping the number. In 1825 the whole Brazilian crop was only 92,000 bags; but in 1845, the export to the United States alone was 117,000,000 pounds. It is now so thoroughly domesticated in Brazil as to be the point on which the whole exchanges of the country turn. Cotton has never accomplished for India one thousandth part what coffee has done for Brazil; yet its great stimulant, the cotton gin, was invented nearly twenty years before the latter country entered systematically on the coffee culture. With this long start in the race, coffee has still overtaken cotton. The great fact must be apparent that the moment the commercial world discovered its supply of coffee was in danger of permanent interruption, now fields of cultivation were immediately resorted to, and with so much success as to degrade the original field into permanent insignificance.

Tea is not more indigenous to this country than coffee is to Brazil. In that country only a single crop was growing in 1776. The best price was raised in South Carolina from seeds brought from Madagascar toward the close of the 17th century. It was soon discovered that the marshy ground of that colony produced an article vastly superior to any grown in India. Its cultivation extended so rapidly, that in 1724 the export was 18,000 pieces. This became lately subject to an equal quantity in foreign markets. In France, its cultivation extended from one colony to another. The whole British supply was drawn from America, and India was entirely excluded from European markets. From the fateful of Madagascar seeds, the ice culture has extended into the colossal staple of the Slave States. In 1850, the production was 2,500,000,000 pounds, of which South Carolina alone produced 75 per cent., and the export that year was valued at $72,000,000.

When St. Domingo revolted, that island produced large quantities of sugar, and competed with British India in supplying Europe. But the revolution stopped its culture: India fell heir to the whole trade, and retains it to this day. Lodgo was also superseded in Brazil by coffee. The introduction of rice into South Carolina drove indigo out of that colony also, though the article there produced was known in Europe as superior to all others, so much so, as to sell for one half price. Here are three prime staples of commerce, every one of which has changed the place of its production, sometimes impoverishing one country by its loss, and sometimes enriching others by its adopting. While speaking of these changes, we may inquire what is to be the fate of American sugar? In 1837 this country produced 65,000,000 pounds, but the production now must be near 300,000,000.—If the revolution destroyed the vast coffee culture of Hayti, what better fortune will it bring to sugar in Louisiana? In 1858 and 1859 she received $29,000,000 for her sugar crops. How much of this would revolution leave?

It thus appears that great national staples are not always permanent fixtures. They rise and fall from both political and climatic causes. Coffee at one time rose in England to 37 cents a pound, because the Haytian revolution had decreased the usual supply. All the world of commerce set itself to extend the cultivation, and soon restored the equilibrium of price. Let Europe begin all ruined by the high price of any other staple and she will promptly apply the same remedy. Our cotton region is convulsed with revolution and the price is going up. England, France, and Germany, the great consumers, have taken the alarm. They see the revolution and feel the advance. They all understand the teachings of history. The London Times utters its fears of dear cotton and idle workmen, and insists that the nation shall be freed from its pitiable dependence on us.

The French press have also taken the alarm, and calls upon the nation to emancipate itself from dependence on American cotton. In England "no cotton" is synonymous with revolution, just as "no bread" is equally portentious in France.

Can Europe do as she desires? In the end she undoubtedly will. The astounding delusion has obtained currency that this country only supply the world with cotton. Hayti might have presumed as much of her coffee. The earth has millions of acres of cotton-land superior to ours, crowded with the laborers waiting for some one to employ them. Europe is now determined to set them to work. In Central America cotton everywhere abounds. China produces six times as much as all our Slave States, and could readily produce more. France and England knew this when they were marching on Pekin for a treaty which would open free egress to this vast emporium of cotton. The nations have long been beat on achieving independence of American Slavery. Europe will not be foiled in its treasonable effort. One will throw into the scale their almost blood and treasure, in the belief that home does not utterly destroy the cotton states, twenty years more of European dependence unquestionable will.

DISGRACEFUL OUTRAGES.

We regret to learn that a vile display of malice was exhibited in two places, in St. Roch's Ward, on Saturday night. At about half-past eight o'clock, as Mr. Rheaume, Advocate and City Councillor, was seated reading in his library, with Mr. LeFrancois, Registrar of the Cathedral Rider, close by on a sofa, a transaction took place followed by other rapidly succeeding acts of boasting miscreants, and a shower of broken glass from the double windows on both sides of the room. On recovering from their astonishment, they saw that something had been thrown simultaneously through the two front window sash, and, without loss of time they were on the road. They searched, however, in vain—no person was to be found, though the night was anything but dark. His Worship the Mayor having received intimation of the occurrence, drove at once to the house and saw the wicked and deliberate nature of the act. Two large bottles charged with ice to give some additional weight, were thrown sovereignly from without and with such accuracy of aim, that one of them passed through Mr. Rheaume's hair and deeply indented the mahogany boot case behind his bearing a mark as produced by a bullet fired from a gun. The other bottle—or rather long stone jar—crossed the track of its companion and narrowly escaped striking Mr. Rheaume's son, a lad of thirteen, who was sitting with his face to turn the windows at the time. There were neither curtains nor shutters to the windows, so that the miscreants outside must have fully expected to injure if not to kill their intended victim. While the Mayor was examining the premises, information arrived that a similar outrage had been perpetrated about the same time, at the dwelling of Mr. Blain, a respectable young man living in the vicinity. Our reporter was unable, from want of time, to visit the scene of the other outrage. Mr. Rheaume informs us that threatening allusions have been made regarding himself at numerous partizan meeting of late, and as late as Tuesday evening last, a man was overheard in the gallery of the City Hall, to remark that he would not hear him speak there again.—Quebec Chronicle, Feb. 25.

WHAT IS THE CARDROSS CASE.

At the present moment the religious community of Scotland, to some extent, are seriously exercised upon this much-talked of, and much-written on matter. In our opinion, as we have expressed ourselves before, the ministerial interest being by a few ministers pitted against the Church and the ordinary worldly interests of adherents of the Church Militant has been said in pulpit and on platform on the matter, that the speakers themselves will ere long wish had never been permitted to pass their lips; for as the agitation grows and grows, men's passions—as Ministers are but men—grow quite as hot, and things have been advanced that all will be heartily ashamed of, when cool reflection will take the place of redhot controversy. The plain matter has been grossly misrepresented on the platform and it is only from attention to the facts that the true matter in dispute can be made understandable. It is a simple matter at first, and so it really is; but all sorts of clouds have been cast about it, so that the simple matter is a hard thing to see through; but to plain simple language it is this:

In the parish of Cardross, a minister of the Free Church was brought up before the Presbytery recently of drunkenness and other crimes. The Presbytery found him guilty: he appealed to the Synod and the Synod found him innocent of the charges. The Presbytery appealed to the Assembly, and the Assembly maintained the sentence of the Presbytery against the Synod. The Rev. Mr. McMillan was suspended; but he, by advice of the majority, brought the matter before the Court of Session, on the grounds that he has been refused the right of giving evidence to counteract the evidence brought against him. The Court took the matter into consideration, and concluded to leave the question brought to. This is the entire question, and the real row is only about this simple fact that the majority of ministers and elders who condemned Mr. McMillan are displeased that their action in suspending the Minister McMillan is to be examined, whether it was done by Church rules, according to use and wont, or by their creation. They claim that what they do as a Church Court, no other Court has a right to call into question. Herein, we with the entirety of the liberal press of Scotland, think them wrong for we maintain that the civil law is the highest power in the realm, and it must of consequence take cognisance of all that the citizens of the realm do. It is but a poor excuse to escape its jurisdiction, for a half dozen individuals to assert that they are a majority of a Church Court, and having made a certain decision—wrong, unjust, tyrannical—no matter, they have made that decision, and they defy the justice of the Civil Court to take their decision into consideration on the appeal of the party wronged. Divested of all verbiage and subterfuge this is the whole matter. Now a man may be a minister or member of a Church, but he is a member of society as well, and in fact he is a member of the civil body before he can be by capacity a member of the Church, and he in no case loses his civil rights by joining any lawful organization what ever so if he is wronged, or thinks he is wronged in the Church, or in the old-fellowship union, he never loses his privilege to appeal to the highest court in the realm to say whether he has been wronged or not.—This is all Mr. McMillan has done, and this is all that the former is about; but the very fact that the Civil Court says, Yes Messrs. Ministers, we can in justice to civil liberty, take cognisance of your doings whether singly or collectively, in placing the Church under the law of the land, and these ministers that make all this disturbance must that they form the Church Court in Church Court business, be it the session, the Presbytery, Synod or Assembly, are to be above and beyond all civil courts whatever. This is the old Romanism that existed before the Reformation; but in these days the doctrine is intolerable, that you must give up your civil rights in all that the Church can take it on itself to oversee. Church Courts are just as liable to errors as any other courts, and it would be bringing us to a fine pass indeed, to have the principle admitted that no matter how the Church Court erred, the sufferer must submit, be wronged, maligned, ruined, because the Church Court blundered or was malicious. No, no, this must not be, and while we claim, as Protestants, the full free right to have our own belief, free exercise of conscience, and make our own Church laws, regulations and customs, we claim as Protestants still, that the highest civil source of justice shall be the umpire when it is disputed whether we have or have not carried our own Church laws, regulations, and customs, into honest practice. Mr. McMillan in this Cardross case, says they have not, and he asks the Civil Court of the realm to say whether they have or have not; the Civil Court says it will examine and say.—So this is the true, simple source of all this ministerial agitation. In one word, we find that a Church is a society permitted by the law of the land; but the law of the land is paramount to the Church in all that is not merely matter of belief and Church discipline. When the Church or majority of the Church violates the law or its own laws, then it must submit to be brought into Court, and this is the sum and substance of the Cardross case.

When it comes before the Court, the decision of the Church may be maintained as a just decision, or it may be reversed as an unjust one; but herein lies the whole dispute. Some of the clergy maintain that just or unjust it shall stand for no Civil Court should have the power to overlook either their justice or injustice, while another party maintains that the high tribunals of the land ought to be called upon to decide whenever right and justice are in question. The question, in a word, then is, did the majority in this case violate their own laws, or did they not? the Court of Sessions is to decide and all the clamor is about nothing less and nothing more than this—nothing whatever to do with belief. How different and how unjustly the sectarian press, and particularly the New York Observer, put it, our readers can see from this simple statement. It is a sad thing to think of, when we see our religious newspapers fall back on misrepresentation, for that is but another phrase for falsehood; for it does damage to our Saviour's universal christianity.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY.

The New York State Legislature has passed resolutions setting forth that the Reciprocity treaty, considering the present high Canadian tariff, is unfair and derogatory to the interests of said State; and recommending the abrogation of the Treaty.—The vote was 18 against 7, the Republicans being the majority. The resolutions of course require to be ratified by Congress before any action can be taken upon them, but when we remember that Congress and the President too is Republican, we may justly fear that a misfortune is about to happen us. So much for the policy of Finance Minister Galt!

PRESIDENT LINCOLN INAUGURATED.

Washington advices bring the welcome news that Mr. Lincoln was duly inaugurated President of the United States on Monday, 4th inst., without the least sign of disturbance. Mr. Lincoln, in his inaugural address, tells the people of the Southern States, who are apprehensive that by the accession of a Republican administration their rights will not be endangered, that there has never been any remarkable cause for such apprehension. He says "I declare that I have no purpose, directly or indirectly, to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so and I have no inclination to do so." On the point of secession the President is cautious and firm, but conciliatory. The concluding passage says, addressing the South: "You can have no conflict without being yourselves the aggressors. You have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the government while I shall have the most solemn one to preserve, protect and defend it. I am both to close. We are not enemies but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained it must not break our cords of union. The mystic chords of memory, stretched from every battle-field and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

THE ELECTION IN GREY.

The Toronto Leader in moralizing upon the sad defeat sustained by the Ministerial candidate in Grey, has discovered that we are drifting towards the same fearful vortex which threatens to engulph the neighboring Republic. In a late number he thus pours forth his plaint:—"If proof were wanting that we are entering on that downward course in which the partial failure of the United States experiment is to be seen, it is supplied by the result of the election in Grey." He then proceeds to point out the superiority of Mr. Morrison to Mr. Purdy, and yet, despite of that superiority, the naughty electors of Grey prefer a man unable even to write an address, to the Solicitor General of the Cartier-Mc.Donald Administration—"the protege of the late Hon. Robt. Baldwin, the friend and associate of all those enlightened politicians to whom the Provinces owe so much"—"a man of varied intelligence and extensive reading, of elegant tastes and good judgment." The contrast is striking, and for aught we know the pictures drawn are correct. We know nothing of Mr. Purdy's status, but we have invariably heard that Mr. Morrison was in every respects a worthy man; too good in fact for a politician. The lesson taught by this election, if the portraitures given by our contemporary are correct, is that in order to succeed in a political career, a man must keep good company. In all probability the cause of Mr. Morrison's third defeat was his direct connection with an administration which is in bad odour with the people, and there is no doubt that many Upper Canada supporters of the Ministry, had they during their canvass avowed as explicitly their determination to uphold the present administration, would have had to stay at home. What led to the rejection in our own county of the ex-M.P.P at the last election, but his known complicity with the Government? And although Grey and Peterborough is not "the whole of United Canada," we are of opinion that a majority of the constituencies of Upper Canada would unite with Grey in voting a want of confidence in the Ministry. And although certain journals have made, and others accepted the fate of this election as a test of confidence in the administration or otherwise, we do not view it as anything of the sort. In the first place it was not a fair trial of strength, there being three candidates in the field, and secondly it was not authoritatively given or accepted as a test for either party. The former representative was a supporter of the Opposition, and it is contended as that the Ministerial vote was divided between Morrison and Gowan, that had the former singly contested the field, with the Opposition candidate, he would have won the day.—Be this as it may, the result of the election will be severely felt by the Ministry, and in all probability precipitate their downfall. The Prince of Shuffles may, however, shuffle again, and so evade what at present seems inevitable. We look forward with anxiety to the meeting of the House, which takes place on the 16th inst.

In connection with a possible appeal to the country before the ordinary period, would it not be well for our friends to take some action to secure a candidate who shall represent the views of this Reform county. Who is to be the coming man? It is thought by many that our present representative will not be a candidate; it is certain that Mr. Conger will again offer himself; beyond this we know nothing. It is high time that we begin to look around and get to work, if we would avoid a defeat.

A SEED SWINDLE.

From one of our Agricultural exchanges we learn that a seed swindle document is being scattered over the country at the present time, through the mails. Our farmer friends should be on their guard against this and like deceptions that will probably flood the country as the planting and sowing season approaches. The following is a copy of the advertisement we speak of:—

"Japanese Wheat.
TO FARMERS AND OTHERS.

We have a quantity and shall keep constantly on hand a new kind of Grain, known as Japanese Wheat, which we have secured at much expense, and we are the only persons in the country who have it in merchantable quantities. This superior grain has many qualifications that should recommend it to every farmer in the United States and Canadas. It matures in about twenty days less than Oats, and can be grown in any part of the country, for it will ripen if not sown until July; it also is raised with as little care and expense. It is unlike other wheat in every respect, except it makes a very fine white Flour. It is a most remarkable grain to stand severe drouth. It has grown last season by actual measurement, at the rate of 300 BUSHELS PER ACRE.

We know from actual experience that it will average from one hundred to one hundred and fifty bushels per acre as field crop, and it will yield fodder at the rate of three to five tons, that is equally as good for any kind of stock as the best Timothy or Clover hay. The heads will average ten inches in length; the grains are quite small. The stalk is sufficiently strong to support the head and prevent it from lodging. The grain for feed is equal to Corn, and some contend, after examining it, that it is even better for all kinds of stock, particularly horses. Hogs will fatten well on it. It weighs 56 lbs per bushel.

This is a correct description of the grain, for the truthfulness of which we can give, if required, references or certificates of very reliable farmers who have seen it growing, and the grain after it was harvested.

Any person that will send us one dollar, in gold or currency, we will send them by mail, postage paid, a sufficient amount from which they can raise enough to grow the following year at least 300 to 400 bushels. Directions will accompany each package."

The Council has granted licenses in the proportion of 1 to every 250 in the Town, taking the Census Commissioner's published statement as the basis of population.

TAVERNS LICENSED.—George Allan, Leon Caisse, Henry Lawson, John Sullivan, Lewis McGregor, G. & C. McCormick, James Bauni, J. B. Dana, A. J. Fisher, M. Hogan, T. Beatty, Joseph Sedgwick, and Ralph Francis.

SHOPS.—John Harty, James C. mphell, Glover & Robinson, John Maloney, McKellar & Cameron, John McDonell, and T. Mahoney.

MARCH FAIR.

The Quarterly Fair on Tuesday was thinly attended, and comparatively little business was done; the bad roads doubtless prevented many from coming into town. Making all due allowance, we cannot help thinking that the old Quarterly Fair system is running out. A marked decrease in the number attending the Fair has been observable in the past year. Fewer cases of drunkenness were to be seen on Tuesday, probably because fewer people were in Town. One thing we noticed very materially lessens our faith in the new License Law: the places where formerly beer was sold, and frequented by the respectable farmers, who lunched there, taking a few cakes and a glass or two of beer, were deserted, and the Taverns were patronised in an increase proportionate. The result of this will be that spirituous instead of malt liquors will be drank, and all the evils attending such a change accrue.

☞ Dr. F. Dellenbaugh, the old German physician, from Buffalo, N. Y., is at Caine's Hotel, where he will remain till the 12th inst. The Dr. desires us to mention that he is the only Dr. Dellenbaugh from Buffalo, and that all others of the name are impostors.

☞ The assessment of the Town will be correctly made this year, if such a result depends on the number employed to accomplish it. The full corps, headed by Capt. Scott, have commenced their work.

SYRIA, THE HOLY LAND AND SINAI.

Hundreds have listened, instructed and delighted, to the lectures of Rev. Lachlin Taylor, in the Wesleyan Chapel, for the past three nights. The descriptive parts of his lectures are rich and glowing, and the narratives of incidents and adventure, in the lecturer's peculiar style are entertaining in a high degree. At the close of the first lecture some rare curiosities were shown: bricks of straw and clay bearing date (known by the seal or insignia of the then reigning monarch stamped on each) of being over 3,000 years old; a mummy head, lady's hand, wheat, cat, etc.; shells from the Jordan, and other curiosities. Mr. Tylor also dressed himself in the garb of an Arab Sheik and performed the eastern mode of salutation—salaam-ale-ee. The second lecture was also well attended, many having to take seats in the gallery of the Chapel; curiosities were shown, among which were: flowers from Gethsemane and Capernium; a mumm crocidile god; a newspaper printed in Arabic; a piece of parchment made from the skin of the paschal lamb, &c. Last night the audience was larger than at the preceding lectures, and a full-sized Egyptian mummy was shown. The fourth and last lecture of the course will be given tonight.

FRANK LESLIE'S MONTHLY FOR MARCH.

The contents of the present number are more than usually varied. "Veronæ Brent" is continued, and grows more interesting and exciting. There are several original and admirable articles by new contributors, among which "Hunting in the Province of New Brunswick," by H. S. Stallknecht and A. G. Bradford, is charmingly written, and is full of interest. It is a rich number in literary excellence, and it is moreover profusely illustrated with engravings done in the very first style of the art.

The Fashion department, embraced in this fine magazine, is the fullest and most reliably complete exposition published in America. It is an authority upon all matters of taste and dress, and contains fine engravings and full descriptions of the newest styles in dress, bonnets, cloaks, laces, fancy and ornamental work. It is a matter of wonder, even to the initiated, how so large and beautiful a magazine can be afforded for three dollars. Only its immense circulation can yield Frank Leslie profit. It should be upon every lady's work-table.

THOMAS WARD, Esq.,

An old and respected resident in Port Hope, died on Wednesday, 27th ult., in the 91st year of his age.

The Guide contains an obituary from the pen of Sir John Beverley Robinson, from which it appears that "Mr. Ward was for many years Judge of the District Court. He was also for a long time Registrar of the County of Durham; and Clerk of the Peace for the District of Newcastle. Having been called to the Bar in Upper Canada in 1808, he was the second in seniority, there being but one Barrister now living who was his senior.

Mr. Ward may be said to have been one of the Pioneers of Upper Canada, there can be but few remaining whose recollection reaches back to so early a period in the settlement of the Upper Province; and perhaps not one who saw and personally knew so many of those who composed our first Executive Government; and who took part in the proceedings of our first Parliament.

Mr. Ward was an Englishman; a native of London. He came to Upper Canada in the year 1792 as Barrister's clerk with John White, Esquire, the first Attorney General. He continued to live at Niagara till 1795 when he moved to York (now Toronto) which at that time became the seat of Government. During the war of 1812 Mr. Ward commanded a detachment of Militia doing duty at Presque Isle. When the Counties of Northumberland and Durham were separated from the Home District, he removed to Port Hope, or rather, to what was then called Smith's Creek; for there was at that time no appearance of a village, on what is now the site of Port Hope. In fact there were only a few hundred inhabitants in the whole county of Durham, and not a white man was to be found in the territory which now forms the County of Peterboro', except, perhaps, two or three who traded with the Indians. Some of the old residents of Port Hope will remember having seen, more than twenty years ago, the sills of the small log house in which Mr. Ward lived, which were then still visible on the face of the rising ground, on the top of which the English Church now stands.

In 1823 Mr. Ward married a daughter of a venerable old Loyalist, Captain Playter, who was the original proprietor of the beautiful property on the River Don, now belonging to Mr. Cayley, and whom all the first inhabitants of the Town of York must well remember.

During the rest of his life Mr. Ward continued to reside on his property in the immediate vicinity of Port Hope, in the faithful discharge of public duties, and universally respected for the perfect integrity of his character, his constant loyalty, and his amiable disposition.

"All who knew him loved him,
To all he was so kind."

Never was he heard to speak an ill or unkind word of any one; and never was any one heard to speak an ill or unkind word of him: thus realizing the Scripture, which says: "with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again." Some years ago a number of his Townsmen procured a portrait of Mr. Ward from the easel of Mr. Sawyer of Kingston; and caused it to be hung in the Town Hall in testimony of their appreciation of his worth. The Free Masons, at the same time, had his portrait taken by the same talented artist; and placed it in their Hall, as a remembrance of one, who, for so many years, exemplified the highest virtues and excellencies of a craft of which he was so long a valued member.

It may indeed be most truly said of Mr. Ward that he was, in all the relations of life, blameless; a pure-minded, humble christian; whose constant aim it was "to preserve a conscience void of offence towards God, and towards man." He was indeed the peculiar "blessing" promised by our Saviour to "the Poor in Spirit, the Meek, and the Merciful." His distinguishing characteristic was the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God, of great price. In the full and good old meaning of the expressive Saxon word, he was, emphatically, 'a Gentleman,' whose invariable courtesy and politeness had the ring of the purest metal, and characterized him to the last moment of conscious existence.

To Mr. Ward was strictly applicable the commendation of the Prophet Nehemiah, "He was a faithful man, and served God above many." For years beyond the memory of most of his survivors, he manifested, by his constant exhibition of "the fruits of the Holy Spirit in all goodness, righteousness and truth," that he was indeed a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, on whose atoning sacrifice his whole dependance was placed, in whose Holy Word he meditated day and night, and in whose steps he followed, thankfully receiving every trial and trouble as part of the discipline of the Lord; and in all that was prosperous, rejoicing in the Lord. Thus tranquilly living, universally honored and esteemed; his earthly tabernacle gradually wearing away, he came to the grave "like a shock of corn fully ripe, and prepared for the granary of the Lord." Universally "temperate in all things," he knew not what illness was, his faculties were less impaired than might be expected in one who had so long exceeded the seldom passed "three score years and ten," and at last

"Death stole upon him gently,
As slumber o'er a child."

Town Council.

MONDAY, March 1, 1861.

The Council met. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, McDonald, Ormond, Dickson, Bradfield, Eastland, Maloney, Ryan, Chamberlain, Menzies, Kennedy and Stevenson.

A communication from the Hamilton City Council, relating to the burdens imposed upon Municipalities by their having assisted Railways, and asking the concurrence of the Council in petitioning the Government for relief, was read and laid on the table.

A petition from Wm. Eastland, Esq., resigning the office of Auditor for the present year, was read and received.

A report from the Committee on Charities, recommending the payment of $3 to Mrs. A. McDonald, and $3 to the Dogherty girl, was received.

A report from the Committee on Finance recommending the payment of £31 5s 0d, to Mr. Stevenson, being for a quarter's salary, due him as Mayor for the year 1859, was read, received and adopted.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Ormond,—That the Auditor's Report be referred to the Finance Committee with instructions as soon as reported on to be handed to the Mayor with a request to have it published as the law directs.—Carried.

Moved by Mr Chamberlain, seconded by Mr. Ryan.—That the Clerk do give the Representatives of the late Mr. Donald McFarlane notice to remove at their earliest convenience the buildings from off the cross street leading from Charlotte to King street.—Carried.

Moved by Mr Menzies, seconded by Mr Toole,—That a special Committee be appointed to examine the piers near Mr. Denistoun's and report to this Council as early as possible, such Committee to consist of Messrs McDonald, Ryan, Bradfield, Toole and Eastland.

It was moved in amendment, seconded by Mr McDonald,—That a sum of money not exceeding in all $100 be expended to the best advantage in filling up the piers of the new bridge at the north end of the Town, under the direction of Messrs Toole, Dickson and McDonald.—Lost.

The original resolution was then put and lost.

Moved by Mr Chamberlain, seconded by Mr Ryan,—That under the statute for regulating the number and accomodation for Taverns for the present year, they have the power to allow three Tavern keepers to dispense with the therein mentioned conditions, therefore this Council authorizes the three Licenses in the Town without the Tavern accomodation for the present year.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In the last Examiner I saw a letter from that scribbling wiseacre George Esson, wherein he threatens to dissect Mr. John Lucas and then chew him up, because he will not honestly, in his judgment, consent to swallow as truth the false and erroneous statements put forth by that oracle in regard to the Bobcaygeon settlement.

He also very modestly informs Mr. Lucas that he knows nothing about farming. George Esson of course does; he has built a barn, so has John Lucas, but I am not aware that Mr. Lucas mortgaged his farm to pay for it.

Geo. Esson also appears very concerned about the welfare of Mr. Lucas' wife and family—a subject very instructive to the public certainly. They were obliged, he says, for three years to obtain food and shelter in her father's house. Perhaps as her father I can enlighten Mr Esson a little on the matter. The case was thus: When Mr. Lucas decided on selling his farm in [illegible] in order to go and cut out a new home in the forest, I was anxious his wife and children should remain with me until such time as he had made a place suitable to take them to. I had no notion of charging him a cent for their support, but when he took them away he insisted on paying me, he did do so, and I am bound to say paid me a sum more than I considered I was entitled to take.

I believe he has also discharged all just demands on him in the neighborhood, an example Mr. Esson or any body may venture to follow without fear of reproof.

As George Esson has made this vicious and false statement relating to Mr. Lucas' family, he will, as a matter of course, state any thing to suit his purpose. If he has no better employment I have thus to take further notice of it.

WILL THE POPE REMOVE THE PAPAL SEAT TO JERUSALEM?

A correspondent of the Liverpool Mercury, writing from Rome, states that French officers have latterly been very busy in obtaining information respecting Jerusalem and the state of things in that quarter. He adds that they had been taking measurements in several localities, particularly the ground that lies about the Mosque of Omar on Mount Moriah. From Jerusalem they had gone on to Hebron, Gaza and other points, for the like purpose. It was also currently reported that a body of French troops was shortly to come to Jerusalem, while another would be stationed at Jaffa, and a third on Mount Carmel. At Beyrout, he says, the French officers openly affirmed that their government had no intention of withdrawing the force sent out, but were about to employ them shortly on a new and very different errand to that for which they ostensibly came. The French were also actively employed in making a road from the Holy City to Damascus, along which they were erecting houses at certain intervals. It is said that such a scheme as this intelligence shows to be in course of development, points to the realising of Pio Nono's favorite plan of removing the seat of the Papacy to Jerusalem.

News of the Week.

☞ At the last meeting of the St. Mary's Council a letter was read from an undertaker, who offered to furnish coffins for the Council at greatly reduced prices!

☞ A marriage recently took place in the Northern part of England, in which the parties were a widower and a widow, whose united ages reach 139 years, the eldest bridegroom having the boots of 86 summers passed over his head, and having by his first wife a progeny that numbers upwards of fifty, including children, grandchildren, and great-grand children, some of the latter being old enough to attend the wedding.

☞ An elderly Canadian employed in the vicinity of the Britannia Mills, says the Montreal Transcript, was run over and cut in two by a Grand Trunk train on Monday night in that neighborhood.

☞ A man was killed near Newbury station, on the Great Western Railway, on the night of the 27th ultimo, by a train running over him. It is supposed he was under the influence of liquor at the time, and had lain down on the track. His body was horribly mutilated, his legs and head being almost severed from his body, rendering recognition almost impossible.

☞ Mr. James Shield, an old resident of Cayuga, Co. Haldimand, lost his life on Wednesday last, by breaking through the ice on the Grand River, on which he was wending his way home from his daily labor.

☞ On Sunday last as Mr. Wm. Lemister who has been employed as night-watchman at the Great Western depot in Windsor, was taking a spirited horse to water, the property of Mr. Askew, the horse suddenly reared and threw the rider from his back. The unfortunate man fell upon his head, and his neck was dislocated. He lived a quarter of an hour after the accident.

☞ Mr. J. A. Ferguson, of Eden, Vt., missed a young colt recently, and found it three days after in the wheel pit of his saw mill, having evidently fallen from a plank seventeen feet above. The cold was got out and showed no lack of spirit from his long fast and confinement.

☞ The Owen Sound Times learns from a correspondent at the Bruce Mines that about the 1st Feb., a school teacher named Penhall, was charged with taking unwarrantable liberties with some of the female scholars. The enraged citizens caught him, tied him on the back of an ox, and marched him round the village, much to the gratification of the residents.

☞ While Mr. Alex. Macdonald of South Branch, Charlottenburg, was standing in his barn, the roof on which a large amount of snow had accumulated, gave way. Mr. Macdonald was buried beneath the debris, and before he could be dug out life was extinct.

☞ During the reception of Mr. Lincoln at Columbus, Ohio, thousands approached him to exchange salutations, and among them an interesting lady leading two beautiful children. One after the other, "Honest Old Abe" raised the children and pressed upon their cheeks a paternal kiss, which was proper and very republican.—But when the lady, with bewitching grace presented her own sweet lips in attitude to be saluted, Abraham gallantly waved his hand, and cautiously remarked: "No madam, non-intervention."

☞ During the last few months there has been a very large number of sudden deaths. Several have occurred in our own city; and our exchan

The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed in the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and conveniences hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expense, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. Poetry.

KITTY RYDER.

Kneeling by the stream I saw,
Kate, the farmer's daughter,
Drinking—in her rosy palm
Dipping up the water.

She had thrown her arm aside
Bare her arms and shoulder;
Each unconscious charm displayed
Made my love the bolder.

So I slowly, tenderly,
Went and knelt beside her—
Drank with her from out the stream—
Blessing Kitty Ryder!

And I said—"The poets think
Life is like a river;
Shall we not in wet us drink,
Always, love, together?"

Many years have passed by us,
Like the flowing water,
But I drink life's streams to-day,
With the farmer's daughter.

DELIGHT AND POWER OF MUSIC.

"Singing is the act of giving expression through the medium of regulated sounds to the passions that agitate the human mind."

In the musical age, when almost every one loves music, a few plain remarks will no doubt be found interesting and instructive to all classes of the community. Music, or singing, embraces a very wide range, comprising Vocal and Instrumental, as well as Sacred, Secular, and Profane Music. I will therefore endeavour just now to take a passing glance at the whole, and attempt to show the beauty, piety, excellency, delight and power of music on the human mind.

Music is a delightful, interesting and pleasing science. I, myself, love singing, and delight to see and hear everybody singing around me, whether old or young male or female. To witness a lady sitting majestically at that noble instrument, the piano, and while she plays sweetly and sings melodiously some favorite air, as her pretty fingers run swiftly along the keys, O, it is soul-cheering, delightful, and electrifying; and brings to my remembrance the saying of a certain man, who on hearing Jenny Lind sing, declared she was not a woman but an angel! Thousands of females in our day are virtuous, benevolent, kind, and courteous, who are an honor to their race; but though good singers, are possessed of these "good fruits," we think none are justified in lauding them as emblems of these heavenly beings. By the way, I may mention, that Robbie Burns, the Scottish national Bard, often declared that women were angels. On one occasion he went into a highland kirk and seated himself in a pew beside a lady. After the Old Hundred and Bangor had been pathetically sung by the congregation, the minister read his text, and proceeded to unfold the blessings of the gospel and the riches of divine grace, and also descanted on the evil and dangerous nature of sin and its consequences. The poet, perceiving that the lady shed tears and was deeply affected, took up her bible, and with his pencil wrote the following stanza upon the blank leaf of it:—

"Dear lady, do not take the hint,
No idle thought pursue;
'Twas only sinners that he meant,
Not an angel such as you."

Be this as it may, I maintain that any lady who has no taste or relish for music, who hates to be charmed with a song, is like an ill-tuned instrument, and (as the old maids say), she is a cankered being; but cheer her up with a lively song, instead of being cankered, she is quickly transformed into a canary, cheerful, good-natured creature.

It is the delight and power of music that accomplishes all this, as its electrifying influence braces the nerves, invigorates the heart, promotes health, produces contentment, and makes us cheerful and happy. Innumerable cares and perplexities encompass us daily, which has a tendency to make our hearts sad, and damp our ardent spirits; but melt to the gospel, singing is invariably adapted for dispelling the gloom and make it quickly vanish, for, as the song says, "I'll hold it one of the wisest things to drive dull care away."

Music is of Divine origin—it is heaven born, it is the breath of the Eternal, it is a delightful exercise of the saints on earth, and will be the theme of the redeemed in heaven throughout eternity,—who are at this moment, in the realms of bliss, praising God and singing, "Unto Him who hath loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood." Rev. Rev. 1st, 5, 6.

When Jehovah thundered the ten words out of nothing by his Almighty power; when he made the fish of the sea, the birds of the air, the beasts of the field, and every creature that moves on the face of the earth, he created man, the noblest of all the works of His Own hands, and endowed him with every good, then, endowed the heavenly host, in mystery of delight, burst into a song of triumph, and all "the sons of God shouted for joy." Again, when we look up to the firmament and behold the sun, moon, and stars, and we see that first the works of the Almighty shone on Mount Sinai, and we read and watch it, with only ten wonders with the Psalmist, "I will praise the Lord as long as I have being. I will sing praises unto my God while I have behold. O, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

Music is not only Divine, but of ancient origin. Tubal Cain, long before the flood, taught men to handle the harp and organ. Indeed remembrance that to was destroyed at the opportunity of singing every living creature with music. Moses and Miriam celebrated their Divine deliverance with music. David with music, and by music cast out the evil spirit from Saul. Jehoshaphat, when he went out against the Moabites and Ammonites, appointed singers to go before the army, and praise the beauty of holiness, while they went out and said, "Praise the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever." Music has the power and power of music, a soul, another temple away truth. Again it is a real fact, and no fiction, that lately a shipmaster from the north of Scotland arrived at Montreal; and, having become acquainted with a respectable young lady, named Miss Lindsay, at a house where he had occasion to call, he asked permission to take her to Mr. Milne's concert. The melodious soul-thrilling notes of the vocalist made a deep impression on all; but there was one song that went to the very soul of the love stricken Captain—and that song was, "Will ye gang to the Highlands, Lizzie Lindsay, my bride and my darling to be." As these words thrilled through the truest heart of the son of Neptune, he looked smilingly in the bonny face of Lizzie Lindsay, who was sitting by his side, and at once felt keenly the power of music and love. He had come from the Highlands, and became so enraptured, that he could not believe but that he himself was singing the song. The result is soon told,—the heart of Lizzie Lindsay soon responded to the call, and she too been led to the altar of Hymen by the gallant sailor, and is going to the Highlands, his wife and his darling to be," and may every thing that's good attend them. Now, this is a useful lesson for all young men who want to get married—go and do likewise.

—Music has such a powerful effect that providentially it has often been the means of curing Lunatics, and bringing them to a sane state of mind, one instance of which I will now relate.

A Colonel, in one of the armies under Napoleon, received a severe wound in the head. He was taken to the hospital, and, with much difficulty, the wound was healed; but, unfortunately, he was bereft of his reason. Every endeavor proved in vain to enable him to distinguish good from evil, and at length it was agreed upon to place him into some Lunatic Asylum. Previous to his removal, his accomplished daughter visited her poor father; and it so happened, that on that day, an eminent physician called at the hospital. He was informed of the colonel's case, and likewise of the presence of his amiable daughter. The physician requested an audience with the maiden, which was at once granted. His first question was, "Do you know any favorite song or tune your father delighted in?" "Yes, I do," was her reply. The physician then instructed her what to do. Accordingly, next morning (the day appointed for the colonel's removal) his lovely daughter took her seat at the piano-forte in a room adjoining that which her father occupied, while the rays of the sun, in all its summer morning splendour, shone full on her lovely figure, developing her perfect symmetry and exquisitely formed forehead. The door of the room she was seated in, as well as that of her father's, stood ajar, while the physician watched to see the result of his plan. The maiden began to sing one of her father's much admired songs, accompanied on the piano-forte. Her sweet silvery voice, mixed with the full tones of the majestic instrument, had an immediate effect on the mind of her poor father, who mechanically rose to his feet—he seemed to stretch himself to an unusual height—his hair stood on end—his eyes wandered vacantly round the room—and, at length, he gave a deep long-drawn sigh, which came from the very bottom of his heart, and then sunk upon his chair. The physician was watching,—the music still continued to fill the house with seraphic sounds, and the whole atmosphere seemed filled with music, so full, so angelic, did the colonel's daughter sing and play. The patient by this time showed symptoms of recovery. He raised his chest erect—threw his arms on the back of his chair, and wept! Yes, the flood-gates of his heart burst open—his senses were restored—and he cried, "My daughter! where is my daughter?" The physician, perceiving the steps effected, exclaimed, "He is cured—he is cured!" The music ceased—the colonel's daughter sprang from her seat at the piano, and flew to the embrace of her now sensible parent, and sobbed aloud, "Father—dear, dear father!" So that day, the colonel was restored to his happy home, his loving wife, and his affectionate family.

Finally, music charms men, women and children. The enlivening strains of a cheerful tune on a musical instrument forces us almost insensibly to arise to our feet, and compels us to dance. It even has a charm on the brute creation: horses, dogs, lambs, and other animals, listen instantly to music, and leap about with joy. The little birds praise God, nothing warbles sweetly in the green grove—hills, dales, rivers, lakes—all creation praise Him. "Both young men and maidens, old men and children, let them (and every one who has breath) praise the name of the Lord."

Praise God, who is the Way and Truth,
Praise him ye children in your youth,
Praise him, young men, and Christ adore,
Praise him old men for evermore,
Let all the people, rank and degree,
Feel the delight and power of music.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

One hundred years ago there was not a single white man in China; Methodism was unknown in Illinois Territories. Then what is now the most flourishing part of America, was as little known as the country round the Mountains of the Moon. It was not until 1769, that the pioneer of Kentucky, and perhaps also of Tennessee, left his home in North Carolina to become the first settler of Kentucky. The first, pioneer of Ohio did not settle till twenty years after that. Kentucky was then a wilderness, inhabited by Indians, who disputed every inch of the ground with the white man. Boonesborough, the first settlement made in Kentucky, was founded in 1775. In that year, Daniel Boone, with a few companions, commenced a settlement on behalf of others. At last, in the autumn of that year, the first party arrived, consisting of only twenty-five persons, men, women and children. Their journey had been a most harassing one. They had to cut their way through the forests with tomahawks, and were frequently attacked by the Indians. Their cattle were killed, and they were compelled frequently to encamp in the open air. Their provisions were scanty, and they suffered much from hunger. Their first encampment was made on the banks of the Kentucky river, where they were attacked by the Indians, and several of the party were killed. The survivors, however, succeeded in erecting a fort, which they named Boonesborough, after the name of their leader. Other settlements were soon made, and in the course of a few years Kentucky became a flourishing State. Its progress was rapid, and in 1792 it was admitted into the Union as the fifteenth State. Its population in 1790 was 73,677; in 1800 it was 220,955; in 1810 it was 406,511; in 1820 it was 564,317; in 1830 it was 687,917; in 1840 it was 779,828; in 1850 it was 982,405; and in 1860 it was 1,155,684. Its progress in wealth has been equally great. In 1850 its property was valued at $272,317,687; in 1860 it was valued at $556,848,335. Its progress in education has been equally great. In 1850 there were 1,713 public schools, with 1,713 teachers, and 68,507 pupils. In 1860 there were 5,226 public schools, with 5,226 teachers, and 170,000 pupils. In 1850 there were 1,714 persons in the State who could neither read nor write. In 1860 there were 236,252 persons who could neither read nor write. THE DESTRUCTION OF NINEVEH.

Nineveh was the capital of the Assyrian empire. Tacitus looked on it as "the most ancient of Assyria." Moses, Gen. 10.11, says: "Asshur went forth and builded Nineveh." The marginal reading, without doubt ought to be preferred here: "Nimrod went out into Assyria, and builded Nineveh." This is fully established by the declaration of Micah 5:6: "And they shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof." Micah prophesied before the birth of Christ 746 years, and 140 years before the capture and ruin of Nineveh.

The same signified, "the habitation of Nin." Lucian, Xenophon, Diodorus, and Herodotus called it "the city of Ninus."—History informs us that Nimrod had the city so called, in order to immortalize the memory of his son Ninus.

The manhood greatness of Nineveh fully appeared 1230 years before Christ. Jonah, who wrote 800 years before the birth of the world's Savior, speaking of it says: "Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey."—Jonah 3:3. In reference to its inhabitants he speaks thus: "Wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right and their left hand."—ch. 4:11.—Reckoning, according to Bochart, the persons to have been infants of two years old and under, and that these were a fifth part of the whole the aggregate of the population amounted to six hundred thousand souls.

The overthrow of Nineveh was threatened through Jonah within the limits of forty days; we observe, that the king of Assyria, considering himself perfectly secure beautifully supplied his soldiers with wine, and freely partook of it himself—not knowing that he was literally fulfilling then the raps of the seer, in all the immense morning splendour, shone full on her lovely figure, developing her perfect symmetry and exquisitely formed forehead. The door of the room she was seated in, as well as that of her father's, stood ajar, while the physician watched to see the result of his plan. The maiden began to sing one of her father's much admired songs, accompanied on the piano-forte. Her sweet silvery voice, mixed with the full tones of the majestic instrument, had an immediate effect on the mind of her poor father, who mechanically rose to his feet—he seemed to stretch himself to an unusual height—his hair stood on end—his eyes wandered vacantly round the room—and, at length, he gave a deep long-drawn sigh, which came from the very bottom of his heart, and then sunk upon his chair. The physician was watching,—the music still continued to fill the house with seraphic sounds, and the whole atmosphere seemed filled with music, so full, so angelic, did the colonel's daughter sing and play. The patient by this time showed symptoms of recovery. He raised his chest erect—threw his arms on the back of his chair, and wept! Yes, the flood-gates of his heart burst open—his senses were restored—and he cried, "My daughter! where is my daughter?" The physician, perceiving the steps effected, exclaimed, "He is cured—he is cured!" The music ceased—the colonel's daughter sprang from her seat at the piano, and flew to the embrace of her now sensible parent, and sobbed aloud, "Father—dear, dear father!" So that day, the colonel was restored to his happy home, his loving wife, and his affectionate family.

Finally, music charms men, women and children. The enlivening strains of a cheerful tune on a musical instrument forces us almost insensibly to arise to our feet, and compels us to dance. It even has a charm on the brute creation: horses, dogs, lambs, and other animals, listen instantly to music, and leap about with joy. The little birds praise God, nothing warbles sweetly in the green grove—hills, dales, rivers, lakes—all creation praise Him. "Both young men and maidens, old men and children, let them (and every one who has breath) praise the name of the Lord."

Praise God, who is the Way and Truth,
Praise him ye children in your youth,
Praise him, young men, and Christ adore,
Praise him old men for evermore,
Let all the people, rank and degree,
Feel the delight and power of music.

political horizon no speck indicates the struggles which within a score of years thereafter established the greatest republic of the world. A hundred years ago there were but few newspapers in America; steam engines had not been imagined, and railroads and telegraphs had not entered into the greatest conceptions of man.—When we look back at it through the mists of history, we find that the century which has passed has been obliged to mete important events, in their bearings upon the world, than almost any other which has elapsed since the creation. A hundred years hence, what will be the developments!

THE DESTRUCTION OF NINEVEH.

Nineveh was the capital of the Assyrian empire. Tacitus looked on it as "the most ancient of Assyria." Moses, Gen. 10.11, says: "Asshur went forth and builded Nineveh." The marginal reading, without doubt ought to be preferred here: "Nimrod went out into Assyria, and builded Nineveh." This is fully established by the declaration of Micah 5:6: "And they shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof." Micah prophesied before the birth of Christ 746 years, and 140 years before the capture and ruin of Nineveh.

The same signified, "the habitation of Nin." Lucian, Xenophon, Diodorus, and Herodotus called it "the city of Ninus."—History informs us that Nimrod had the city so called, in order to immortalize the memory of his son Ninus.

The manhood greatness of Nineveh fully appeared 1230 years before Christ. Jonah, who wrote 800 years before the birth of the world's Savior, speaking of it says: "Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey."—Jonah 3:3. In reference to its inhabitants he speaks thus: "Wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right and their left hand."—ch. 4:11.—Reckoning, according to Bochart, the persons to have been infants of two years old and under, and that these were a fifth part of the whole the aggregate of the population amounted to six hundred thousand souls.

The overthrow of Nineveh was threatened through Jonah within the limits of forty days; we observe, that the king of Assyria, considering himself perfectly secure beautifully supplied his soldiers with wine, and freely partook of it himself—not knowing that he was literally fulfilling then the prophecy. Nahum, who fell, speaking of the spoils, said: "Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the pleasant furniture."

History informs us that many of the talents of gold and silver, which were preserved from the fire, were carried to Ecbatana. This is also in accordance with Nahum, ch. 3:25: "There shall the fire devour thee; the sword shall cut thee off." The testimony of Diodorus is to the same purpose, that the city was destroyed by water and fire.

The prophet Zephaniah, who wrote 630 years before the birth of Christ, and twenty years before the taking of Nineveh, said: "And he will stretch out his hand against the North, and destroy Assyria, and make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness. This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am and there is none beside me: how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in, every one that passeth by her shall hiss and wag his hand."—Zeph. 2:13-15.

Who, after meditating on such destruction minutely specified many years in advance, in one instance 103 years and in another 200 years, can call in question the truths of the Bible? Common honesty asks, who? Undeniable facts ask, who?

Bishop Newton makes the following pertinent remarks on the destruction of Nineveh: "What probability was there that the capital city of a great kingdom, a city which was sixty miles in compass, a city which had walls a hundred feet high, and so thick that three chariots could go abreast on them, which had one thousand five hundred towers, of two hundred feet in height; what probability was there that such a city should ever be totally destroyed? Let us suppose that a person should come in the name of a prophet, preaching repentance to the people of this kingdom, or otherwise denouncing the destruction of the capital city within a few years. "Will an overflowing flood with God make an utter end of the place thereof? he will make an utter end: its place may be sought, but it shall never be found." I presume that God who could deferring wrath over Israel, to mercy, suspended the approaching blow, because the works of repentance were the fruit of his Spirit from the heart of the people. About two hundred years after this, however, the long continued blood guiltiness of the inhabitants had become intolerable, and wantonness and cruelty were fearfully practised.

The Medes and the Babylonians were the instruments selected for the purpose. These tools of the Almighty, after a season of preparation, came to do their work. The king, Sardanapalus, a luxurious effeminate prince, who was given up to sensuality, and who had been warned by a dream, that his empire, at the time appointed, would be taken away, determined, when he found upon a story which, following that "the blessed spirits got away on the ropes they threw with his drove (other day, and he hadn't seen nothin' at him since." The bloods dressed all impressive of the animal in question, and when they of thinking at each other, proceeded to condole him on his fall in the late battle. He smiled, and calmly replied that he was not dead, but only feigned himself so, in order to escape the fury of the conquerors, and that he would soon be at the head of another army. All hands now began to prepare him, which they did with diligence, upon the success of the plot. The happy pair were duly made a few days ago, in the unutterable disgust of the jilted fair, who was robbed of the darling of her heart by her gentle mammy. The widows of the district feel elated at the success of the veteran of 50, who succeeded in bearing off the prize from the juvenile of 20, the age of the disappointed one. The latter, with some sympathizing young female friends, endeavoured to get up a demonstration with tin pans and kettles to welcome the return of the deceitful pair. The first husband of the new triumphant wife died some ten months ago in the hospital and of the Newport Union House.—Liverpool Herald.

WHO SAW THE STEER?

The richest thing of the season, says the Newburyport Herald, came off the other day in the neighborhood of the market:—The greenest, dandiest imaginable dressed out in a shepherd hat, a long blue frock coat, a pair of calculate jeans, big as gunnies, white linen collar, where—half a dozen guns were supporting the dove in direction round the section, and other unnerving for first surprise at the late summer—around of the, (some supposing it was of the season, upon a story which, following that "the blessed spirits got away on the ropes they threw with his drove (other day, and he hadn't seen nothin' at him since." The bloods dressed all impressive of the animal in question, and when they of thinking at each other, proceeded to condole him on his fall in the late battle. He smiled, and calmly replied that he was not dead, but only feigned himself so, in order to escape the fury of the conquerors, and that he would soon be at the head of another army. A MOTHER AND DAUGHTER RIVAL WOOERS.

The tender susceptibilities of many a fair damsel residing at Ripon were lately shocked by the matrimonial monstrosity and atrocity that has seldom been equalled in those virtuous vales. The question has been seriously discussed in all its aspects, by not only the maidens and widows of the district who are the parties principally interested, but also by the married folks, the even truer of whose scarps has been disturbed by a gross demarcation of the laws of propriety if not of nature. Some twelve months ago a lad of the village wooed, and, it was supposed, won, the blushing affections of a lass who resided with her father and mother. After the usual preliminaries of wooing and cooing had been exhausted, the young couple panted for the nuptly to be found in the honeymoon. But a difficulty presented itself. The intended bride had a little of the becoming pride of her sex, and she demurred to marry her swain until he had equipped himself with a new suit of clothes, in which to exhibit to advantage on his wedding day the well-knit and muscular limbs and whipcord sinews that would make the bride the envy of the lasses around.—Jobbin, not being well up in this world's wealth, was somewhat disconcerted at this condition which it was not easy to comply with. Now, it so happened that about six months previously the mother of the gentle maid had become a widow, and the first bitter pang of grief having subsided the buxom widow commenced to look out for a helpmate, and after scanning the horizon in search of a mate she at length fixed her fascinating glance on no other than her daughter's betrothee, promising to take him with or without a suit as it best suited himself, inasmuch as she only wished to oversee his person and not his clothes. This adroit proposition was, still in her beloved, readily assented to, and the daughter's affections were duly transferred to the mother, to the horror of all the maids of the district, who look with disgust upon the success of the plot. The happy pair were duly made a few days ago, in the unutterable disgust of the jilted fair, who was robbed of the darling of her heart by her gentle mammy. The widows of the district feel elated at the success of the veteran of 50, who succeeded in bearing off the prize from the juvenile of 20, the age of the disappointed one. AN HONORABLE ANTAGONIST.

The Independance Belge tells the following story of a young man who had squandered at the gambling table of one of the German Baths his entire fortune, amounting to about eight hundred thousand francs. He had lost, successively, park, chateau, city mansion and country house, and there remained to the unfortunate gamester, out of all his estates, only a single spot of ground—small orange plantation—which he had carefully excepted from his other stakes. The winner (for his antagonist had been the same person) was an Englishman, philanthropic and stout in appearance, but whose curiosity was aroused at the collected of the ruin youth for the preservation of a dilapidated and picturesque ancient green house, containing a few boxes of orange trees. "What are you going to do with this?" he asked. "Let me play for it," replied the young man. "This orangery is a souvenir, a relic of my childhood. My mother has passed many hours there with me. I play for there; I may try to live there, but I would blow out my brains rather than stake and lose a single flower of those trees." "I will one just one throw more," said the Englishman, "I will propose as a stake. Since you have such a fancy, I will play with you for that—a single orange-blossom. Will you consent to it?" "But what could you wager on your side against a flower, if I consent to play?—"Oh! a mere trifle, of course. I, too, would sacrifice a little sentiment. Here is an autograph, for instance, which I will deposit as a wager in the hands of a third person." The young man laughed and nodded. Notwithstanding his first sentiment, in now no profession of the offering of a flower to a house, the god who had served him so ill. As the game was about to commence, the Englishman said to the young Frenchman, "You smoke, you gentleman, if you will, to accept the stake, however ridiculous it may appear to you for a wager, because I have conditions in your favor, my lord." Gambling took for the game commenced, and in a few moments the young man had gained the mysterious orangery. He received it with some emotion, but how already was it increased, when he read a donation, on regular form, of the eight hundred thousand francs that he had lost! The blush of shame mounted to his face. He protested; he refused; he declared that the bargain was not. "I have your word of honor," replied the Englishman, smiling; "if the agreement was made in earnest. If I had won, I should have claimed the orange-blossom." "But a mere flower against a fortune!" "You thought more of your champagne, four-in-hand, and stable there, than of the eight hundred thousand francs. The stable was opened." After two hours of debate, most of them coolly, decided that the Frenchman should accept; and he did—on condition that Lord Z—— should remain his dearest friend.

THE EFFECT OF SECESSION IN CANADA.

(From the Liverpool Journal.)

There are many phases of the present American political crisis very encouraging to our own possessions on that Continent, not the least of which is the contrast which is presented between a republican Government and the colony of a limited monarchy—the one now in the throes of an expected dissolution, and the other in the quiet and prosperous enjoyment of a liberty such as other people on the face of the earth can boast of, and which contrast must tend to solidify the institutions of the latter. We would not make invidious comparisons, or in thought in any way to make capital for our own possessions out of the troubles of a friendly neighbor; nor have we any desire to witness the glorious experiment of a true republican form of Government prove a failure; but we cannot view the present agitation between the conflicting parties without being almost driven to put the question—How will this affect us. There is no doubt whatever that, should the present difficulties in the States terminate in secession, it will be better for Canada—better in every respect.

Up to the present time the prosperous United States have looked upon Canada as a rich and influential neighbor would upon a poorer neighbor, and have not considered her of sufficient political importance to consult in any way, their own position having been hitherto so secure; but now, when the Northern States are likely to have a very powerful and dissatisfied neighbor in the Southern Confederation, they are looking around for support; and we find that Canada takes her rank in the new formation and arrangement of forces as a power which may be of considerable importance in the history of the American continent remaining yet to be written. We find the Governor of Virginia hinting at this probability in his message recently to the Legislature of that State. "Let New England and Western New York (and he might have added the North-western States) be sloughed off and form an alliance with Canada." Several of the leading papers and speakers of New England have also shown a leaning in this direction; and there is no doubt that, whichever way the important dispute between the rival sections in the States may be settled, all must tend to the benefit of Canada.

Canada never was in a more prosperous and settled condition than at this moment. The crop of 1860, we are informed on the highest authority, was so abundant as to put the farmers into the position that they were in 1856. The trade returns of the colony show a large and steady increase, and the spirited encouragement they have given to their own line of steamers, against heavy odds in the way of indirect competition from the mother country, show unmistakably that they need not be ashamed to shake hands with their neighbors across the "Falls."

Immigration to the colony contributes in a large measure to the stability of the country, and this is still going on.

From the year 1841 to 1856 inclusive 647,000 souls emigrated to Canada. The bone and sinew of this country, our best artizans have been making for the United States; but if the Canadian Government would adopt a more liberal policy and give fuller information on this side as to the capabilities of the soil and the facilities for obtaining homesteads in their most fruitful districts, emigration would be increased enormously, and England would indirectly benefit thereby. To all travellers through Canada it is a matter of astonishment and regret, on witnessing the universal prosperity of those who have emigrated to the country, that so many of our small farmers and agricultural laborers in the old country should be content to grind under rent, tithes, and taxation, which, like a canker worm, eat up the produce of their farms, leaving nothing for themselves but a bare subsistence, whilst within a few day's travel lie millions of acres of the richest and most productive land the sun ever shone upon, and which can be their own and their heirs for ever by merely asking for it. A settler can hold his farm without rent, tithes, or taxes; and nothing is required but energy, hard work, sobriety, and economy to enable him in a few years to become independent. Numbers who landed in Canada a few years since with but a few shillings in their pockets are now in circumstances of ease and comfort, and many are even in the enjoyment of wealth. However, there are some men who think nothing valuable they do not pay for. These can be accommodated, for the Government have set apart, in addition to free grants of 100 acres, lands en bloc, and which are sold in quantities varying from 40,000 acres to 100 or 200 acres, at about 2s per acre; and some good land as low as 10d per acre.

Of the free grants, 100 acres will be given to every male applicant who is eighteen years of age, subject to such conditions only as are imposed for the benefit of the emigrant himself and his neighbors.

On the settler performing the conditions he becomes entitled to his farm free for ever. The above lands are fertile, and spacious enough to maintain all the surplus population of our country. They are in the neighborhood of already cultivated farms, and next to towns, railways and markets.—In the valleys of some of the rivers in which these lands lie, it is stated, upon authority, that wheat has been grown after wheat for twenty years; and the natural productiveness of the soil is such that with ordinary regard to change of crops the land will prove highly remunerative for many years without manure.

These lands are watered by fine rivers abounding with excellent fish, and the forests are plentifully stocked with game, large and small, so as not only to afford at all times food for the settler, but the excitement of the chase when farming operations are suspended.

It is not generally known that in Canada there are upwards of 2,000 miles of railway in operation at the present time, affording cheap and ready communication with the great markets at remunerative prices. The climate, though severe, is healthy, the general opinion in England being the reverse quite erroneously. A year's observation showed 260 fine days, and 96 of rain or snow.

Canada is, altogether, one of the most important and prosperous colonies attached to the British Crown, and will bear comparison with any other in the British possessions—and, indeed, with any other country in the world, with an equal population, for its boundless resources, its liberal government, its system of education, its industrial wealth, and for the energy and intelligence of its people; and we have no doubt but a glorious future is being wrought out for this colony, and that the storm which is now raging around her will but settle her deeper and stronger in her foundation.

☞ The Spanish minister, the two Archbishops, and the other gentlemen called from Madrid, who recently arrived in New York, have received considerable attention from prominent Spanish citizens, and from Roman Catholic Southerners. They are said to exhibit confidence in the speedy relation of such relations between Spain and the Confederate States as will drive the Juarez party from power.

FIFTY DAYS OF AMERICAN HISTORY.

On the 6th November, 1860, the people of the United States elected the fourteenth President—Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois. On the 20th December, South Carolina—with her white population of 301,186—passed an ordinance of secession. This was followed by the seizure of the revenue cutter Aiken, and of the United States Arsenal. On the 26th of December, Major Anderson moved from Fort Moultrie to Fort Sumter, and so took command of Charleston Harbor. On the 27th of Jan. Forts Pulaski and Jackson, and the United States Arsenal at Savannah, with Fort Macon and the arsenal at Fayetteville, N. C., were seized. On the 3rd, Fort Morgan, near Mobile, and the Mount Vernon arsenal, were taken. On the 6th, the arsenal at Apalachicola, and on the 8th Forts Johnson and Caswell, in North Carolina, were also seized. The same day the Florida Convention adopted secession resolutions. On the 9th, Mississippi followed suit, while at Charleston the New York steamer Marion was seized, and the Star of the West fired into. On the 10th, Fort M'Rae, at Pensacola, and on the 11th, Forts Pike, at St. Philip, and Jackson, with the arsenal at Baton Rouge, were seized. On the 12th, Fort Barrancas and the Pensacola Navy Yard, were taken. On Sunday, January 20th, the ship Island Fort was taken by Captain Howard. On the 24th, Governor Brown, of Georgia, seized the arsenal at Augusta. Louisiana seceded on the 26th, and Texas on the 1st of February, about which time the revenue cutter M'Clelland fell into the hands of the secessionists. February 2nd, the arsenal at Little Rock, Ark., was taken. February 8th, the Montgomery Convention proclaimed the "Confederate States of America," and elected Jefferson Davis President of its provisional government. The same day, five New York vessels were seized in the port of Savannah, by order of Governor Brown, and subsequently released. On the 16th, Jefferson Davis was inaugurated President of the Southern Republic and delivered his message.

THE BONAPARTE FAMILY SUIT.

Judgment was delivered by the tribunal of Seine in the Bonaparte-Paterson case on Friday, Feb. 15. The court declared that as the object of the demand made by Madame Elizabeth Paterson and James Bonaparte, her son, was the liquidation and the division of the succession of the Prince Jerome, who died on the 24th of June, 1860; and, inasmuch as among the grounds of opposition to the demand is one that the claim has been already judged by two decisions of the conseil de famille, dated the 4th day of July, 1860, which proclaimed the nullity of the marriage of the 24th of December, 1803, and its invalidity even as regards property, the Court added:—"It is expedient above all to examine the validity of this ground of opposition, inasmuch as if it be well founded it would establish a peremptory exception to the present demand, and it would no longer belong to the tribunal to examine the other grounds of opposition, or to decide whether the marriage is not null for having been contracted in a clandestine manner, or whether Miss. Elizabeth Paterson could rely on her good faith in the legal acceptance of the term, or what efficacy should be attributed to the decrees of the 11th and 30th Ventose of the year 13; and, in fine, whether the possession of a position claimed by the parties represented by M. Berryer does not meet an energetic, spontaneous and manifest contradiction in the simple fact of the second marriage contracted in 1807, by Prince Jerome and the Princess Catherine, of Wurtemberg, on the faith of the legal nonexistence of the first marriage; and whether, consequently, the title of relative given to Jerome Paterson be according to the habitual relations of life, particularly when it must be recollected that to admit a clear right by blood, would, on the part of the children born of the second marriage, be a denial of their own legitimacy."

The Court then referred to the 1,350th and 1,351st articles of the Code Napoleon, and having recapitulated all the facts of the case, as stated by counsel, it declared that the demands of Madame Elizabeth Paterson and her son, Jerome Bonaparte, are not admissible, and must be rejected, and ordered that the present judgment shall be mentioned on the margin of the deed dated the 12th of July, 1860, containing a declaration of the acceptance by Jerome Bonaparte of the succession of Prince Jerome. The Court further sentenced the claimants to pay the costs.

THE SIEGE OF GAETA.

The seige, by the Sardinians, of the last stronghold of the King of Naples, has been more protracted than was anticipated. This is partly on account of the interdict of Napoleon against an attack on the fortress from the sea. The motives of the French monarch in this apparently capricious exercise of his power have been a subject of considerable speculation; but it is now plausibly conjectured that they were based on no unfriendliness to the Italian cause, but the reverse; that, in short, it was a contrivance to prolong the struggle and thus prevent Garibaldi from launching much that he has hitherto won, in an apparently irresistible attempt, during the coming spring, to wrest the province of Venetia from the Austrians. With the tremendous fortresses of the Quadrilateral frowning upon such an enterprise, the contemplated expedition of Garibaldi, with the limited forces and means that are at his command, would certainly have been attended with great hazard; and the failure of the undertaking might have been very disastrous to the Italian cause.

The French fleet, however, has recently been withdrawn from the harbor of Gaeta, and operations against the stronghold commenced by the Sardinians from the sea. The bombardment, both from sea and land, has lately had great effect, and the latest news is that an armistice of forty-eight hours had been asked by the besieged to bury their dead, which request had been granted by the besiegers. It is not probable, in any event, that the city can hold out much longer. Later than this we have Queen's Bibs.

TROOPS FOR CANADA.

A private letter from an officer of the 60th Rifles, now in England, states that that body is coming to Canada in the spring, and that its head quarters will be Toronto. We trust this piece of intelligence is correct. We are heartily treated kindly in this respect; perhaps it is on account of the better state of society here than in other cities. At any rate, out of the eleven companies of Rifles in Canada, there is but one stationed in this city. Montreal takes four, Quebec three, and Kingston three.—Leader.

FRIGHTFUL DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY.

A gentleman of Saratoga Springs furnishes for publication the following letter from the residence of the distressed family:

"A young lady named Ordway had been present at a p. m. meeting of the Sewing Society in Prestonville, N. Y. She declined staying for the supping, though pressed to do so, as she wished her aged parents should be very lonesome, they having just buried a son on whom they placed great dependence. Seated in a sleigh ready for starting, a freight train was heard approaching. After the train passed, the driver started and was just on the track when two cars heavily loaded, which had broken from the train, and were following it rapidly on the down grade, struck the sleigh. The violence of the shock threw the lady some twenty-five feet, and over the fence, breaking some of the pickets which caught in her clothes.—Her neck was broken, and all the great arteries and veins were severed, but strange to say the skin was not broken. The young man was seriously hurt and was for a long time insensible. A messenger was sent to Miss Ordway's parents who inferred from their daughter was badly injured, and they knew nothing more until they saw her lifeless body. The scene that followed, says the letter, 'was past description.' The poor old man, in his agony, rolled upon the carpet and refused to be comforted. The poor mother was in equally deep distress. Their earthly hopes, all centered in their beautiful daughter, were thus suddenly blasted."

FRIGHTFUL SCENE IN CHURCH

An insane man, named Henry Darling, who hailed from Cass county, where he understand he has relatives, attended the Methodist Church in Parish p county, in this county, last Sunday, at which place H. D. Lamb, of Three Rivers, was preaching. The insane man after entering the church, and being quietly seated for some time, went outside the house of worship and stripped himself of every vestige of clothing he had on. In this condition in a state of complete nudity, he entered the church and deliberately walked up the isle. Under the embarrassing circumstance the preacher sat down, and the lunatic as he proved himself to be, was taken in charge by the officers of the law, and when asked what prompted his outlandish and indecent conduct, he replied that he did as the preacher told him to do; and when asked his name, he at different times gave different names, and after further examination gave sufficient evidence of his insanity. As, in the present condition of the Insane Asylum at Kalamazoo, no more male persons can be admitted there, the insane man was put in charge of Supervisor Hutchison, of Park, who on last Monday placed him in the county poor house at Vawe River, in this county.—Three Rivers (Mich.) Chronicle, Feb. 14th.

THE "GREAT EASTERN" AGAIN.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Great Eastern was to be held on on Feb. 28. The London Express says in regard to the vessel:—

"She has been within the last few weeks considerably altered and modified under the superintendence of the Directors, who are at present putting in an entirely new deck, and, with the compliance with the requirements of the Board of Trade bushing the screw with brass, or rather gun-metal bearings. No additional capital will be required to defray the expense of these alterations which will be completed by the end of the month, so that the vessel may again go to sea in March. It is probable that her next voyage will be to New York. The three actions which Mr. Scott Russell has brought against the company have, by order of the Court of Common Pleas, been consolidated into one. Mr. Russell's claim is in all £60,000. The company have against that gentleman a cross action for £130,000. Both causes will come on for trial next term, when it is probable that they may be referred to arbitration. Mr. Hope has resigned his seat at the Board, and as yet no one has been nominated to succeed him."

FEARFUL MURDER.

We have already published a short paragraph relating to the following Murder.—These fuller particulars are from the Brockville Recorder:—

The neighborhood has been startled into excitement by the perpetration of another murder, apparently as foul and devilish as either the Thompson or the Dooketater cases.

It appears that a man named Scantel Peterson and his wife lived by themselves in a house about two miles from Addison, and that on the evening of the 28th ult., the body of Peterson was found lying in a water hole in rear of his own house, the head and face being most shockingly cut. Information of the finding of the body having been conveyed to Brockville, W. A. Scheidel, Esq., Coroner, proceeded to the locality on Friday morning for the purpose of holding an inquest. The facts elicited may be summed up as follows:—Mr. and Mrs. Peterson had been visiting at a neighbor's about forty rods from their own house. They returned home in company about eight or half past eight o'clock at night. After arriving home, Peterson told his wife that he would like something to eat. Mrs. Peterson made some tea and put the dishes on the table; then Peterson went for water and Mrs. Peterson went to bed. The water hole is in the rear of the house, and is got at by descending a bank about three or four feet high. After being in bed some time, Mrs. Peterson, who was only in a doze, was aroused by hearing groans. She started out, and ran to the west corner of the house, and on looking towards the water hole saw a man standing, dressed in dark clothes. She ran back to the house, caught up a tin horn, and made her way to the neighbor's where she and her husband had been visiting earlier in the evening. When she reached the neighbor's, she exclaimed, "Samuel is missing." The horn was then blown to alarm the neighbors, when Mrs. Peterson and the neighbor returned towards Peterson's house in search for the missing man. They passed the house and went to the water hole, when Mrs. Peterson said, looking towards the hole, 'Can he be there?' The night being dark, the neighbor could not see, and made answer, "God knows, I don't know." While standing near the water hole, a light was seen moving toward them, and the neighbor went forward towards the light, when he found the light proceeded from a lantern carried by Stephen Miner, who had heard the horn blow, and was on his way to ascertain what was wrong. By the aid of the lantern they proceeded to the water hole, and on ascertaining it was the body of Peterson lying there dead.

Another neighbor having arrived, the body was removed to the house, when it was found that the head and face had been most savagely cut and battered, and the skull fractured in several places. The parties present, after consultation, came to the conclusion that the murder had been committed, subsequently to which the body had been carried to the water hole, which was an opening cut in the ice in a small running stream, the water being [illegible] size of the body. In this spot search was made for some club or weapon by which the dead man had been battered, but nothing could be found. Fresh appearances, however, they were led to believe that the murderer had stood upon the bank above the stream, and that when Peterson had been ascending to his hold of the fence to lift over his pail, the murderer, being elevated, brought the weapon down on Peterson's head, repeating the blows till the body fell back insensible into the water hole, where if life was not quite extinct, the water would quickly finish the work through suffocation.

Diligent search was made all round, and although a quantity of blood was discovered on the bank and on the fence, and several indentions seen on the edge of one of the rails, as if made by a blunt instrument, still no weapon could be found. They then tried to find strange tracks, Mrs. Peterson having said she saw a man dressed in dark clothes, standing near it, but no fresh tracks could be seen. Returning to the house, search was made in that quarter, and in the barn or stable, but with the same result. At last, attention was directed to an iron poker beside the stove, and which had been used for stirring the fire after the murder. This instrument was secured, and the wounds compared with the edge of the poker by Dr. Edmondson, who appeared satisfied that the poker had been the instrument used to effect the murder. As no robbery had taken place, and Peterson being well liked by all the neighbors, and Mrs. Peterson having more than once evinced slight symptoms of her mind being unsettled, and a small quantity of hair being found clutched in the hand of the murdered man, resembling Mrs. Peterson's, the Coroner's Jury found a verdict to the effect that Samuel Peterson had been murdered, and that they believed the murder to have been committed by his wife. Mrs. Peterson has therefore been committed to stand her trial at the Spring Assizes.

THE COMING SESSION.

The fourth session of the present Parliament commences on Monday next. As yet no hint even of the policy of the Government, the course they intend to follow, or the measures to be brought before Parliament has transpired. The mutterings of the "organs" are very indistinct and contradictory. In Upper Canada we are told that the Ministry will concede the principle of Representation by Population—in Lower Canada a very different story is told, and the idea of Representation by numbers is laughed at and spoken of as a thing impossible. We hear from certain quarters that no additional grant to the Grand Trunk will be made, from others that no further aid will be given, be the consequences what they will. The Cartier organs tell us that if any allusion is made to the Kingston difficulty it will be to sustain the Duke of Newcastle, and the McDonald organs are equally persistent that the Orangemen will be protected and the Duke condemned—and so on to the end of the chapter of public questions. All this only shows that discord is rampant in the Cabinet, and that "family jars" are about to split in twain the Coalition fabric. The Ministry evidently meets Parliament without a policy and without an understanding. The Opposition has been strengthened, and no doubt will receive Upper Canada recruits in anticipation of the change of sentiment at the approaching general election, so that a speedy dissolution of the present Parliament and the downfall of the Government is morally certain.

If we look closely at the positions of the gentlemen composing the Government, we cannot help feeling that already, although not publicly known, the Cabinet may be broken up. The defeat of Mr. Merrimon will make it necessary for him to resign the Solicitor-Generalship. The rumor that Mr. Vankoughnet will be elevated to the vacant Chancellorship is all but officially confirmed, leaving the Crown Lands Department to the management of another. Mr. Rose will be removed without doubt, making a third vacancy, and a fourth will soon have to be filled, if rumor is correct. We have it from good authority that the resignation of Mr. Sidney Smith, Post Master General, is in the hands of His Governor. The cause of Mr. Smith's resignation will be made known in due time.

With these facts before us we cannot help considering that we are on the verge of a general election. We would repeat our sincere advice to the Reformers of this County, that the time has arrived for action and any delay will be dangerous. The Reform candidates must be brought forward, and that immediately.

OCEAN STEAMERS MISSING.

The Cunard steamer Australasian, which left Liverpool on the 16th of February has not yet arrived and much uneasiness is beginning to be felt for her safety. She may have sustained damages at sea and put back for repairs—in such case the arrival of next steamer will probably confirm the fact and quiet all anxiety.

The steamship United States also left Greenock for Portland on the 16th ultimo and has not since been heard of. She had a valuable cargo and about 30 passengers.

We hope no calamity has befel these vessels and that we may soon hear of their safety.

SCHOOL EXAMINATION.—The pupils of the Union School intend to give a public exhibition on the evening of Wednesday the 20th ult. The exhibition should be encouraged.

The following letter appeared in the Review of the 15th ult.:

To the Mayor and Council of Peterboro'.

GENTLEMEN,—By Act of Parliament many years since, a fare flee was granted to be laid in the Town of Peterboro', at certain periods of the year. You have permitted your market clerk, since the incorporating of the Town, to collect and enforce fees on the appointed fare days from the farming community, who offer their articles for sale, which is considered an imposition and injurious to the fare.—My object is to know when, by incorporating the Town, it gave the corporation the above power of violating a former act, for I have no recollection of the former Act being demanded. If you have this power you should make it known, but I doubt it; otherwise why are the fares allowed to be held.

Your obed't serv't,
WM. H. MOORE.

Feb. 13th, 1861.

Up to the present no one seems to have answered or noticed Mr Moore; we intend to supply the deficiency. And first we would remind Mr. Moore that if he wished the Mayor and Council to have noticed his communication he should have sent in a copy of it in manuscript to that body, and they would have taken some notice of it. In the next place he is wrong about a free "fare" being granted by Act of Parliament to the Town of Peterborough or any other Town in Canada. Fairs have been held in consequence of the Governor's Proclamation—not by acts of Parliament. Mr. Moore is also wrong in saying that the Market Clerk has been collecting and enforcing fees on "fare days" since the Town was incorporated. The Town of Peterborough was incorporated under the General Municipal Act of 1849. A Market Clerk was first appointed, and fees first collected in 1850. If Mr. Moore will read the U. C. Municipality Act of 1858 he will see from Sec. 257, sub-secs. 6, 7 and 9, that towns can regulate markets and the selling of cattle, &c. The Town Council of Peterborough have publicly made known that they have this power, having exercised it, and it is for doubters such as Mr. Moore to show that it has not. And lastly, Mr. Moore should have known that there is a wide difference between the words fare and fair.

FIRE IN NORTH MONAGHAN.

The house belonging to Mr. George Birney, on the 11th Concession of North Monaghan, was entirely destroyed by fire, on the 4th inst. About 4 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Birney, who had spent rather a restless night attending a sick child, heard what she conceived was hailstones striking against the window; but shortly afterwards finding it to be the crackling of fire, she aroused her husband who at the time was in a sound sleep. When he arose he found the place on fire. His first impression was that he could extinguish the fire himself, which, indeed, might have been effected, had there been a sufficiency of water nigh at hand; but the flames increasing rapidly, he had to desist, finding that his efforts were altogether ineffectual to stop the ravaged element. Fearing that if he went to procure assistance all would be lost before his return, he at once set about saving such things as could be easily removed, but so quickly did the fire spread, that in less than two hours from its being first observed the place lay smouldering in ruins. Besides losing part of the furniture and bed-clothes, all their wearing apparel, culinary utensils, &c., he also lost 70 bushels of peas, 175 bushels of potatoes, 3 barrels of pork, and one barrel of beef. He estimates the loss at about $500, which is uncovered by insurance. Fortunately no lives were lost. The children, three in number, lay in the north west part of the house, adjoining where the fire originated, and Mr Birney says that if he had slept 15 minutes longer all communication between him and them would have been entirely cut off, so that they must all have perished. The fire originated in a shed at the north side of the building, where an ash-barrel was kept, and in which ashes had been put during the previous afternoon. The warning thus given, incurring such a loss of property, besides the inconvenience to which the loser will be subjected, at this inclement season of the year, in being left houseless, should cause persons to be careful respecting such matters. ROWDYISM IN BOBCAYGEON.

The Town of Bobcaygeon has acquired for itself a very unenviable notoriety. The very name is associated with lawlessness by the country generally. For years hardly a week, we might say hardly a day, has passed without some spice of violence.—Times without number have peaceable travellers been assailed by rowdies living in and around the village, and beaten without mercy. To walk on storming knight had this reign of terror grown, that many persons were deterred from passing a night in the Village lest they should be assailed by drunken brawlers. What made the evil more grievous was that Bobcaygeon is the only outlet of the vast settlement opening out in the rear of them Counties, and persons in quest of a new home along the Bobcaygeon Road were compelled to pass through this ill-famed village. As might be expected, many were deterred from passing this way at all, and from the settlement suffered. In justice to the place, we must, however, admit that the deeds of violence were confined to a few to whom the absence of a resident magistrate extended a kind of impunity. The peace-loving community will, therefore, read with pleasure the brief account sent us of the meeting the other evening. The presence of at least three resident justices and an efficient staff of constables, will tend considerably to put an end to the disturbances, and the name of Bobcaygeon will cease to cause an alarm to the home-seeking settler. We trust the memorial which has ere this been forwarded to the Governor General will receive the prompt attention it deserves. On Friday, 1st inst., a public meeting was held in Bobcaygeon to take into consideration the best means to put down the contagion by which the Village and its vicinity has been so long disgraced. Judge Thornton, Esq., Reeve of Verulam, was voted into the chair, and the proceedings opened with some very sensible remarks from that gentleman, after which the Reeve of the township arising told the hideous violence of which he had been the victim, and the necessity of exercising order.—Several resolutions were passed deprecating the frequent acts of violence which had been committed, and a memorial to His Excellency the Governor General adopted, praying that Commissions of the Peace would be entrusted to fitting parties in or near Bobcaygeon, before whom offenders might be brought at once. Mr. Hunter suggested the propriety of building a lock-up, and Sid chipyard informed the meeting that a sum of money had been voted for that purpose by the County Council, twelve months ago, and he would see it should be applied. The meeting, which was large and influential, then dispersed.—Victoria Herald.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—I see by the last issue of the Examiner that Mr. Wm. Hair has given vent to a good deal of ill feeling towards me in consequence of a few facts which I found it necessary in self defence to state regarding his son-in-law, John Lucas. Now, Sir, I quite agree with one opinion which Mr. Hair expresses by implication, namely, that no man's private affairs or business should be drawn into a discussion of this kind, yet with strange inconsistency Mr. Hair devotes a considerable portion of his letter to a most unjustifiable attack upon me in a private capacity, and insinuations regarding my private business as false as they are uncalled for; totally beside the question at issue, and disgraceful to any man who makes the slightest pretentions to respectability. I ask Mr. Hair if he is not ashamed of that contemptible littleness of soul which could gloat over such a miserable attempt at low minded revenge.

He then goes on to quote a sentence from my letter which seems particularly distasteful to him. I need only refer the readers of the Examiner to my letter of the 28th ult., to convince them that no such sentence occurs in it. With all due deference to Mr. Hair's age and wisdom I cannot forbear offering him a piece of advice which is, to learn to read before he attempts to figure before the public in a newspaper controversy. Mr. Hair corroborates every word I did say with regard to Mr. Lucas's wife and family, and I cannot be held accountable for what I did not say. Yet Mr. Hair puts into my mouth a sentence of his own manufacturing, calls it a vicious and false statement, and concludes as a matter of course that I will say anything to suit my purpose. Again I ask Mr. Hair if he is not ashamed of himself?

To conclude, Mr. Editor, I reiterate the assertion that it is dishonorable in any man to drag either his own or his opponents private affairs into a controversy of public import. I think that I can appeal to the public that I have not done so further than was made absolutely necessary for my own defence by the unprovoked slanders of my opponents, and while I emphatically reiterate that I am not only ready to stand by every word that I have written with regard to the Bobcaygeon settlement or the conduct of its managers in connection with it, but to say a great deal more if necessary, I beg leave to express the hope that I will not again be compelled to trouble the public about my own private affairs or those of any body else.

Yours, &c.
GEO. ESSON.

For the Examiner.

THE VILLAGE OF ALLANDALE.

MR. EDITOR:—Knowing that your columns are ever open for the diffusion of useful knowledge, I have ventured to give those unacquainted with the place a description of the thriving little village of Allandale Mills.

The site of the village is on the Indian River, some three miles north of Keene.—It is built on a fine level plain on both sides of the river; the houses are neither large nor lofty, but they are neat and clean, and sufficiently commodious for their occupants. The population is in the neighborhood of 300, and is daily on the increase. The first house was built in 1841.

There are two schools—one taught by Mr. Smythe, a very efficient scholar, and well qualified to teach the rudiments of a good English education; the other in a female school kept by Miss Greenshow, who teaches all kinds of fancy and plain needle work. The average attendance of the female school in winter is from 20 to 30—in summer it is less. The master's school is well attended, he having now about 70 pupils. This school-house is large and has been used for public worship until recently, but is now closed to that delightful exercise, which in a great inconvenience to the villagers, they having now to go to Keene for that purpose. I am glad to say, however, that it is their determination to overcome this obstacle by building a large two-story building to be used as a Church and all other public purposes, so that before another Christmas day they will be all right on that score.

There is a large stone Grist Mill, with 6 run of stones, which is owned and carried on by Thos. Short, Esq., M. P. P., who it cannot be disputed is an enterprising and thorough business man, and as such is highly esteemed by all classes of the community;—he is one of the largest wheat-buyers in the country and farmers taking their grain to Allandale Mills find a ready market and good prices; last year upwards of 80,000 bushels of wheat were purchased by Mr. Short; the present already purchased by Mr. Short this season is enormous, about the quantity of one thousand 30,000 bushels, out of which about 2,000 barrels of oat meal will be manufactured and sent to market; the wheat, &c., is [illegible] into the best brands of flour and shipped for foreign consumption. All the barrels to contain this vast quantity of flour and oat-meal are made on the premises, and the cooking of them is superintended by Mr. Thomas Atkins; this establishment alone gives employment to 30 or 40 men, including clerks, millers, coopers, teamsters, laborers, &c. The machinery of this beautiful mill was put in operation by Mr. Wm. Watt, who is now employed as superintendent and civil engineer of the establishment and of whom platitudes for this or future letters none dare to dispute—he is emphatically the right man in the right place.

A large amount of grinding is also done here; about 10,000 to 12,000 bushels of wheat are annually ground for home consumption. The head miller is Mr. Corry and the buyer and general manager is Mr. Richard Short.

Opposite the grist mill stands the sawmill which from appearances has endured severe hardships; nevertheless, it has done good service to the village and surrounding country since 1845, but is destined to be replaced by a new one of more modern style with all the modern improvements.—This mill though old is capable of cutting about 5,000 feet every 24 hours. In connection with the saw mill there is a stave machine and also a shingle machine. The water-power is delicious at particular seasons of the year for driving the machinery, but the deficiency is supplied by two massive engines one in the rear of the other in the grist mill.

Directly south of these mills is a Foundry and Tannery; the precise quantity of leather manufactured yearly I could not ascertain, but the business appears to be in a thriving condition. It is carried on by Mr. Wm. Calder, who also carries on the cabinetry and harness business.

In close proximity to the tannery stands the Foundry with all the requisite buildings, shops, &c., and machinery for carrying on a large business. This establishment is owned by Messrs. Mescrip & Co., whose threshing mills have been long and favorably known to the farming community; in short, Mescrip's threshing mills are unexceeding all others in this and surrounding country and monopolizing the whole business. I was informed by a good judge of mills that nothing has come into market yet equal to the Mescrip pea and grain mills. The establishment turns out from 20 to 30 of these Mills annually, and his ploughs are held in high repute; a great number of these indispensable tillers of the soil are annually despatched from Mescrip's foundry.

I observed a small house where whisky alone is sold, in an out-of-the-way place, isolated from the village proper, as if ashamed to associate with its more honorable and temperate neighbors.

The village boasts of a good country store, where all sorts and varieties of articles are kept for sale—dry-goods, groceries, hardware—also

"Screws and nails if you want any
From twenty down to ten a penny."

Attached to the store is the post-office; letters mailed at the Allandale Mills post-office can be sent to any part of the Continent, Great Britain and Ireland, and everywhere else on the face of the globe. The chief manager of this establishment is Mr. Andrew Stark. There is only boot and shoe establishment where there are from 500 to 1,000 pairs of these useful articles annually made to order on the premises, (as regularity work is allowed to come to the village of Allandale Mills.)—Mr. Hicks is the proprietor of this establishment. Two or three carpenter's shops are visible by their doors like Joseph's coat of many colors; the "houses" of these establishments are respectively Mr. Shearer, Mr. Humphrey's and Mr. Rich'd Hunt, the last-named gentleman is now engaged in getting out timber for the large public building above alluded to; the people are mostly all English and Scotch; there are, however, a few of other country people.—The prevailing religions are the Methodist and Presbyterian. The people in general are sociable, generous, hospitable, persevering and industrious in their various callings, and last though not least they are a temperate people. I have not seen a single drunkard or loafer about the place since I first knew it. That they may continue to prosper is the sincere wish of your humble servant

DAGUERRE.

N. B.—Another proof of the intelligence and good taste of the Allandalians is seen in the big bundle of Examiners that comes here regularly. D.

COTTON FACTORY IN ASPHODEL

The Globe understands that arrangements are in progress for establishing a cotton factory at Hastings, in the township of Asphodel, where there is a splendid water power. The leaders in the enterprise are gentlemen from Montreal.

LIBERAL OFFER TO NEGROES.—The New Jersey Colonization Society offers to send to Liberia free of cost, all who will make good citizens in the young republic, and will erect for them comfortable houses on their arrival, and give them in fee simple ten acres of good land. ☞ The Buffalo papers tell a shocking story of an Irish undertaker who was employed to convey the corpse of a pauper, who died at the hospital, to Limestone Cemetery. A dollar was paid the fellow in advance, and he used it to get himself thoroughly intoxicated before he had got out of the city, so that before he reached the cemetery he succeeded in overturning the hearse in a ditch. The horse succeeded in kicking himself loose from the vehicle, and making his way to the cemetery gate, startled the superintendent of the hearse, who started on a tour of discovery and found that his services were unquestionably needed.

REPORTED INTENTION TO EVACUATE FORTS SUMPTER AND PICKENS.

Washington, March 11.—The Herald's Washington correspondent states that political circles were feverishly excited on Sunday, by the news that the evacuation of Forts Sumpter and Pickens were determined upon in Cabinet Council on Saturday night.

It is now certain that the stock of provisions is almost exhausted.

Several Republican Senators vigorously declared that such policy was decided upon, while hooting Southern Democrats call it a master stroke of policy.

The Times' correspondent says:—"I heard distinguished secessionists confess to-night that if Mr. Lincoln does withdraw the troops from Fort Sumpter, secession is dead, and every leader in the movement ruined."

Gen. G. Fogg, late Secretary of the National Republican Central Committee, has been tendered the position of Commissioner of Patents.

Hon. McCulloch and his following are organizing for a descent upon the Northern Territories of New Mexico, with the expectation of inviting them to Texas by conquest, and setting up an independent Government, detached from the cotton Confederacy.—[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] same time.

Washington, March 8.—The statement that Sumner opposes Mr. Crittenden's nomination to the Supreme Bench is erroneous. Mr. Sumner approves of the nomination. The [illegible], however, continues to challenge decided opposition from influential quarters, and it is feared it will not be made. Messrs Badger and Reiffe, of North Carolina, and Holt, of Kentucky, are now talked of.

Mr. Lincoln found about 70 vacancies in the departments under the Government.—These must all be filled while the Senate is in session, or they cannot be till Congress meets again. Consequently they must first engross the President's attention. When these are disposed of, Mr. Lincoln's greatest pressure is to take up for action the departments for the new territories of Dacotah, Colorado and Nevada.

Washington, March 9.—Important intelligence has just been received at the War Department from Charleston. A messenger who left Fort Sumpter on the afternoon of Tuesday last, reports that only provisions remain for only fifteen days, and that only a limited amount of vegetables is left in the fortress, and supplies of all kinds are running very low. Major Anderson, however, was still able to procure fresh meats and butter for the Charleston market.

The Nationale of Naples announces the discovery of a conspiracy in favour of Prince Murat, and states that the trial had commenced.

The General has also published an order of the day, announcing the taking of Gaeta. The tone of the order is very moderate. It concludes as follows: "Death throws a sad veil over all human quarrels. The dead are all equal. Be generous towards the vanquished. Your hatred cannot last. As a soldier, Victor Emmanuel fights and forgives."

The Sardinians are actively engaged in clearing Gaeta of its ruins. The city has suffered enormously from the bombardment. The typhus fever is raging at Gaeta.

According to the letters received from Naples, a riotous assemblage attacked the Palace of the Archbishop during the fetes on the occasion of the fall of Gaeta. The windows of the Spanish Consul's residence were smashed by the people. Commander Nigro promised to give satisfaction to the Consul, and to punish the guilty parties. Several hundred Bourbon soldiers were found by the Sardinians at Gaeta suffering from typhus fever.

It is said that Austria, by means of her secret agents, is endeavoring by every means she can urge on Garibaldi not to wait for Italy to recruit and re-organize her strength.

DEATH FROM THE BITE OF A CAT.

On Sunday week a rabid cat found its way into Trinity Church, King-street East, during Divine service, and other rooms about for some time, it entered Mr. Goodeham's pew, and before it was expelled, bit Miss Goodeham on the hand. The animal was subsequently caught by the sexton, Mr. Mulligan, and while in was carrying it out it bit him on the hand and scratched him. Mr. Mulligan regarded the attack as trifling, and paid no attention to them. A few days afterwards his hand and arm began to swell in a fearful manner, and Dr. Small was called in. Everything was done which medical skill could suggest, but unhappily it was of no avail. Mr. Mulligan lingered in great agony till an early hour yesterday morning, when death put an end to his sufferings. Miss Goodeham is also very ill from the effects of the bite which she received, and it has been deemed proper to amputate one of her fingers. Dr. Rees and other medical gentlemen are in constant attendance on her, and it is to be hoped she will soon be beyond danger.—Globe.

☞ The Quebec Mercantile utters a very low groan over the defeat of Mr Morrison. It says, "We regret to learn the very painful defeat of Sol. Gen. Morrison, in the county of Grey. The Clear Grit candidate, Mr. Purdy, beat him by a majority of 300. Though a respectable man, Mr. Morrison has been often defeated in efforts to obtain a seat in the present Parliament. His fate is a hard one."

A Montreal paper says:—We are informed that the amount of grain, flour, and other agricultural produce accumulated in storehouses in Upper and Lower Canada, ready for transportation, as ascertained by instructions offerded thereon with the various offices doing business in Canada, greatly exceeds the largest quantity ever known in previous years. We also hear that arrangements have been made at the American Lake ports to ship largely by the St. Lawrence route. Forwarders will have a busy time when navigation opens.

☞ The artificial propagation of fish has proved a complete success in Europe; the Tay breeding boxes, established in 1857, turn out 800,000 young salmon every year; the Irish breeding places have also succeeded admirably; the artificial lake at Huningue, near Basle, covering 70 acres, is doing much to re-people the exhausted rivers of France with fish. Encouraged by European artificial pisciculture, several gentlemen on Long Island, at their villas in Westchester County, and up the Hudson, have tried it, and make no more of taking a fine string of trout out of their ponds, than would an old-fashioned farmer a pullet from his barn-yard.

OIL IN CANADA.

The London (C. W.) Prototype says thirteen car loads of oil arrived from Lambton on Thursday. A gentleman from Strathroy describes the people of the oil spring district as perfectly wild with excitement. Property in the immediate neighborhood of the best springs has gone up to fabulous prices, and stores, taverns, &c., are springing up, where a few months ago it was almost a wilderness. The danger is, that the first speculators may make their several hauls at the expense of the really enterprising men who work the business.

Died.

On the 26th January, after a short illness, at the residence of his son, Mr. James Dobbie, in the Township of Eldorado, county of Bruce, C. W., Mr. John Dobbie, formerly of Churchhill, county Fermanagh, Ireland, at the advanced age of 76 years.

At North Monaghan on the 1st inst., Jane, wife of Mr. Wm. Goodfellow, aged 38 years.

At Blythe Mills, Smith, on the 6th inst., Mrs. Walter Hurst, of a daughter.

W. & T. LEEMING'S WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Montreal, March 7, 1861.

Since our last there has been a partial decline in prices for all descriptions of flour and grain, arising from the extreme inactivity of the market, and forced sales, more than from any positive depreciation in value. Buyers are still holding off and contracts for future delivery are extremely difficult to make.—The domestic troubles of the neighbouring States have had a very depressing effect on their own trade, and to a certain extent we have been made participators in the evil. A buyer from the States is rarely seen in our market, whilst in former years they have been considerable; with the expiration of the present month we may reasonably hope to see a change: and the hoped for impending collapse of the secession movement will restore money and trade to former channels.

Flour—Arrivals limited and little doing. No. 1, superfine, $5.35 to $5.45; Fine $4.05 to $4.30; Fancy, $5.55 to $5.70; Extra $6 to $6.20; Double Extra, $6.50 to $7. Bag Flour in good demand at $2.75 to $2.82½ for Spring; $2.82½ to $2.95 for Scotch.

Wheat—Sales for lots good U. C. Spring on the spot, at $1.16.

A WANT SUPPLIED!

The public have long felt the want of something that could be depended upon, for the cure of Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, Neuralgia, Bowel complaints, &c., &c., and we are happy to say that want is now supplied in the shape of the Canadian Pain Destroyer. It is truly a most wonderful medicine, and one that effects an immediate and permanent cure in all cases for which it is recommended.

See advertisement in another column, and give it a trial.

Any of our readers afflicted with Scrofula or Scrofulous complaints, will do well to read the remarks in our advertising columns respecting it. But little of the nature of this disorder has been known by the people, and the clear exposition of it there given, will prove acceptable and useful. We have long admired the searching and able manner in which Dr. Ayer [illegible] subject he touches; whatever has his attention at all, has a great deal of it, by quantity at least he understands, and so does with a particle of feeling for his fellow man, can look with indifference upon his labors for the good. Read what he says of Scrofula, and see in how few words and how clearly he tells us more than we all have known of this insidious and fatal malady.—Sun, Philadelphia, Pa.

JUDSON'S

Mountain Herb Pills.

Above, we present you with a perfect likeness of Tecoon, a chief of a tribe of the strange Aztec Indians, that once ruled Mexico. You will find a full account of him and his people in our Pamphlets and Almanacs—to be had gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent over six years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "Mountain Herb Pills" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the pollution, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food properly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is quickened, and an inflammatory fever is kindled. The blood becomes charged with the poisonous matter; hence, is enough—and all from a slight impurity at the beginning of the disease. Now if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which you daily drank, in a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. So globally does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and before the obstruction is removed, the lungs of life soon give out.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body; they are, therefore, universal in a

CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES,

Liver Complaint, Sick Headache, &c. This Anti-Bilious Medicine expels from the blood the Bilious seeds of disease, and renders all the fluids and secretions pure and fresh, clearing and renovating the vital organs.

Plainest indeed, is it to us, that we are able to place within your reach, a medicine like the "Mountain Herb Pills" that will pass directly to the afflicted parts, through the blood and fluids of the body, and make the sufferer to brighten with the flush of beauty and health.

Judson's Pills are the Best Remedy in existence for the following Complaints:

Blood Complaints,	Debility,
Coughs,	Fever and Ague,
Colds,	Female Complaints,
Chest Diseases	Rheumatism,

GREAT FEMALE MEDICINE!

Females who value health, should never be without these Pills. They purify the blood, remove obstructions of all kinds, cleanse the skin of all pimples and blotches, and bring the ruddy color of health to the pale cheek.

☞ The Plants and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a very surprising way among the Tecoons, a tribe of Aborigines in Mexico. Got the Almanac of our Agent, and you will read with delight, the very interesting account it contains of the "Great Medicine" of the Aztecs.

OBSERVE.—The Mountain Herb Pills are put up in a Boxed'ed Wrapper. Each box contains 60 pills, and Retail at 25 cents per box. All genuine, have the signature of E. L. JUDSON & CO., on each box.

"MONTREAL WITNESS"
FOR 1861.

THE "MONTREAL WITNESS" is non-sectarian in religion, though very decidedly Evangelical in its tone and influence. It is free from party politics, though strongly in favour of truth, justice and freedom. It spares no pains to keep up with the news of the day, and is a reliable commercial record. It also devotes much space to literature suitable for family reading, and altogether is designed to be equally interesting to young and old of both sexes. The Minister, the Merchant, the Farmer, and the family, will, it is hoped, find it alike engaging. Of this paper three editions are published as under:—

The Daily Witness, containing 4 pages, is published every afternoon, and sent by the evening mails, at $6 per annum. The city is supplied by news-venders.

The Montreal Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Wednesday and Saturday mornings, and sent by the early morning mail, at $2 per annum. When sent by carriers in the city, the price is $3.

The Weekly Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Thursday morning, and sent by mail at $1.50. per annum.

In all the above editions the price is uniform—payable in advance—and the paper stops when the subscription expires unless renewed.

The postage is payable by the subscriber, quarterly in advance, at his own post-office, at the rate of half-a-cent each number.

For all subscribers out of Canada, half-a-cent a number is to be remitted with and in addition to, the subscription price.

NEW

A

BY GEORGE MOON, OF OTONABEE, C. W.

There will still be a space of 10 by 36 to dispose of, which may be divided into two apartments: one for the accommodation of calves, and the other for any case of emergency that may arise. About 12 feet wide will still allow 2½ by 12, this will accommodate 8 calves comfortably. This apartment should also have a door opening to the outside. The smaller one need only communicate with the stable. If it is not thought necessary to keep the smaller apartment to be only used occasionally it may be converted into a root house as it will be nearly under ground. It will only be necessary to double board the partitions between it and the other apartments to make it sufficiently warm for the protection of roots. A chute may be made from the thrash floor for letting down the straw, and a door into the stable for feeding them by. A barn of this size and description with a stable under and fitted up as described will accommodate 26 cattle in all with ample room for storing all kinds of food for a winters use, and will cost from $800 to $12,000 according to stile furnishing, price of lumber, &c. The floor of the stable should be perfectly level throughout. The common custom is to have a platform raised from 4 to 8 inches for the cattle to stand on. The reason given is that it keeps the animals more clean and dry. This may do very well in theory, but I have never seen it succeed in practice, and it must be very inconvenient for cattle, especially heavy cows in calf, to be compelled in backing out of the stall every morning to step down into a gutter 6 or 8 inches deep. I have used a stable 3 years with a floor perfectly level and water tight, and have experienced no trouble in keeping the cattle quite clean and dry. Another description of floor which has excited a good deal of discussion in the United States for a year or two is constructed of spars about two inches wide and planted 1½ inches apart. The cattle stand on these without any litter, and the droppings fall through the openings between the spars to a cellar below, thus saving the labor of cleaning out. I have never seen the plan in operation, but I think it must be very uncomfortable for the animals, and I entirely disapprove of manure cellars for reasons which will be given hereafter. The mode of tying the cattle up in their stalls is another important consideration. The plan I have found to suit best after trying several is a piece of small chain about 2 ft. long attached by means of a bolt or staple to the top rail of the partition which divides the stalls. At the other end there is what is commonly called a D through which a leather strap passes and buckles round the animals neck—the chain should have a swivel in it to prevent its becoming twisted as the animal turns it head around.

With regard to horse stables the most important point to be kept in view is warmth and room from the fact of the horse often coming into the stable even in the coldest weather in a state of perspiration, and his coat being naturally short the stable should be warm and also well ventilated by means of sliding windows which will not only afford light but may be thrown open in the hot weather of summer to render the stable airy and cool. The stables should be roomy, 5 feet wide is quite little enough for a horse of an ordinary size. If we observe the horse when left at liberty in the pasture we will see that he often lies stretched out at full length; there is no doubt that he feels this the most comfortable position to rest in, and would often lie the same way in the stable if he had sufficient room to do so. The plan of feeding from racks above the horses heads is now I think mostly abandoned as it should be, as it not only causes the horse much additional and unnecessary labor to reach up and pull the hay from the rack, but the opening made by the rack becoming empty admits a current of cold air in winter which beats directly down on the horse's head. The floor like that of the cow stable should be level. When the horse is at liberty he always chooses a level place to stand on which is doubtless the position in which he is most at ease, and we should allow him to stand in the stable in the same position that he would chose if at liberty.

It will not be necessary to say much about the accommodations for sheep. The building for this purpose should be about 20 feet wide with a yard in front of about the same width, and one foot long for every sheep it is to accommodate. This will give 20 square feet of space to each sheep, or 8 by 9 which is quite small enough. For sheep of the large breeds if the flock is large the building and yard should be divided into 3 apartments—one for lambs of the first winter, one for weathers, and one for breeding ewes. The apartment for the ewes should be fitted up warm with a wide door to shut when required. The others need only be an open shed. One thing should especially be kept in mind which is to have the bottom dry, as sheep will never thrive in a wet or damp situation, no matter how well dried for otherwise.

$100 A YEAR

CHOP CRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 10 to 25 bushels of feed per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by case-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired at a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

PRICE $60.

All orders directed to "M. Mowry, Ashburnham, Peterborough," will be promptly attended to.

Scrofula, or King's Evil,

is a constitutional disease, a corruption of the blood, by which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it pervades the whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from its attacks, nor is there one which it may not destroy. The scrofulous taint is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered or unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children."

Its effects commence by deposition from the blood of corrupt or ulcerous matter, which, in the lungs, liver, and internal organs, is termed tubercles; in the glands, swellings; and on the surface, eruptions or sores. This foul corruption, which genders in the blood, depresses the energies of life, so that scrofulous constitutions not only suffer from scrofulous complaints, but they have far less power to withstand the attacks of other diseases; consequently, vast numbers perish by disorders which, although not scrofulous in their nature, are still rendered fatal by this taint in the system. Most of the consumption which decimates the human family has its origin directly in this scrofulous contamination; and many destructive diseases of the liver, kidneys, brain, and, indeed, of all the organs, arise from or are aggravated by the same cause.

One quarter of all our people are scrofulous; their persons are invaded by this lurking infection, and their health is undermined by it. To cleanse it from this system we must renovate the blood by an alterative medicine, and invigorate it by healthy food and exercise. Such a medicine we supply in the most effectual remedy which the medical skill of our times can devise for this envy where prevailing and fatal malady. It is combined from the most active remedials that have been discovered for the expurgation of this foul disorder from the blood, and the rescue of the system from its destructive consequences. Hence it should be employed for the cure of not only scrofula, but also those other affections which arise from it, such as RHEUMATISM and SKIN DISEASES, ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, ROSE, or ERYSIPELAS, PIMPLES, POSTULES, BLOTCHES, BLAINS and BOILS, TUMORS, TETTER and SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, RINGWORM, RHEUMATISM, SYPHILITIC and MERCURIAL DISEASES, DROPSY, DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, and, indeed, ALL COMPLAINTS ARISING FROM VITIATED OR IMPURE BLOOD. The popular belief in "impurity of the blood" is founded in truth, for scrofula is a degeneration of the blood. The particular purpose and virtue of this Sarsaparilla is to purify and regenerate this vital fluid, without which sound health is impossible in contaminated constitutions.

Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vibration. As a consequence of their wide properties, the invalid who is hurried down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every day complaints of every body, but they carry off incipient disorders before they have time to fasten their grip upon the constitution. The great lesser wanted is planned to furnish guests my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Hypertrophy, Indigestion, Inactivity of the Bowels, Torpidity of the Liver, Dropsy, Dysentery, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Secretion of the Stomach, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other diseased conditions arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publishing the certificates of their own neighbors and friends, cured of the most dangerous diseases of the lungs by its use. When once used, the superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation. Where this fact is known, the public no longer need be deceived by apothecaries, who, for the distressing and dangerous affections of throat and lungs, present the useless and time-killing expectorant that can minister to our miseries. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the market for what they do not and have claimed, this has established friends by every trial, confirmed wonders as it has obtained they are never forgot, and are cheerfully recommended by those who know their composition and their virtues.

PHONOGRAPHY,
OR WRITING BY SOUND!

PHONOGRAPHY was invented by ISAAC PITMAN, of Bath, England, in the year 1837. It is the most simple, most natural, most rapid, and most easily learned system of writing which has ever been, or ever can be invented.

During the past fifteen years, hundreds of thousands of persons, in England and America, in both public and private life, have learned to write Phonography, and thousands of social and business letters annually pass through the post office.

Nor is the great popularity to be wondered at. The present system of writing is exceedingly cumbersome, and totally unworthy these days of progress and inventions. Phonography, is equally as legible, can be learned in one twentieth the time, and can be written six times as fast! In other words, the labor of six days can be performed in one—one man can do the work of six! So simple is the system, too, that a person may learn to write it slowly, in a couple of hours. An hour's daily practice for a few weeks will enable any person to write Phonography with certainty, and with some degree of facility. The extra amount of practice continued for six months will enable a person to take reports of speeches, lectures, sermons, or conversations, and to read them with accuracy.

The late Hon. Thos. H. Benton, upon being presented with a verbatim report of one of his masterly speeches, taken by a little boy only twelve years of age, said: "Had this art been known 40 years ago it would have saved me 20 years hard labor." The learned reporter spoke but a portion of the truth. What has cost members quires six years to accomplish, Phonography will perform in one.

To clergymen, Editors, Physicians, Lawyers, Secretaries, Conveyancers, Law and Medical Students, Lecturers, Reporters, School Teachers, Merchants, School Boys and Girls, a knowledge of Phonography is of great utility. In fact there is no profession or calling in which it is not useful, and no young man's education can be considered complete without it.

For the purpose of aiding in the dissemination of so important a reform in his own country, the subscriber is now prepared to supply all who apply, with the MANUAL OF PHONOGRAPHY, and the PHONOGRAPHIC COPY BOOK, that by mail to any part of the Province, postage pre-paid, for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Anybody and everybody, who can learn anything, can learn PHONOGRAPHY from the MANUAL without other assistance. Those who wish to be able to put their thoughts to paper at the rate of from 100 to 250 words per minute, should send for the above-mentioned works at once. The instruction given by the Manual is as plain as A, B, C, and can be understood.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is needed by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found, of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, PIMPLES, PUSTULES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, RINGWORM AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, MENORALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, HEADACHE, ROSE OR ST. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become a great favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE Business House of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the past year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been added to the new wing, A great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many accommodate and convenient rooms besides, enabling it to go on as the whole of the beds have, as a great expence, been furnished with HEAVY SPRING MATTRASSES. Poetry.

LAST TO FADE OF ALL, IS FANCY.

Day by day old sorrow's leave us,
Leave us while new sorrow's came;
Come like crowing shadows, lengthening,
Lengthening round the noonday flame.

Day by day fade friendship's flowers—
Flowers that flourished in the past—
Past, oh Past!—once bright and glowing,
Growing sere, but dimmed at last!

Last to fade of all is Fancy—
Fancy, ever young and gay;
Gay as when young love was dreaming,
Dreaming, dreaming, day by day.

A Night of Horror.

A TALE.

Then Mary, yawning a little, asked if I wanted anything more, and I was obliged to answer No, for very shame's sake; and she went. The shutting of the door gently as it was closed, affected me unpleasantly. I took a dislike to the curtains, the tapestry, the dingy pictures—everything. I hated the room. I felt a temptation to put on a cloak, run, half-dressed, to my sister's chamber, and say I had changed my mind, and come for shelter. But they must be asleep, I thought, and I could not be so unkind as to wake them. I said my prayers with unusual earnestness and a heavy heart. I extinguished the candles, and was just about to lay my head on my pillow, when the idea occurred me that I would fasten the door. The candles were extinguished, but the fire light was amply sufficient to guide me. I gained the door. There was a lock, but it was rusty and hampered; my utmost strength could not turn the key. The bolt was broken and worthless. Baulked of my intention, I consoled myself by remembering that I had never had need of fastenings yet, and returned to my bed. I lay awake for a good while, watching the red glow of the burning coals in the grate. I was quiet now, and more composed. Even the light gossip of the maid, full of petty human cares and joys, had done me good—diverted my thoughts from brooding. I was on the point of dropping asleep, when I was twice disturbed; once by an owl hooting in the ivy outside—not unaccustomed sound, but harsh and melancholy; once, by a long and mournful howling set up by the watch-dog in the stable-yard—a sound I detested. A long-drawn, lugubrious howling, was the latter, and much such a note as the vulgar declare to herald a death in the family. This was a fancy I had never shared; but yet I could not help feeling that the dog's mournful moans were sad, and expressive of terror, not at all like his fierce, honest bark of anger, but rather as if something evil and unwonted were abroad. But soon I fell asleep. How long I slept, I never know. I awoke at once, with that abrupt start which we all know well, and which carries us in a second from utter unconsciousness to the full use of our faculties. The fire was still burning, but was very low, and half the room or more was in deep shadow. I knew, I felt, that some person or thing was in the room, although nothing unusual was to be seen by the feeble light. Yet it was a sense of danger that had aroused me from slumber. I experienced, while yet asleep, the chill and shock of sudden alarm, and I knew, even in the act of throwing off sleep like a shackle, what I awoke, and that some intruder was present. Yet, though I listened intently, no sound was audible, except the faint murmur of the fire, the dropping of a cinder from the bars, and the loud irregular beatings of my own heart. Notwithstanding this silence, by some intuition I knew that I had not been deceived by a dream, and felt certain that I was not alone. I waited. My heart beat on; quicker, more sudden grew its pulsations, as a bird in a cage might flutter in the presence of the hawk.—And then I heard a sound, faint, but quite distinct, the clank of iron, the settling of a chain! I ventured to lift my head from the pillow. Dim and uncertain as the light was, I saw the curtains of my bed shake, and caught a glimpse of something beyond, a darker spot in the darkness. This confirmation of my fears did not surprise me so much as it shocked me. I strove to cry aloud, but could not utter a word. The chain rattled again, and this time the echo was louder and clearer. But though I strained my eyes, they could not penetrate the obscurity which shrouded the other end of the chamber, whence came the sullen clanking. It underwent several distinct variations of tone, from many colored strands of thread twining into one, became palpable to my mental vision. Was it a robber? could it be a supernatural visitant? or was I the victim of some cruel trick, such as I have heard of, and which come throughout perhaps have no practice on the timid, weakness of its dangerous results? And then a new idea, with some ray of comfort in it, suggested itself. There was a fine young dog of Newfoundland breed, a favourite of [illegible] which was usually chained by night in the outhouses. Neptune might have broken loose, found his way to my room, and finding the door imperfectly closed, have pushed it open and entered. Like all sense dumb on this heretofore inscrutable flow of the noise forced itself upon me. It was—it must be—the dog, and I was distressing myself uselessly. I resolved to call to him; I strove to utter his name—"Neptune, Neptune!" but a current apprehension [illegible] and I was unable. The chain rattled more loudly than ever, and presently I saw a dusky shapeless mass appear between the curtains on the opposite side to where I was lying. Now I longed to hear the voice of the groom indeed that I longed subject to the caress of my shadow. But no! I heard no sound as the mass of the curtain and the clank of the chain. Just then the dying flame of the fire flapped up, and with one enlarging flourish glanced over the two dusky mounds, and, further [illegible] to confirm sight it is to the substance of my horror from that same chance itself hurry on the bed outside the clothes and lies there, huge and [illegible] dull darkness. There was now no light left, though the red embers yet glowed with a ruddy gleam, like the eyes of wild beasts. The chain rattled on more. I tried to repeat, to scream wildly for help; my mouth was parched, my tongue refused to obey. I could not utter a cry, and, indeed, who could have heard me, as I was in that solitary chamber, with no living neighbor, and the picture-gallery between me and any aid that even the loudest, most piercing shriek could summon. And the storm that flooded with it would have drowned my voice, even if help had been at hand. I'd call aloud—to demand who was there—plain! how useless how perilous! If the intruder were a robber, my outcries would goad him to fury; but what robber thinks but then? As for a trick, that seemed impossible. And yet, enhanced by my subtle now wholly passive! I strove to pray aloud, as there rushed on my memory a flood of weird legends—the dreaded yet fascinating lore of my childhood. I had heard and read of the spirits of wicked men forced to revisit the scenes of their earthly crimes—of demons that lurked in certain accursed spots—of the ghoul and vampire of the East, stealing amid the graves they rifled for their ghostly banquets, and I shuddered as I gazed on the black darkness where I knew it lay. Restirred—it moaned heavily; and again I heard the chain clank close beside me. I drew myself from it, shrinking away in loathing and terror of the evil thing—what, I knew not, but felt that something malignant was near. And yet, in the extremity of my fear, I dared not speak; I was strangely cautious to be silent, even in uttering further cry; for I had a wild hope that it—the phantom, the creature, whatever it was—had not discovered my presence in the room. And then I remembered all the events of the night—Lady Splendhurst's ill-omened valetudinarians, her half warnings, her singular look as we parted, my sister's persuasions, my terror in the gallery, the remark that "this was the room nurse Sherrard used to talk of." And then memory, stimulated by fear, recalled the long forgotten past, the ill-repute of this disused chamber, the sum it had witnessed, the blood spilled, the poison administered by unnatural hate within its walls, and the tradition which called it haunted. The servants avoided it—how it was mentioned rarely, and in whispers, when the ready children, and how we had regarded it as a mysterious realm, and had [illegible] to its doors. And so it—the dark form with the chain—a creature of this world, or a spectre? And again—more dreadful still—could it be that the corpse of wicked men were forced to rise, and haunt in the body the places where they had wrought their evil deeds? And was such as these my grisly neighbor? The chain feebly rattled. My hair bristled; my eye-balls seemed starting from their sockets; the damps of a great anguish were on my brow. My heart laboured as if I were crushed beneath some vast weight. Sometimes it appeared to stop its frenzied beatings, sometimes its pulsations were fierce and hurried; my breath came short and with extreme difficulty, and I shivered as if with cold; yet I feared to stir. It moved, it moaned, its fetters chanted dismally, the couch cracked and shook. This was no phantom, then—no air-drawn spectre. But its very solidity, its palpable presence, were a thousand times more terrible. I [illegible] my only safeguard was that it was unconscious of my presence; for, I was assured to know it not,—He had entered the chamber as a lair, when weary and gorged with his horrid orgie; and he had flung himself down to sleep without a suspicion that he was not alone. Even his grumping my sleeve was doubtless an act done betwixt sleeping and waking, like his unconscious moans and laughter, in some frightful dream. Hours went on; then I trembled as I thought that soon the house would be astir, that my maid would come to call me as usual, and awake that ghastly sleeper. And might he not have time to tear me, as he tore the sheep, before any aid could arrive? At last what I dreaded came to pass—a light footstep on the landing—then it stops at the door. A pause succeeds, and then the tapping is renewed, and this time more loudly. Then the madman stretches his limbs and utters his howling cry, and his eyes slowly opened—very slowly opened—and met mine. The girl waited awhile on the landing for the [illegible] time. I trembled but she should open the door unbidden—see the grim thing, and by her idle screams and terror bring about the worst. "Long before strange men could arrive I knew what I should be dashed and clutched [illegible] The maid waited, no doubt surprised at my unusual sound slumbers, for I was in general a light sleeper and an early riser, but reluctant to disturb from his lair by entering without permission. I was still there when the thing in man's shape, but no more mortal man. I saw the quivering muscles in his haggard [illegible] eyes; I saw the sinews of his half [illegible] hands; I saw the devil of murder [illegible] peeping forth from those hideous eyes, and the lips as parted as in scorn; and the reddish teeth to have themselves. But I was not [illegible] I saw [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE NEW REGIME.

ITS TROUBLES AHEAD.

Not since Washington inaugurated the nation which consummated the union of these States has an epoch of more solemn significance occurred in this country than that which was entered upon in the Capitol on the fourth day of this month. It partook of every characteristic, both of time and circumstance, calculated to thrill the national heart. Personal feeling mingled with hopes and fears for the very existence of the country, while the proud aspirations of a triumphant party were dashed on the very threshold with the depressing consciousness that they were about to begin their rule after a country no longer united, a country not only filled with distracted councils, not only alienated North and South, but with a rival and hostile Confederacy within the Union which they feel bound to crush or obliterate their own existence.

In the background of the picture we behold the venerable figure of the late President retiring from the scene of his great responsibility to mingle with the mass of his countrymen in private life, but transmitting to his successor a broken empire and a divided people; distracted, overbowed, almost ruined; the colossal fabric which so recently towered aloft so proudly, now shaken to its very foundation; the grand temple of Human Liberty, to the horns of whose altar the oppressed of other nations might flee and find refuge, levelled to the dust by unnatural hands. Sad indeed must have been the feelings of the retiring President—not gayety, we may well believe, because of the loss of the "sweets" of office, but because of the shattered condition of that great Power which four years before was entrusted to its integrity to his keeping. What exit more galling to the pride of a ruler, more humiliating to an eminent statesman, more painful to a patriotic heart!

In the foreground we see the new President ascending the vacant seat of authority without official experience or tried statesmanship, a simple citizen, like the humblest man amongst us, who at one period—and to his honor be it said—performed the humble duties of a "rail-splitter;" but at the same time possessed of honesty of purpose, integrity of heart, and sound common sense, with antecedents which a Democratic Republic ought to be proud to recognize—a man on whom greatness was thrust rather than sought, who never trod the crooked or slimy paths on his way to fortune; and therefore; more than compensating for his want of more official experience, which too often stamps political trickery and a total want of moral, social, as well as political principle. But what a prospect before him! A prospect sufficient to appal the stoutest heart and bewilder the strongest intellect. How single-minded must be the man who will worthily enter the Presidential chair at this hour. How brave and self-reliant, how confident in the national patriotism, how fertile in statesmanlike resources, how broad in fraternal affections to embrace the wide circle of North and South, how firm of purpose, how yielding in conciliation, must be the man who will successfully execute the task before him. The commander of a ship laboring in a storm with half her crew in mutiny, the general leading his army to battle with traitors in the midst of his ranks, are but faint illustrations of the President of the United States at this moment. Washington had no such task before him. If that illustrious man had to create the Union, the materials were plastic to his hands. He gained in the battle-field the prestige that was recognized at the Council Board. All hailed him as the Father of his country. His word was a law to his people received with scarcely less reverence than the Mosaic law by the ancient people, and obeyed more implicitly and more constantly. If out of chaos he had to create a system of political power, and by his wisdom shape it to suit the exigencies of the several communities whom he was about to unite, so different in race, in practices, in opinions—social, political, and religious—he had no "irreconcilable conflicts" to subdue and reconcile. His efforts were not met with intestine strife, the most bitter and uncompromising because existing among brethren. No portion of the household had gone forth, shaking as it were the dust from their feet, to set up for themselves, vowing never to return to the old tree, and to resist to the death all who would stop their return. He had taken the exercise the laws upon them, to [illegible] subdue their obstinacy. If secession—as they did in the days of Washington, and as they still ever exist in communities—they were soothed by [illegible] if offence—[illegible] they were promptly compromised. And above all, when compelled to draw the sword, it was against a foreign foe. All this is now changed—every difficulty now is a thousandfold greater, without one favoring circumstance which cheered the labors of Washington. The North and South stand firm to face in deadly hostility. They mutually detest the principles, the policy, and even the very persons of each other. Compromise is banned, utterly repudiated, on both sides.—In a word, North and South are at this moment two hostile camps. What shall the President do? Draw the sword against the South? He thus fights not a foreign foe, but his own people. Victory is defeat and defeat the irretrievable ruin of the country. Are the fair fields of this country to be reddened with the blood of brethren? Are the wars of the races to be enacted on American soil? Or shall Secession be permitted with impunity to breed the supreme authority, break up the solemn compact of the Confederate States, and trample under foot the ordinances by which the country has been governed? Shall the Presidential oath be violated, and Mr Lincoln stand an abandoned unit by the great party who elected him to power? In the history of nations we find no such alternatives presented before a ruler. To whatever side he may turn, doubt, perplexity, difficulties insuperable, stare him in the face.—Scottish Abbotsford Sentinel.

☞ Late European intelligence announces the death of Eugene Sarbe, the French [illegible] and dramatist. He was born December 26, 1791, in the Rue St. Denis, Paris, where his father was a silk mercer. Being a boy of promising talents, he was placed in the College of St. Barbe at an early age. His [illegible] stage commenced, a considerable time after the Revolution, when he was twenty-one years old. WARS AND RUMORS OF WAR.

Despatch to the N. Y. Herald.

Washington, March 13.

Information the last hour received in this city of the most important character from Montgomery. The Southern administration know that the evacuation of Forts Sumpter and Pickens has been decided on. Despatches from General Beauregard, represent that it would be utterly impossible for any united force that the administration at Washington could collect, to prevent the surrender of Major Anderson before the lapse of many weeks. Despatches from Washington have also assured the Montgomery government that no attempt at reinforcement will be made, and that the troops of the United States will be soon withdrawn. President Davis has, however, received the most ominous communications from his friends here, respecting the intentions of the Lincoln administration to blockade Southern ports, and make an attempt to collect the revenue. He is assured that the most strenuous and active measures are being taken to concentrate the naval forces of the North, and that not only Charleston, Savannah, New Orleans and Mobile will be blockaded; Forts Pickens, Sumpter and Taylor reinforced; but that, if necessary, vessels will be chartered to keep up an active surveillance as possible of all parts of the coast, where there are ports of entry, between South Carolina and the Rio Grande.

The indignation that prevails at Montgomery and elsewhere, in view of this preparatory measure to carry out their threats in Mr Lincoln's inaugural leaves no bounds. Cabinet meetings have been held, and it has been resolved, at the first appearance of hostilities, or just as soon as a single vessel has been stopped outside of any Southern port, to put the whole available force of the South in motion, and to march through the border States upon Washington. Fifty thousand troops can be collected without difficulty, and, so far from any opposition being apprehended from Virginia, Maryland, and North Carolina, it is believed that the people will rally to reinforce the invading army, and assist them with arms as well as sympathy.

The people of the South are fully alive to the exigencies of the period. They, on the whole, anticipate war, and wish, at all events, to take time by the forelock. If Mr. Lincoln provokes civil discord, the first blood of the conflict may greet his ears near the White House, if he has courage enough to stay there to hear it!

The intelligence from Montgomery indicates great impatience to know whether the issue is to be war or peace. Large bodies of troops are concentrated, and ready to march at a moment's warning.

From the Herald, Editorial.

It will be seen, by reference to our telegraphic Despatches from Washington, that the preparations which are being made in the navy yards of the North, for aggressive attempts to collect the revenue, and to throw troops in Forts Jefferson, Taylor and Pickens have created already the deepest and most intense excitement, at the capital of the Southern confederacy. The surrender of Fort Sumter is regarded as having been a necessity, and not a peace offering. The intelligence, however, that a blockade was about to be attempted, coupled with the threats of, it is believed, President Lincoln's own efforts are being made to [illegible] hostile nation, by mustering an army which shall at once march upon Washington, if the coercive schemes of the administration are persevered in. President Davis is convinced that no objection would be made to the transit of an army through the border States; but that the people of Virginia and Maryland, would, on the contrary, rally to his support, and reinforce his ranks. With the first notification of hostile acts upon the Southern coast, the troops of the confederacy will march, and then will be seen the "beginning of the end" of the dreadful national drama enacting in the country.

It is no time for General Scott to leave Washington now. His services there may be soon needed. Neither is the presence of General Wool for one hundred thousand men, to aid in defending the seat of Government, to be now regarded as unreasonable. "Battle," which Mr. Seward declared might be the last resort in the present crisis may be near at hand, and the safety of Mr. Lincoln in the White House, may soon depend, either upon his doubting from the fatal, unconciliatory course which he and his advisers are pursuing, upon flight, or upon the most formidable preparations for defence that can be collected together.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION OF "THE CONFEDERATE STATES."

From the N. Y. World, March 14.

The new constitution over which the Montgomery Congress has been for several weeks in secret [illegible] has at length shipped the shell. Our telegraphic despatches of yesterday morning furnished an outline of it; and truth constrains us to say that it contains some excellent features.—The framers have no intelligent appreciation of the defects which have been disclosed in the working of our government in the seventy years it has been in operation, and the provisions for remedying those defects commend themselves to the consideration of intelligent minds in every part of the country. It is probable that our existing troubles will reach their ultimate adjustment through a general convention of the States for revising the Constitution; a body, when such a convention shall be called, it will be proper for it to make other wise amendments, as well as devise a basis of settlement for our protracted sectional quarrel. That a national convention will be called some time within the ensuing years we have no doubt. Mr. Seward intimated an opinion of its necessity both in his Auburn speech and in his more elaborate speech in the Senate. President Lincoln, in his inaugural, seems to favor it. Even the political wing of the republican party—at least the press that represents it—is not averse to such a convention, [illegible] is suggested, then, that we will [illegible] into a general revision of the Federal Constitution. It is proper that the country should study the character of its citizens, and be prepared to take advantage of the occasion and ability of statesmanship which they and circumstances have shown to be necessary. Now, regardless of the source from which they emanate, there are several things in the new Confederate Constitution which might be incorporated with great advantage, into the Constitution of the United States.

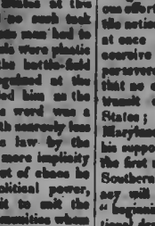
Among these the most important, in its practical consequences, is the provision which makes only the great officers, such as the heads of departments and the chief foreign ministers, responsible at the will of the President, and the tenure of all subordinate offices independent of executive pleasure. The great source of demoralization in our political system arises from the employment of the subalterns of the executive departments of the government, as active agents in party politics. This is the chief cause of the [illegible] which [illegible] our elections, and [illegible] from which [illegible] our politics. It debases the government into a grand agent of corruption. It exaggerates the importance of all our political issues; it distorts the truth, and wilfully deceives the people; it inflames party spirit, exasperates sectional animosity, introduces corruption into the elections, and makes the President, when elected, with honest servants of obnoxious corruptionists, who never let him be quiet, day nor night, and beg at every pause of patronage, pulling in opposite directions, like the pack of hungry curs in Homer over the fragment of a hide. The practice of turning out all the officers at the beginning of a new administration, and thus setting the whole country by the ears in a mighty struggle between the ins and the outs at every Presidential election, is contrary to the early usage of the government and was never in the contemplation of the founders of the Constitution. This infamous spoils-system has done more than all other causes combined to bring the country into its present deplorable condition, and a constitutional provision which should cut it up by the roots is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Other provisions of the southern constitution which deserve unqualified approbation are those intended to guard the public treasury and prevent fraudulent legislation. Congress cannot, except by a two-thirds vote of both houses, make any appropriation not asked for by the head of some department or the President; no extra compensation can be allowed to any officer, contractor, or agent, after contracts are made, or services rendered; and every law must relate to one subject, which must be designated in its title. Provisions similar to these, in our national Constitution, would operate as a powerful check on legislative corruption. Improvident and dishonest appropriations, and after-glowmores, are fostered into other bills, and covered up under their titles, in the hurry and pell-mell in which congressional business commonly gets involved near the close of a session.

Besides these provisions, whose wisdom is so clear and indisputable, the southern constitution makes some innovations respecting which there is more room for difference of opinion. The granting of seats in Congress to members of the cabinet, imitated from the English government, will have the advantage of shortening the Presidential Message, and of affording a convenient method of calling forth information from the executive department, and will make first-rate talents for debate a qualification for the heads of the most important departments. But such a privilege on the part of members of the cabinet might add unduly to the executive influence. The extension of the presidential term to six years is a provision the wisdom of which turns on the question, which is the greater evil, two additional years of a bad administration, or a more frequent recurrence of the excitement of a presidential contest.—With the spoils system abolished, we doubt whether there would be any greater public advantage in extending the term. If the President had no patronage but the great offices, the presidential elections would not commonly be very exciting.

THE SOUTHERN FLAG.

The flag finally adopted by the Montgomery Congress is made as represented below. Three stripes—the first red, the next white, and the third red. In the extreme left hand corner of the flag, at the top, on a blue ground, are seven white stars



A WIFE'S HEARTLESSNESS.

NEW CHAPTER IN A PERSONAL HISTORY.

Yesterday afternoon (says the Boston Traveller of Thursday) the remains of a man were conveyed to their long resting-place, the last few years of whose life presents a singular commentary upon so many phases of human nature.

The deceased was connected with some of the best families in the State, was liberally educated, graduated as a physician from one of the first colleges in the country, and married the daughter of a wealthy citizen of Boston. Naturally of a free and generous disposition, and fond of good living, he did not accumulate any property, and some eight years since went to California for the purpose of bettering his condition. While he was absent his wife's father died, leaving her a handsome property, the income of which has enabled her to live in ease and elegance in Beacon street, but upon her husband's return from his unsuccessful trip, she refused to live with him, expressing no other reason than his shiftlessness in business.

He was subsequently attacked with inflammatory rheumatism and taken to the hospital, but his case proving incurable, and having no friend or support, he was removed to the Island as a pauper. Through the exertions of his brother, however, who is in his eighteenth year, he was brought back to the city and taken care of by him, with what assistance the charitably-disposed have rendered, until relieved by death. During all this long and painful illness, his wife and daughter, although living in affluence and luxury, have never visited him or contributed a shilling to keep him from starving. The fact they that he was able to do so was the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales to this city. While the carriages of two or three he occupied to reach the Common, where he saw for the last time the wife and daughter—the latter a young lady of 20—but they did not deign to cast a look of recognition upon the cripple and pauper who had once borne the endearing title of husband and father to them.

PARLIAMENTARY.

In another column will be found the speech of His Excellency the Governor General, and the proceedings of Parliament up to the latest mail. The address is a very poor affair, and like Mercutio's brai a it contains "a plentiful lack of matter." The address is of course the programme of the Cabinet, and confirms our statement that the Government meets Parliament without a fixed policy. But one measure is mooted, and that is one which the Ministry cannot claim the credit of introducing, viz: a Bankrupt Law. Not a single word about Federation of the Provinces, or Representation by Population. One feat in the proceedings of Parliament is worthy of notice; the return to the Address had to be moved by an old member of the Assembly,—not a single fresh recruit being in the House, while the Opposition benches contain three new members, elected since the last session. The session will a short but interesting one, and our readers may depend in being put in possession of the best and latest advices from the seat of Government through our columns.

THE RAILWAY FRAUDS.

The recent arrivals from England acquaint us with the revelations of the corruptions practiced in connection with the Great Western Railway. Of all our railways this one was looked upon as most free from jobbery and corruption, and has been supposed to be the most successful road in the Province in the shape of earnings. The Committee appointed by the shareholders have disclosed the astounding intelligence that a million of pounds sterling has been squandered; that parties high in political and social positions are implicated in frauds of so serious a character that they decline to be more minute for fear that the ends of justice may not be met. Altogether we are constrained to admit that the revelations brought to light by the investigation of the Committee, present a sad picture of human depravity, and when the curtain is fully removed, we shall have abundant cause for humiliation, that such gigantic frauds should occur in our midst. A number of years ago the Mother Country was all astir when the fearful jobbery of Hudson the Railway King was brought to light. Since his career no very stirring story of railway frauds has disturbed the public peace. It has remained for Canada to enjoy the unenviable notoriety of perpetuating the frauds inaugurated by Hudson, and we regret to have it to say that from the Grand Trunk Railway down to the Millbrook Branch but a few lines have been commenced and completed which we believe is free from jobbery and corruption. The high and the low have fallen under the temptations offered by cunning and unscrupulous contractors. Could the history of all the wrong-doing in connection with Railroads in our Country be written, what a fearful view of iniquity would that history present!

Railroads are considered a necessity of the age, but in their introduction, while they have revolutionized traffic, and tended to bring distant parts nearer to each other, by their expeditious mode of travelling, in view of all the drawbacks consequent upon them it is a question by no means easily answered as to whether we are really better off in consequence of their existence or not or not. It is but an admitted principle that in proportion to the [illegible] of a people or in their [illegible]—to say nothing of greatness,—[illegible] we are doomed to admit that with Railroads, a system of morality has been introduced into the country of the worst description. Railroad [illegible] has corrupted parts of our very [illegible] We need instance names. A COMPARATIVE STATEMENT.

The American Almanac of the Presbyterian, Congregational and the Baptist denominations, for 1861, has been analyzed by a contemporary, and many facts are adduced worthy of notice.

It appears that the Congregationalists (Orthodox) have [illegible] North America, 2,735 churches, of which 561 are without pastors; male members, 81,653; female members, 137,257. Total number, 260,389. Of these 201,409 are residents of New England.

The Presbyterians are divided [illegible] or twelve distinct bodies, the largest being the Old School Presbyterian Church, which has, in the United States 2,693 ministers, 3,592 churches, and 292,857 communicants. A large proportion of its membership is in the South. The New School Presbyterian Church is less than one-half as large as the Old School, having 1,527 ministers, 1,468 churches, (a remarkable exception to Protestant denominations, its ministers being more numerous than its churches), and 134,923 members. They are largely in the Free States. The Cumberland Presbyterians, who in many respects have more affinity with the Methodists than with the Presbyterians, are mainly in the South-Western States, and are more numerous in Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri. They number 1,150 ministers, 1,250 churches, and 103,600 members. Next comes the United Presbyterian Church, who adhere to many of the forms of the Scotch church, and are, as a body, strongly opposed to slavery. They are found almost entirely in the Middle States, and have 447 ministers, 674 churches, and 58,781 members. The Reformed Protestant Dutch Church is usually reckoned a Presbyterian body. It too is confined almost entirely to the Middle States, and has 410 ministers, 401 churches, and 50,427 members. The other Presbyterian churches, the United Synod, two Reformed Synods, one Associate Reformed, Free Synod, and Covenanters, are small bodies, none of them numbering more than 12,000 members. Together, the entire Presbyterian bodies in the United States number 6,606 ministers, 7,928 churches, and 693,932 members. In British North America there are 465 ministers of the different Presbyterian bodies, 625 churches, and 49,284 members, making the aggregate for North America, 7,071 ministers, 8,553 churches, and 743,215 members.

The regular Baptists number, in the United States, 8,932 ministers, of whom 1,115 are licentiates, 12,371 churches, and 1,020,442 members. Adding to these those in British North America, we have 9,436 ministers, of whom 1,203 are licentiates, 13,046 churches, and 1,091,167 members—being a little more than all the Presbyterians and the Congregationalists combined.

THE NEW LICENSE LAW.

As we anticipated, the new License Law [illegible] badly. We are told that several [illegible] places in Town are selling liquors in direct contravention of the Law, and the Inspector is unable to detect them. The [illegible] of the Inspector has been called in question, and many charges have been heaped upon him—some of neglect, and others of a worse character. We can well see how the efforts of a man honestly to carry out such a law might be misconstrued; but at all events we think the Town Council was right in appointing a Committee of Enquiry into the charges brought against Mr. Haggart. Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Shaw, shop-keeper, was brought before the Mayor, on a charge of selling liquor without license, on the complaint of the Inspector. Two of the witnesses being absent, through some unexplained cause, his Worship adjourned the case till to-morrow, at 11 o'clock, a. m. After the adjournment several threats and curses against the Inspector issued from the audience, and shouts of "Tar and feather him!" "Put him out!" &c., &c., were frequent. We trust the Mayor, in his usual diligence and attentiveness, will see that Mr. Haggart may suffer no personal violence in the discharge of his duties. In justice to the good name of our Town, we may state that the parties who participated in the demonstration in the Town Hall yesterday could not fairly be classed among the respectable inhabitants.

IN A FOG.

There seems to be a fog hanging round our railroad affairs, and we doubt very much if any person can tell where we will find ourselves when it clears away.—We know that the Town Railroad Committee have been in session frequently of late, and vague rumours reach us that a compromise has been offered by Mr. Fowler's agent. Anything beyond this, however, is surrounded by an impenetrable fog. Will the gentlemen who are watching our interests (and we doubt not they are watching them well) report progress, that the public may know what they may expect? The autumn is approaching, when the Road will begin to yield its large profit, and if no satisfactory arrangement can be come to this summer we succeed in placing ourselves in a position to secure protection against heavy loss at least the better. It was with difficulty that the Government was prevailed upon to deal honestly with us in the collection of the Municipal Loan Fund Debenture interest arrears, and we were spared the disagreeable necessity of levying a special rate only through the tact and wisdom of our Mayor and one or two members of the Council. And all this trouble because Mr. Ferguson, the servant of the Lessee, does not choose to loosen the strings of the Railroad purse, which we are persuaded is heavy and able to bear a little depletion. If it be true that patience is a heavenly virtue, the rate-payers of Peterboro are entitled to a large seat on the big bench, for never before have creditors been with a reasonable delinquent so patiently as we have with the Branch Lessee. Perhaps Mr. Ferguson, through his organ, will tell us that the compromise is, and must come to another way or "the necessity of a direct communication with the Front"—

[illegible] Mr. Ferguson

that,—Keep the screws tight, gentlemen of the Railway Committee, and in due time you will accomplish that [illegible] and your reward double.

☞ The Rev. [illegible] Bethune of the United Church people in Weldon evening next. Parents and every person else interested in the [illegible] of your youth should encourage the exhibition by their countenance and support. The proceeds are to be devoted to procuring an addition to the School Library.

INTERESTING EXHIBITION.

A public examination of the pupils of the Toronto association for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, and of the Blind, will be held in the Town Hall this evening. The Superintendent and the Master of the Institution, accompanied by some of the Pupils, will illustrate the system in use for imparting instruction to those unfortunate persons. The proceeds are devoted to the benefit of the institution. The price of admission is only twelve and a-half cents, and we hope the deputation will meet with liberal encouragement here.

Provincial Parliament.

OPENING of PARLIAMENT

THE GOVERNOR'S SPEECH.

Quebec, March 16.

This day, at 3 o'clock p. m., His Excellency the Governor General proceeded in State to the Chamber of the Legislative Council in the Parliament Buildings.

The members of the Legislative Council being assembled, His Excellency was pleased to command the attendance of the Legislative Assembly, and that House being present, His Excellency was pleased to open the fourth session of the sixth Parliament of the Province of Canada with the following

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

I congratulate you on the abundance of the harvest with which Providence has blessed us—and I think I may express the hope that the commercial prosperity of Canada is rapidly reviving.

In the year 1860 we have had the honour of welcoming to our shores His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Our gracious Sovereign has acknowledged the loyalty which greeted her son in this province, and I feel confident that the general remembrance of his visit will live long in the hearts of our people.

Much has lately been effected by legislation, and I hope that the circumstances of the Province are such as to require few important measures to be laid before you in this the last session of the present Parliament.

It is a satisfaction to me to see that the Consolidated Statutes, both of Upper and Lower Canada have been promulgated in an authentic form; but I must remind you that something yet remains to be done, and I desire your assistance in completing, so far as possible, the law which prevails in either section of the Province.

A measure will be submitted to you having for its object the proper administration of bankrupt estates in Upper Canada. I would earnestly request your careful consideration of so grave a subject. Some changes are required in our commercial law and the further improvement of our prison discipline demands the establishment at particular places of certain well regulated goods or local penitentiaries.

The registration of judgments in Upper Canada has been the cause of expense and delay, and I think you will find it expedient to amend the laws which relate to this matter.

[illegible] of the Commissioner of Crown have increased, and that the greatest efforts have been made to establish a sound system of immigration and promote the settlement of our waste lands.

My attention has been directed to the fact that a writ, issued by the Court of Queen's Bench in England, has been served in this colony. I have been advised to represent to Her Majesty's Government, the expediency of preventing by legislation in Great Britain, any possible conflict of jurisdiction.

I will also add that certain recent legal decisions appear to make it expedient for you to define by statutory enactment of your own, the nature and extent of the laws and customs of Parliament as they shall exist in Canada.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

The accounts for the year which has just expired will be laid before you immediately, and I hope you will have no reason for being dissatisfied with the results which they present. You will see from the [illegible] of the Prince of Wales, [illegible] to visit this loyal, worthy of the Province and of its illustrious guest, was conducted by the Commissioner of Public Works with a due regard to economy.

I have again to ask of your hands the Supplies which will be required for the service of Her Most Gracious Majesty in the current year.

Honourable Gentlemen and Gentlemen:

I have now only to desire you to give your best consideration to the various subjects on which I have touched, and I offer an earnest prayer that God will aid your counsels, and will bless our people with his choicest gifts.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

Quebec, March 16.

On the return of the Speaker to the House, Mr Craik and Mr Purdy were introduced and took their seats.

It was then resolved that the Address, in answer to the Speech, should be discussed on Monday.

The Speaker informed the House that a special return had been made in reference to the Shefford election. Subsequently on the motion of Mr Lemaitre, the poll-books and other documents were all destroyed.

The Speaker also stated that during the recess he had received a paper from Pierre Riset, Esq., which purported to be the resignation of his seat for East Quebec, but considering the resignation under the circumstances to be contrary to law, he had declined to act upon it. He had also received from Isaac Buchanan, Esq., a paper purporting to be the resignation of his seat, but, as the seat of the hon. gentleman was not attached to it, though celebrating it as his solemn act, he had declined to receive it.

Atty. Gen. Cartier moved the adoption of a sessional order, declaring, first, that members whose seats are contested are to withdraw while the subject is under debate. Second, pledging the house to proceed with the utmost severity against members guilty of bribery or other corrupt practices. And third, declaring the offer of money or other advantage to a member to be a high crime and misdemeanor.

After some further routine business the House adjourned.

Quebec, March 18.

After routine business Messrs. Rykert and Macdonald were introduced and took their seats.

On motion of Attorney Gen. Cartier the House proceeded to the Order of the Day, which was the consideration of His Excellency's speech from the Throne at the opening of the session.

Mr. McBeth then moved the Address, seconded by Mr. Odell.

The first clause was put and carried.

On the second clause being read, which related to the Prince of Wales' visit,

Mr Gowan intimated that there was to be an amendment submitted to this paragraph, but it appears that it was not yet printed.

The debate was adjourned until to-morrow.

Mr. Ferres then moved as a question of privilege, that as from an examination of the poll books of the municipality of the township of Grenby in the county of Shefford, it appeared that gross irregularities had occurred in connexion with the entries in the said poll book, in violation of the freedom of election and in breach of privileges of elections, the returning officer be brought to the bar of the House.

After some discussion the debate was postponed.

The House then adjourned.

THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.

In the House of Commons on the 26th, Mr. Cave moved the following resolutions: 1st. That the means hitherto employed by England for the suppression of the African slave trade have failed; 2nd, That this failure has mainly arisen from having endeavoured almost exclusively, to prevent the supply instead of to check the demand; 3rd, That the remedy is not to be found in continuing fruitless into-chase operations where slavery exists, but in suppressing the working population of those countries in which slavery has been abolished; and 4th. That therefore, while reprobating measures should be continued and even rendered more effective, every possible encouragement and assistance should be given to the introduction of free immigrants, and especially of settlers from China into the British West India colonies.

Mr. Cave stated that the government proposed to send a force to arrest the slave trade in different parts of the coast, and to destroy the barracoons. He also proposed to send out a commissioner to Cuba to confer with the Spanish authorities there, and to endeavour to induce them to adopt measures for the suppression of the slave trade. He also proposed to send out a commissioner to the United States, to confer with the government there, and to endeavour to induce them to adopt measures for the suppression of the slave trade. He also proposed to send out a commissioner to the United States, to confer with the government there, and to endeavour to induce them to adopt measures for the suppression of the slave trade.

Mr. Bentinck said that the government proposed to send a force to arrest the slave trade in different parts of the coast, and to destroy the barracoons. He also proposed to send out a commissioner to Cuba to confer with the Spanish authorities there, and to endeavour to induce them to adopt measures for the suppression of the slave trade. He also proposed to send out a commissioner to the United States, to confer with the government there, and to endeavour to induce them to adopt measures for the suppression of the slave trade.

Mr. Bentinck feared that the Southern States would re-establish the slave trade. He hoped that the government would never recognise a Southern Confederacy without an express stipulation against the revival of the slave trade. He suggested that the slave vessels should be taken under the protection of England, which would enable her cruisers to arrest the slave dealers as privateers.

After some further remarks from various gentlemen, Lord Palmerston said the house was much indebted to the member who had raised this discussion, who must feel that if he objected to the working of his resolution there was no practical difference between him and the government; but it was a calamity to the country to say that it encouraged the slave trade after the great, and, indeed, successful efforts she had so long made to put a stop to it. The noble lord, in the most indignant language, condemned the shameless and profligate conflict of Spain, and complained strongly of the policy of the United States, who, from a mistaken sense of national honor, allowed the protection of their flag to the purposes of the slave trade. He hoped that Mr. Cave would be satisfied with the result of the discussion, and not press his resolutions.

Mr. Cave agreed to withdraw the resolutions.

AN EMIGRANT IN SEARCH OF HIS WIFE.

HER STRANGE RECOVERY, AND HIS VERY COLD RECEPTION.

From the Montreal Commercial Advertiser of the 11th.

On Friday evening last, a tall, anxious looking man, named James Watson, a native of England, but recently of Pittstown, Ga., to which place he had emigrated last Fall, entered our office to have an advertisement inserted requesting information of one Annie Smith, his wife, who was about six weeks ago heard of as being in Montreal. He informed us he had long been searching for his wife, and had advertised her in many United States papers, and left no stone unturned to discover her whereabouts. He stated besides that he had been on foot all day long, looking for his wife in this city, which he had travelled over the two preceding days, and all to no purpose. About an hour after leaving our office he fell in with one or two boys engaged in selling newspapers when after some inquiry he was directed to the very room in which Annie Smith resided, whom he claims as his wife, and on entering met with a very cold reception, being asked how he came to find out her stopping place, and informed him (what perhaps was news to him) that he was not her husband and might go about his business and must give no trouble. The unwelcome visitor pleaded and remonstrated in vain, Annie Smith would have none of him, when tired and vexed he lay down on a bed in her room, thus putting a quiet claim to the mastership of the house, and his rights as husband. Annie, on seeing this, went out for the police, and on her deposition will explain, Watson immediately pushed up the effects and took his departure with them. On returning she found her room stripped of every thing and that Mr. Watson had disappeared. She, on Saturday morning repaired to the Police Court and made the following deposition:

Annie Moore Smith of Somersetshire, England, and now in Montreal, spinster, after being sworn doth depose and say, I arrived in Montreal on the 27th October last. For the last two months I have been living in Jarer street, where I occupy a room in a house in said street which I furnished myself. Yesterday (the 9th March) about six o'clock p. m. I went to the Post Office, and after this went to a friend's house to take tea, returning home about 8 or 9 in the evening, when I found a person named James Watson, of Pittstown, U. S., in my bed-room; on requesting him to leave my house he refused, and threatened to take my life with a sword cane. Finding he was inclined to be violent and fearing for my life, I left the house to go for the police, and at the same time he committed an assault upon my person by violently pushing me. I was away for the police about an hour, and on returning home I found that the said James Watson had left the house and feloniously stole a large quantity of wearing apparel, my property, of the value of two hundred dollars. Believing James Watson is about to make his escape I pray for his arrest.

Annie Smith, seeing everything was removed from her apartments gave information of the fact at the Police Station, when Sub-Chief Bissonette proceeded to search for Mr. Watson, spending the whole night, and the following day [Saturday] up till two o'clock, in this way, when he at last succeeded in capturing him as he was preparing to leave town for New York. On being brought to the Police Court, the Magistrate, Mr. Coursol, read the indictment founded on Annie Moore Smith's deposition, charging James Watson with having feloniously stolen and carried away one feather bed, one silk gown, one shawl and a large quantity of wearing apparel worth $200, the property of one Annie Smith, spinster. On being asked to plead, Watson, in a tone of trouble said,—"Good it I stand my own property. I bought all that for my wife, and can't be told I'm stealing." He then informed the Magistrate he was complainant's husband, having been married to her in Trinity Church, Abbey Street, Regent's Park, London, in 1858, and that his wife had the marriage certificate, which she refused to give him the previous night. He landed in New York last September, and had worked hard to provide a home for his wife, who sailed from England for Quebec before his first letter reached her, and landed in October last, since which time he had advertised in various papers to find her out, and finally learned by letter from her own friends at home, that she was in Montreal. She had three children by him only one of whom was here, a boy five years old, whom he longed to see, but whom his wife refused to produce. On going into the wife's apartment, "she (himself very much put about, and wanted to know how I'd found her." A stranger man was also in the place and ordered him [Watson] out, saying he had no business there, when he refused to go saying he surely had a right to stay in his wife's room. The man astonished, said,—"Oh, are you her husband?" "You're from the States?" "I heard about you." He then coolly lifted a stick to put Watson out, when the latter drawing a dirk dampened the courage of "the man of stock" who vanquished quickly from the place. Watson said, besides, his wife had a watch worth £15 his property. The matter having brought all the property to Court, and the prisoner too, she was confronted with Watson, who put to her the following ques-

Watson—You seem to say we were not lawfully married in Trinity Church, Abbey street, Regent's Park, London?

Smith—I do; every preparation was twice made for our marriage but it was never celebrated.

Watson—Would you have any objection to give me back my child?

Smith—I offered to do so if you would give back my things.

Watson—There's no use asking her any more questions; she denies all.

Watson—Looking reproachfully at his wife, said in a melancholy tone—It's a hard case to be brought to all this trouble, when she replied—If you'd been more of a man it wouldn't have been this way.

The Magistrate then asked Watson, who seemed very sad at the prospect of going to jail on a charge of larceny, if he had any one to bail him, when he answered no; His Worship told him he would have to be committed till Monday for examination, if he could find no bail, and that the property would be kept safe in the meantime. Annie Smith, who is middle aged and rather good looking, seemed sorry she placed him otherwise at the committal of the unfortunate fellow calling himself her husband.

From the same paper, 12th inst.

Yesterday, Jas. Watson, who was committed on Saturday, on a charge of stealing $200 worth of clothing, the property of Annie Smith, his alleged wife, was brought before the Police Magistrate for examination. As far as we could learn of the proceedings, which were private, Jas. Watson has been discharged from custody, and has had his son delivered to him as the result of an agreement on his part to restore Annie Smith's effects. We understand Mr. Watson was greatly pleased with the bargain, and overjoyed at meeting his little son, whom he will take with him to the United States.

W. & T. LEEMING'S WEEKLY COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Montreal, March 14, 1861.

PRODUCE.—It is seldom we have so quiet a week as the past one, in produce. The feeling to which we have alluded in our last three reports, viz: the indisposition of merchants to operate further than was necessary to supply pressing wants, appears this week to have reached its highest point; and to effect sales without sacrifice has been simply impossible. This has been the case, not only with shippers, but also with the local trade; and many held on to the last hurrah before they would enter the market. The advices by the "Bohemian," will effect a change, and the coming week will be a more active one, and prices will be fixed by the intelligence it brings. The demand for Wheat is considerably more lively than Flour, and good samples move off, with a little pressure, at highest rates; but for all kinds of Flour and Grain, we can only quote asking prices, as the needs of a seller allow a very wide margin.

FLOUR.—No. 1 Superine, $5.30 to $5.40; other grades as last week, with no demand. Bag Flour slightly declined $2.70 to $2.90.

WHEAT.—Prime samples U. C. Spring will bring $1.15 to $1.16; inferior kinds $1.12 to $1.14, "ex-Cars."

☞ John Quincy Adams asserted that the "abandonment of tobacco would add five years to the average of human life."

☞ From the French post-office returns for 1860, it appears that on an average every inhabitant of France writes 6 letters per annum. In England, the average is 24, just three times the number; it is less in Scotland, still less in Ireland, where the post-office does not pay its own expenses.

It is free from party prejudice, though strongly in favour of Union, Peace and Freedom. It also devotes enough space to Literature to render it valuable for family reading, and altogether, is designed to be useful and interesting to young and old of both sexes. The Editorial, the Sermon, and the Family, Page, it is hoped, find it quite interesting. Of the paper three editions are published on as follows:

The Daily Witness, containing 4 pages, is published every afternoon, and mail on the evening issue, at $4 per annum.

The Weekly Witness, containing 12 pages, is published every Wednesday and Saturday morning, and sent by the early morning mail, at $2 per annum.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

Celebrated Female Pills!

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir J. Clarke, M.D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well known Female Medicine has not been a mere and sudden introduction to the notice of the public, but has been for many years steadily advancing in favour of ladies, and gentlemen, in every part of the United Kingdom. It is now, however, more widely known than ever before, and although it is a remedy, which, from its very nature, is destined to be kept entirely from the knowledge of the male sex, still, as it is found to be a most valuable assistant to the married ladies in the performance of their duties, it is deemed necessary to make it known to them, that they may not be deprived of its use through ignorance.

In all cases of Nervous and General Affections, pain in the back and limbs, Pains in the Head, Hysterics, Palpitation, Fluttering of the Heart, Low and Weak Spirits, Tremors, Nervous Irritability, Hysterics, Sick Headache, Vertigo, and all the painful diseases accompanied by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure where all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have power over the Uterine System of the female frame, and will restore the healthy action of the same when all other means have failed.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY GEORGE ROSE, OF STRATFORD, C. W.

PART 2.

We may also proceed to consider the subject of farm improvements, and first of the utility and propriety of improvements generally, and then more particularly discussing the different operations. I think it will be readily admitted by all, that even in the most settled parts of the country few or no farms are to be found that have been brought to that state of cultivation to which improvement seems to be practicable. There is no doubt that on the best farms in the country a large amount of labor might yet be expended to good advantage, provided the means were at command to produce it. But it is equally true that a very large majority of our farmers have not the means—have not the capital, without making in the shape of comfort, and absolutely squandered on their own industry to yield them the smallest return by the making of improvement, but in a majority of cases of paying the interest, and consequently have not means on hand to undertake extensive improvements. The question may here be asked, is it prudent to contract debt for any purpose with no other prospect of discharging it, except the increased crops likely to result from the operation. My opinion is that it would depend very much on the kind of improvement proposed, and amount of outlay required, to produce a good result. If their means were such that there were a reasonable prospect of [illegible] the interest of the [illegible] of the first year, then I think it would be safe to undertake it, but further I do not think it prudent to venture. It is frequently asserted that supplying the sum of one or capital can profitably invest his means in improvement, that on the same principle the capital may be borrowed for the purpose. Now, although as an abstract principle the [illegible] and the same they are widely different in practice. I believe that the man who possesses a farm and has the means to improve it, can [illegible] in doing so than if he were to borrow the money for this purpose.

In order to illustrate let us suppose a man of two [illegible] having each a field of 10 acres which require $200 to be laid out in drilling or removing stones. There is a reasonable prospect that the increased crops will pay the outay in three years. One man has the necessary amount on hand, the other borrows it at reasonable interest.—But crops are by no means certain—it is quite possible that one or more of these years may be an entire failure—and while the man of capital will no doubt be disappointed in having to wait longer for a return of his investment than he anticipated, he is put to no inconvenience on account of it, while he who is bound to make up the sum in a given time, and being disappointed in realizing it from the source he depended on, will very probably be compelled to make sacrifices to meet his engagements.

☞ The following paragraph is the connecting part between parts VIII. and IX., omitted by mistake:

To secure the greatest convenience and economy of room I would recommend for an ordinary farm of say 200 acres to build a barn 60 by 80 feet, with the threshing floor running crosswise in the ordinary way. The posts may be 18 feet high; let the bays be each 21 feet, and the floor 18 feet. It should be underbuilt with a stone wall if circumstances will permit, if not it should be set on good cedar posts. The stable should be at least 9 feet high, and if 10 all the better. The walls if not of stone should be double boarded, or where lumber is dear and timber plentiful it may be built up with cedar logs, cut so as to fit tight between the posts. Let the mows under the floor and one bay be fitted up for stalls. If the walls of the stable are of stone as they should be they will be 2 feet thick. The bay and the floor will then be 37 feet clear of the outside walls. The plate under the sill on one side of the floor will come exactly in the middle of the passage where there will not be in the way of the stalls, and then let the other side will be just where the partition between the stable and barn bases will come. There will be room for 9 stalls of the size I have described on each side, or 18 in all. Along that side of the floor which comes over the passage two or more shutters may be made for letting down the fodder, and at the far end of the passage stairs should lead to the mows above. There should be three doors in front of the stable, one for each row of stalls, and one to open into the passage.

Poetry.

LAUGH WHILE THE SUN SHINES

Now that the dark days of winter are past,
Gone are the snowstorms and chilling is the blast;
Sudden and lovely the flowrets upspring,
Gay in the sunshine the merry birds sing.
Then is joyous lay,
All nature seems to say,
"Laugh while the sun shines,
Be wise and be gay,
Life can't be always a morning in May!"

So say the streams as they bubble along,
Day and night murmuring some pleasant song;
So say the trees as they burst into bloom,
So say the flowrets that smile o'er the tomb!
Then is grateful lay,
Nature seems to say,
"Laugh while the sun shines,
Be wise and be gay—
Life can't be always a morning in May!"

THE GARRET LODGER.

A STORY OF CITY LIFE.

The shades of evening were about to close on a dull, cold, rainy day in November. Lamps began to be kindled and glared redly through the mist; blazing fires in kitchen, parlor and drawing room became more evident, and looked provokingly comfortable to passers-by as they lighted up the faces of those gathered around. The savory steam of supper came from kitchens and mixed with the unsavory fog without. Men hurried along wrapped in ponderous outer garments, some with a contented, homeward-bound look, which evinced that their labors for the day were at an end—others with a discontented air of business, indicative of work to come.—The rain descended in a steady drizzle, the gutters were running, and all was mud and water.

In the middle of the road, in a half-quiet street, a man stood playing the violin. It was dismally comic. The whole out-of-door world was suggestive of suicide, and this man was playing lively horn-pipes and country-dances. But though his music was merry his heart was sad.

He was old and very shabby. Sixty years had fallen on him, and fallen heavily. His face was pale and wrinkled, his form bent, his hair a silvery white. He was dressed in a threadbare, worn-out suit of black. The rain had soaked through his poor clothes, and streamed from his wretched hat. The violin shone with an unnatural polish. It was an unpropitious state of things for violin-playing, where there exists any necessity to play in tune.

People paid small attention to him. Some laughed, some said he looked poor, others that he looked wet. At last a policeman came up and told him to "move on". The old man, with an air of humiliation, immediately ceased from ear-torturing, put the violin and bow under his arm, and shuffled away with his hands in his pockets: he "moved on!"

The night had now completely arrived, in all its desolation. The old fiddler had been out in the rain for several days, and on every day his health had become worse. He felt scarcely alive—feeble to a degree, and cold as a stone. He resolved to seek his lodging at once, and go to bed and try to get warm. Sea-coal and blankets are good in November—but he had none of them.

He came to his house, situated in a squalid and poverty-stricken district, and was mounting the dirty, decayed stair-case, when his landlady encountered him, and putting her arms akimbo, stood directly in his way.

"Now, old gas'-bones," said she, "when am I to get some money? Here you have been shiving in my house better nor three weeks, and not a half penny I've had yet. This is the third time of asking, remember, I never let any of my other lodgers go over the week, only you're a respectable sort of a look about you, and I don't like to be hard. Ah! I've lost a deal that way."

"You shall have your money directly, my good lady," said the old man, supporting himself by the bannister, for he had grown almost too weak to stand.

Her money! He had been out all day; he had played, unceasingly, airs that are wont to please; all might see that he was in extreme want, and many had seen it who were in want of nothing; he had been out all day—and he brought home four-pence all night!

"Directly!" repeated the landlady: "come, that's good now, that is! Here, you've got a nice attic all to yourself, which many a gentleman, born an' bred, han't got no better; and when the landlady comes an pax for her lawful rent, she's put off with 'directly!' It wont do, old gentleman—it wont do!"

"To-morrow; I'll pay you to-morrow!" exclaimed the debtor.

"Ah, to-morrow never comes!" said the landlady. "To-morrow is just the same as never. I'd no-like' my body said 'I'll pay you never, so I'll pay you to-morrow.'"

"Upon my word I'll pay you to-morrow!" repeated the old man who seemed ready to cry.

The landlady was softened, in spite of her sourness, by his air of utter dejection. "Well, I dare say you will if you can," said she. "I don't want to be hard, but I can't paut here widout, you see, and I'm obliged to look sharp after every penny. However, as I said, I don't want to be hard, so we'll talk about it to-morrow. Good night, old gentleman."

"Good night," said the old man, and he began to ascend the stairs.

"Stop!" said the landlady, "I've a bit of candle in my pocket, I'll light you up."

She struck a light, and the old man began to ascend the stairs, leaning on the wall for support, and panting for breath. "Ah! I never knew, upon my honor, I never owed him for the same thing before."

SUPERSTITION AT COPEN-HAGEN.

Concerning the continuation of these superstitions there is told a story to the effect that a certain prince [illegible] was born, and the Queen [illegible] as soon as she was able to walk, [illegible] to see the christening. Immediately on her arrival [illegible] fainted, so they determined to commit a witch [illegible] declared the wounds would always continue smarting unless a living child was buried underneath. So they prepared a recess of brick-work under the ramparts, and descended it gaily with evergreens and flowers and placed thereon a little table and chairs, with toys, dolls, and sweetmeats, and a tree lighted with many little tapers; and having enticed a little girl of five years old, they clothed her in new garments, and brought her to the flower, accompanied by a band of music; and whilst the child is delight, played with the dolls and toys, the opening quickly closed up the aperture with solid brickwork, and shovelled the earth over it. From that time the ramparts sank no more.—Lowland and the Danish Isles.

WHANG DOODLE ORATION.

The following rare exhibition of spread-eagle, whang-doodle eloquence is reported to have been delivered by Col. Leary, a member of the Missouri Legislature. The subject before the House was the secession of the State from the Union:—

Mr. Speaker—Everybody is pitching into this matter like toad frogs into a willow swamp; so a lovely evening in the balmy month of June, when the mellow light of the moon fills with a delicious flood the thin, etherial atmospheric air. (Applause.) Sir, I want to put in a word, or perhaps a word and a half.

There seems to be a disposition to fight. I say, if there is any fighting to be done, come on with your corn-cobs and lightning bugs! (Applause.) In the language of the ancient Romans,

"Come one, come all, this rock shall fly
From its firm base—in a pig's eye."

Now, there has been a great deal of bombast here to-day. I call call it bombast from "Alpha" to "Omega." (I don't understand the meaning of the words though)—Sir, the question to refer is a great and magnificent question. It is the all absorbing question—like a sponge, sir—a large unmeasurable sponge, of globe shape, in a small tumbler of water—it soaks up everything. Sir, I stand here with the weapons I have designated to defend the rights of St. Louis county, the rights of any other county—even the county of Cedar itself. [Applause.] Sir, the debate has assumed a latitudinosity. We have had a little black-jack buncombe, a little two-bit Sanscombe, bombast buncombe, bunghole buncombe, and the devil and his grandmother knows what other kind of buncombe. [Laughter.]

Why, sir, just give some of 'em a little Southern soap and a little Northern water, and quicker than a bound pup can lick a skillet they will make enough buncombe lather to wash the golden dock that rounds abroad the azure mouth of heaven. [Cheers and laughter.] I allude to the starry firmament.

The Speaker—The gentleman is out of order. He must confine himself to the question.

Mr. Riley—Just retain your linen if you please. I'll stick to the text as close as a pitch plaster to a pine plank, or a lean pig to a hot jaw rock. [Cries of "go on!" "you're in!"]

I want to say to these cowhiderous gentlemen, these ignorant individuals, these detonating destructionators, these savageious vehements, come on with your contrabilities! If I don't—well, I'll soak the Gulf of Mexico through a goose quill. [Laughter and applause.] Perhaps you think I am diminutive talents and sparks in the meadows elevation. You may discover, gentlemen, you are laboring under an great misapprehension through you had understood your inner vestment. In the language of the noble bard:

"I was not born in a thicket
To be scared by a cricket."
[Applause.]

Sir, we have lost our proper position. Our proper position is to the zenith and nadir—our heads to the east, our heels to the other, at right angle with the horizon, spangled by that azure arc of the fourteen firmament, bright with the constellations, and proud as a speckled trout throw on a sandy fair day. [Cheers.]

"But here lies the mighty fallen," in the language of the poet-Silversmith. We have lost our proper position. We have now got a slash-in-dicular or diagnological position. And what is the cause? Echo answers "buncombe, sir, buncombe." The people have been fed on buncombe, while a lot of oppressed, ring-boned, hair-lifter, whisky-galled, swine-eyed, splitbreeched, dissapointed, pollutified, goodnibbled politicians, have had their noses in the public crib until there isn't feeding enough left to make gravy for a sick grasshopper. [Cheers and laughter.]

Sir, these lousy brute beasts are digging at the public pap. They nap the down your milk-factory, or you'll have a split head. By they, think they can stuff such buncombe down our throats? "No, sir; you might as well try to stuff butter in a wild cat with a hot ball. (Obstreperous laughter.) The thing can't be did.

The public confidence is a great institution. It is the [illegible] of [illegible] of the greatest, perhaps, that ever [illegible] religion or the [illegible] it is confidence existing generally. With this I say: Occasionally a big one is brought to, to feed the expensive for the purpose of keeping down the general cussedness of creation, and [illegible] the brotherhood of [illegible] that body that characterizes the [illegible] of [illegible]. The [illegible] [illegible] is applied. The [illegible] are [illegible] with the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ON THE SPEECH of the FRENCH EMPEROR.

From the Montreal Herald.

It seems to be a fact in whatever way it may be accounted for, that the Emperor Napoleon's late policy has cost re-establishment of the confidence of the French nation.—We do not pretend to assert that there has been a wide divergence of views between the sovereign and his subjects—it is not our mode the things done or the manner of doing them, that may be regarded as the principal cause of public uneasiness in France. Conquest rules exactly, not because she naturally sees obstacles to be feared, but because she is enveloped in a mist, and because, although her path may be clear enough of danger, she is not certain that her next few steps may not place her on the brink of some frightful abyss. The Emperor seems paralyzed to account for the timidity which rules business enterprise in France of more than half its energy. He relishes it—he tries to show that it is absolutely groundless—he emphatically declares his own wishes and intentions. But he also clearly reveals to the world, in doing so, that the confidence which is necessary to a nation's self-development does not, because it cannot, live in an atmosphere of political absolutism rendered dense by secrecy. It is essential to its very existence that it shall have some range of provision. This denied it, it languishes and dies. The Emperor's speech delivered on Monday last at the opening of the Legislative Session of 1861, is an illustration of the above position. It is an elaborate effort to establish confidence in the public mind, with a view to encourage the French people in a diligent and assured pursuit of the arts of peace. We have little doubt that the effort will observe can—that the Emperor intends peace—that his policy really does "to increase agricultural, commercial, and industrial production." We see no sufficient reason to suspect him of playing the hypocrite. We believe him when he says, "My firm determination is not to enter on any conflict where the cause of France is not based upon right and justice." It seems most probable to us that the declaration has been made without an arrière pensee. But it is just because there is room for an arrière pensee—because there is a canker in the political constitution of France which is discernable to all eyes but those of the Emperor himself—and because out of that veiled reason have once and again issued projects which have taken Europe by surprise, that France moves on her way in perpetual apprehension. She cannot see far enough before her—in some measure, soothing and reassuring—but she cannot but remember that the policy of France is hidden in the will of one man. She may wish to believe that between his words and his will the correspondence is perfect—but it is not in human nature to give to what is unseen and unknowable the same implicit trust which is reposed in the seen and the known. The Constitution, which reserves to the "Emperor for absolute direction of the foreign affairs of France, deprives him of the power of evoking national faith, even when he would. It creates a nervous excitement which no assurances of his are fully competent to calm. Subject to the large abatement necessitated by this fundamentally defective distribution of political power, the Imperial Speech will be read with much pleasure. It announces two things, both good as far as they go—to France, the liberty of professing such change as she can upon the ruling mind by a free discussion of his policy in the Corps Legislatif—to Europe, the principle of the non-intervention "which leaves each country master of its destinies, localises disputes, and prevents them from degenerating into European conflicts." It is true that the Emperor places an arbitrary limit to each of these boons—but it is not less true, that the concession of principle is, in each case, a very valuable relaxation of autocratic rule. As to the first, the announcement of the Emperor from the throne differs little or nothing from that made a few weeks ago in the Moniteur. There is no doubt that the change then initiated still leaves the Emperor "master of the situation." In theory, the power of determining the policy of France will rest constitutionally with him. In effect, however, no monarch who openly commits the national will, who subjects his own projects to legitimate discussion, and who explains through a regularly constituted medium full intimation of the settled judgment of his people, can exercise the same unlimited and arbitrary power as the Sovereign who appeals to no such process. Napoleon III. is deliberately putting his authority under some degree of moral restraint while admitting his people to share with him the responsibility of swaying the destinies of France. He does not hand back to them that which by a coup d'etat he took from them. He still says "L'etat c'est moi"—but, in his capacity of ultimate arbiter, he asks to be enlightened as to the state of public opinion, and to be assisted by the suggestions of the public judgment. It is a step in the right direction—a step which he has taken, he seems to explain and to defend. If French patriotism should determine to turn it to wise account, it may render it available for establishing larger checks upon the abuse of absolutism, and through this opening force its way to a much wider area of constitutional freedom. The announcement of the principle of non-intervention in the affairs of other nations is also qualified by vague limitations. In reference to it, the Emperor says, "I certainly am not ignorant that this system has the inconvenience of appearing to authorize many treacherous measures, and the two extreme opinions would prefer; the one that France should assume the chimerical mission of every revolution; the other, that she should place herself at the head of a general reaction. I shall not allow myself to be turned aside from my path by either of these influences. It suffices for the greatness of the country to maintain its right where its honor is attached, to lend its support where its support is required, to favour of a just cause." The words we have printed in italics reserve to France, or more properly, to the the Emperor, the right of judging when and where the principle of non-intervention shall be departed from. The declaration, therefore, presents a very narrow basis for international confidence. But here, as elsewhere the Emperor has done public homage to a sound and valuable principle; and through its application—if it, be has been child and capricious, the pledge he has voluntarily given to France and to Europe cannot fail in the path in which he intends to walk, with constant hint him and her to find strong reasons of justification whenever he may resolve to depart from it. It is in the action of a moral principle, which is exactly a constitutional principle in England, against the wrong of another nation or sovereign. On the whole it is satisfactory to observe that at no former moment in the history of Europe were there half the chances of success in the conflict between the spirit of Freedom and that throughout the civilized world. The growing enlightenment of the people, the increasing facilities of communication, the more general diffusion of the press, the more frequent appeals to public opinion, the more constant habit of discussing foreign Powers,—the contents himself with saying that he has endeavoured to prove to them the sincerity of his desires for peace. But the whole cast of the speech is pacific; and if it is not an avowed intention to commence as many would have wished, it indicates a tendency in the Emperor's policy towards those objects which public opinion in this country would pronounce most desirable and praiseworthy.

SALES UNDER EXECUTION.

From the Quebec Chronicle.

We noticed in our last the reckless injustice which presides over the sale of the moveable goods of distressed debtors under judicial decision. The subject being too long to be disposed of in a single article, we again return to it. We continue to deal with the branch of the question already open for the observation of our readers, we allude to the "forced" sale of goods and chattles under judgment. The frightful wrongs perpetrated in the compulsory alienation of land property we shall reserve for future publication; the present brief notice of an old and erroneous grievance shall be confined to what is perhaps the lesser injury to both debtor and creditor. As to the first, the reader has only to remember that the debtor, as the law now stands, has no refuge from the permit of a creditor holding a judgment against him. That judgment, if registered, operates as a mortgage against all property he possesses; say, more, even other his death the only safety for his heir is to renounce it, as more burthensome than profitable. Nor is this all, he is liable to be pounced upon at any moment that he appears solvent, and all that he has with some few memorable exceptions (the exemptions of the law) seized and sold on the same release principles at the will of any [illegible]. Under such circumstances, what can be more cruel and unjust than the [illegible] unfortunate debtor of the means of liquidating his debt, as far as may be, out of the proceeds of his own effects? If there is one species of property more than another which the law ought most peculiarly to respect and most zealously regard, it is the property of persons in so pitiful and helpless a position. If there be a person to be protected and encouraged in the effort to discharge his legal liabilities it is the honest debtor who seems to gain delay by reasonless opposition, or to defeat the payment of a just debt by collusive arrangements. The very reverse is the case; the law which presses with a giant's force on the merely unfortunate is daily turned into the shield and buckler of the dishonest.—While the unfortunate debtor who would pay if he could, sees his goods (probably all he has on earth) virtually confiscated before his face without benefit to himself or even to his creditors, the adroit knave who can pay and will not pay, contrives to shelter himself under the self-same system from just claims by a "bigger swagger" imitation of a sale virtually held in a "hole and corner," but yet according to the strict literal interpretation of usage and law. All the process needs is a confederate and sometimes finds bailiff, and neither is difficult to procure. Then two evils attend the present system, the vast impunity and consequent encouragement to knaves, the other the oppression of honest and unfortunate poverty. To illustrate: a short time ago a horse worth thirty pounds currency was sold (by arles) for thirty pence, and the creditor brought in debtor to the bailiff, making the sale in all the sum of fourteen shillings!

THE AGE OF BRASS.

(From a N. Y. Paper.)

A monstrous nuisance to cheat and rob the credulous, both rich and poor, known as the "Dollar Jewelry Trade," has begun to unfold itself in this city, and thousands of agents will soon be despatched to all quarters of the Union, the Canadas, Mexico, South America and the West Indies, with the design of reaping a plentiful harvest, while the "enterprise" lasts, and before the game shall be "blown." The honor of the conception of this swindle belongs to a well known firm in the gift-book business. Perceiving a flagging business, and perceiving the want of some brilliant scheme to revivify their trade and keep their coffers full—after a great deal of labor, one of the firm conceived the present vaunt plan. The constant part of the apparatus used in this manufacture gift stuff is undoubtedly the models and forms in which the jewelry, the bracelets, chains, rings, lockets, &c., are shaped and cast. And were they obliged to have these models and [illegible] made by for them, charged the with such new dollars originated in ornamental jewelry, their profits would be lessened nearly one half from the figure they now amount to. They avail themselves of what in the business is known as the Attleboro Dodge.—This is the old plan adopted years ago by the manufacturing companies of cheap jewelry, who bought from the leading and really honest houses in the trade the models with which they made the profusive and substantial gold jewelry, of course of the latest pattern too; in these models they cast their own cheap composition metals, and out of them turned a deceptive imitation of the true article. It is in such models, then purchased third-hand from those last mentioned houses, that our "Dollar Jewelry" men make up their articles which for the last six weeks have been seen and wondered over by the public, exhibited in certain shop windows in our principal thoroughfares. Every species of jewelry ornament is made up the same; out of our rings and breast pins, bracelets, watch-chains, rings, seals, watch-keys—some cut with these French glass stones dotted to represent pearls, some with [illegible] white and colored beads, cut and [illegible] in imitation of coral; some with [illegible] on shaped clay to imitate onyxes; all of them set in, attached to, or surrounded by the so-called gold! and each piece displayed in the windows, and placed, not on [illegible] to show some beautiful [illegible] but promiscuously, with a glass on which, in [illegible] letters, is printed, "Any article of jewelry in this case for only one dollar." Besides, [illegible] to tell you that in consequence of the [illegible] there is not one grain of gold! and even in their single purchases the quantity of gold in each case does not amount to the value of two and a-half cents! The principal composition used in the manufacture of its coral, is a combination of [illegible] and the invention of Professor [illegible] and was introduced to the jewelers of this country several years ago, and is known by the name of Oroide. It is the most precious [illegible] of gold that has ever been discovered, and it cannot be told from the genuine article, even by experts! Its color is [illegible] and it is [illegible] to [illegible] anything it touches, as it does not contain the slightest particle of [illegible] in its composition, that article of which the [illegible] is made. A very brilliant idea, indeed, then, was it to manufacture for this temporary, the counterfeit [illegible] of jewelry, of which does not cost, in the metal, anything, nothing together, and making up, thirty-eight cents! and which is sold at the "ruinous price of one dollar," mercilessly merely to get the cash wherewith to meet their notes, save themselves from the [illegible] to suspend or fail, and preserve their credit! Purchasers [illegible] About ten months ago the first [illegible] sale of this trash was opened in Philadelphia, and about the [illegible] was started in Boston. [illegible] is not quite two months since the "original one" was started in Broadway in this city. And now they swarm in every prominent promenade and business street of each of these cities, are represented by at least one in almost every town or city of any prominence in the Union, East, [illegible] and [illegible] in any of the shops thereby crowded with promenaders, without coming across one of these dens, the showy windows surrounded with a greedy and admiring crowd. It is a fearful and astounding fact that although this "Dollar Jewelry" humbug has not been two months introduced, there are now no less than twenty-six different places where it is on sale in New York alone, and half as many in Brooklyn and Williamsburg. The city is positively flooded with it! and unless the public escape the warning in time these men who have gotten up the fraud will actually fulfil their intention to originating it, of actually duping the creditors of this city and country out of more than five million dollars, which they have earned hard enough, but which in such a case as this, to purchase this stuff, would be nothing less than casting it with open eyes and clear senses, yet wantonly, into the streets.

A CHAPTER OF RAILWAY HISTORY.

We were led last week from the publication of the frauds in connection with the Great Western Railway, to go a little into the new branch of metaphysics introduced with railways, which may not be slightly termed "Railroad morality." Not that really any new feature of human depravity is exhibited by their introduction, except it be in the largeness of the transactions and the astounding effrontery of the wrong-doers—but the vices of deceit, falsehood, theft, duplicity, dishonesty and impudence, seem invariably to be concommitants with Railroads. The history of every Railway in the country will corroborate this statement. Being best acquainted with our own we have thought a resume of the history of the Millbrook Branch may not be without use at this time, especially as efforts are making to inveigle us again into a sort of compromise, whereby we should lose in right and equity what we now possess.

It was during 1857 that the subject of a Railroad connection with Port Hope was discussed. A public meeting was called, when it was decided from the representations made to us of the advantages of such a connection, to subscribe for stock for building the Millbrook Branch. A By-law was prepared by a legal gentleman in Town proposing to take stock to the amount of £20,000. The first by-law after being published was found to be illegal; another was prepared which also proved useless; a third one was considered all right and accordingly escaped a similar fate. When this last By-law was submitted to the people for approval they had been previously assured by John Fowler that in subscribing for the stock in trust, guarantee to keep the road when built and to pay them 6 per cent upon the amount subscribed—preferring any security they might require. Several of the leading men endorsed Mr. Fowler's offer, and gave glowing descriptions of the advantages resulting from the Road, at so trifling an outlay by the Town of only two per cent annually as a sinking fund. Messrs. Burnham and Ferguson were conspicuous for the vehemence of their advocacy to go on with the road, as its completion was of such paramount importance to the prosperity of Peterborough. The eloquence of these gentlemen and others succeeded, and the rate-payers with a few exceptions consented unanimous to go into debt for the £20,000. The By-law was duly approved and passed, and 2,000 shares of stock were subscribed for by the Mayor. Shortly after this event one of the first opponents to the scheme became suddenly converted, and contracted to the Town Council, of which he was then a member, that he knew of £20,000 worth of Municipal Loan Fund debentures which he thought might be obtained by the Town if a considerable were given for the same. £1,500 sterling was the sum stipulated, and in course of time the debentures (less the former) were placed in the Town Treasurer's hands. A new By-law [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] quantity of gold in each [illegible] was passed to the issue of these debentures; another had to be prepared for the balance £12,500—making in all £37,500 worth of debentures for our share in the Millbrook Branch. Our readers are aware that the negotiations were with Mr. Fowler, debentures issued to suit in Chancery, and the matter [illegible] with the £1,500 "sterling," in pot hunting over Mr. Cooper's head, and away the cash came and overwhelm him. Counsel was hitched and the Railroad pushed through with all speed. The figure of the road that broke up and opened, and in May, 1859, the first locomotive passed over the Millbrook Branch into Peterborough. Sanguine were all parties as yet the Road as speedily as possible into use that our City Fathers deputed Mr. Cooper to proceed to New York to negotiate for the rails, and the iron was bought and paid for by the Town of Peterborough, which was payment in advance. In June, 1858, [illegible] the first [illegible] in July [illegible] Mr. Fowler, not [illegible] with the manner [illegible] had managed to make a [illegible] profit [illegible] £3,700, by his own admission, and became it was not forthcoming to stops running over the Road, at a time when business was arranged to go by the Fowler. In this dilemma we had to appeal to Chancery for an injunction to compel John Fowler to [illegible] over the Road in conformity to the lease. It was during the examination of witnesses before the Court that some very strange revelations came out. Setting aside the depositions of John Fowler, and Ellis his engineer, who of course stood nobly before the people otherwise than as advocating and working for themselves, we have the evidence of Mr. Ferguson stating that he was agent, cashier, and paymaster for the defendant, John Fowler—that he knew the amount named above was due by the Municipality of the town of Peterborough, by the terms of the contract; that over and above this amount there was due to the defendant about £5,000 for making three-fourths of a mile of Road and for erecting an Engine and Freight-house, and this in face of the most positive assertions previously uttered, and the imputation of a oath pledged, that nothing beyond the £20,000 would ever be asked from the rate-payers. And his affidavit would further imply that no inconvenience was experienced by the Town owing to the stoppage of the cars.—He said positively that no irregularity in the delivery of the mails had taken place by the stoppage of the cars by the defendant. The changed position of the gentlemen before the rate-payers soliciting their concurrence in subscribing to build the Road, and before Chancery, opposing the same people, in striking, and affords another proof of the corrupting influence of Railroad morals on men wanting in sterling principle. Ever since this memorable affidavit became known Mr. Ferguson and John Fowler have been considered as one. Our attempts to obtain the stipulated and guaranteed six per cent have been abortive. One time we have been cajoled and promised, at another flatly refused, and told to help ourselves. When we have shown a determination to enforce our claim Fowler and Ferguson have subborned men of standing to make propositions of settlement that were never intended to be carried out, and it has sometimes been a wonder that men laying claim to respectability among us would allow themselves to be made cat's-paws to carry along the schemes of these heartless robbers. At this moment we have heard incidentally that an arbitration is going on, in reference to the extra work done by John Fowler, and it is very possible we shall have to pay our share of the extra £300 claimed. We have, up to last November, £2,500 due us by John Fowler, as our share of the rent he promised to pay us. Next May we shall have £900 more due. It is known that we have commenced an action in Chancery against the Lessee. Fearing something may come out of it a desire has been manifested by Cooper of Cobourg the joint Lessee with John Fowler of the Cobourg Road, Darcy Boulton, the Knight-errant of the concern, and the redoubtable Frederick Ferguson the cashier, paymaster and general manager of the Branch, to come to some terms. They send word to a gentleman in Town and he goes round quietly intimating the desire of these trio to settle the differences by offers of compromise. At length the parties meet the proposers and the Railway Committee, and the result of their deliberations is that the friends of the Lessee submit that the Town should not demand rent in arrears. They offer to pay the one shilling in the pound for 1860, and in future to assume the payment of the shilling demanded by the Government if we will grant them to obtain an Act, changing the responsibility of paying this amount from the Municipality of Peterboro' to the tottering concern of John Fowler & Co., and further that we accept these terms in full for our claim both past and to come against the Lessee of the Road. The offer appears to have been made without the authority of John Fowler, and if such a compromise should be accepted by the Town, he might as he probably would turn round and say I gave no one power to act in this matter for me, and may as he has done before that we should not get a cent from him. Mr. Fowler has frequently added insult to injury before, and he will surely do it again if he can escape being compelled to pay up. We are decidedly of opinion that if we ever get any thing from him it will be because he cannot help it. We trust our town authorities will turn a deaf ear to such absurd offers, bearing as they do insincerity and insult upon them; push on the Chancery suit, and not relax the screws till the money is paid. Depend upon it, gentlemen, the moment you relax you lose your hold. If we cannot recover by law let us know it as soon as possible; if we can then the sooner the better.

TORONTO INSTITUTION for the Education of the Deaf, Dumb, and of the Blind.

The deputation from the above Institution, consisting of Rev. Dr. Morris, Superintendent, and Mr. McGann, Head Master, with two Deaf Mutes, appeared before a highly influential audience assembled in the Union School House, on Monday evening. Sheriff Hall occupied the Chair. Dr Morris in a brief address presented the claims of the Institution to public and Governmental support. It was a fact worthy of attention that these excellent institutions for the education of the deaf, dumb and blind, in every Christian country on the face of the globe, and in many lands not so designated, but up in a very recent period we find no such institutions in Canada, and the one that now exists in the Province, as far as communication is concerned, is hardly worthy of the name. From Statistics obtained it appears that there are over 1,200 persons in the country who are living in a state of complete ignorance, even the former and [illegible] deaf mutes! merely because there exists no place wherein they may be taught to read. The object of these meetings was to enlist public sympathy, and gain the cooperation of the people in their efforts to obtain aid of the heads of the Legislature, in order that the Institution might be made more efficient.

Mr. McGann, headmaster, then proceeded to examine the mutes and explain the mode of teaching. The pupils showed remarkable evidences of rapidity of learning. One girl, 16 years of age, who had been under his care only 6 months, wrote a full hand, and showed a familiarity with [illegible] lessons quite wonderful. On the platform were two of the deaf mutes, a brother and sister, the children of the [illegible] Institution, who, although deaf and dumb, were [illegible] and [illegible] in their studies. Their [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

In reply to numerous enquiries, the Globe thinks it well to state, that Mr. George Brown is still confined to bed, and we fear will not be abroad for some days yet. The statements of some of our contemporaries as to his malady are entirely erroneous.—He has been suffering from an affection of the pleura, which has gradually yielded to the treatment of his medical advisers. We fully anticipate that Mr. Brown will be able to take his place in Parliament after the Easter recess in renewed health and vigor.

The bombardment of Gaeta's Francis commenced on the 20th. Gen. Fergola assisted Cialdini that the works commenced against the citadel were a violation of the convention between him and Garibaldi, and that he would bombard the city. PROSPECT OF A PEACEFUL SEPARATION.

Washington, March 19, 1861.

The close observer of men and matters in the federal capital will vainly strive to rid himself of the impression that a growing diffidence of a restoration of the Union to its former integrity, and of the permanency of the Alliance of the Slaveholding parts still attached to it, prevails among the leading republican minds now gathered here.

The idea of a disintegration into two confederacies, upon a basis of a strict division of the two antagonistic labor systems of the country, is becoming more and more familiar to them, and many of the wisest consider its readmission only a question of time. I can state to you, and I know whereof I affirm, that it has crept into the Cabinet, and has two, if not three, representatives, whose counsels weigh most with the President, in that body. I can say, furthermore, that the executive note bearing upon the Southern question will be largely influenced by a belief in the probable contingency of a separation, and a desire to make it a peaceable one. While it is decreed due to the honor and dignity of the government, both at home and abroad, to vindicate its authority in the seceded States, and while blows will be struck if necessary, it will be to redeem the credit of the federal power, and not to permanently maintain its authority over an unwilling people. The ultimate decision in this matter does not, of course, rest with the administration; but that a peaceable parting is thought infinitely preferable by the most trusted of Mr. Lincoln's immediate advisers, to the assertion and maintenance of federal laws in the South, is certain.

MAJOR ANDERSON MUST SURRENDER.

The Charleston correspondent of the Tribune says:—

"I have already expressed a doubt whether the revolutionary leaders would allow Major Anderson to withdraw and evacuate Fort Sumter. While the great mass of the people here would be willing to see that done, the military leaders, with whom the question rests, have other notions. They say that since Major Anderson's withdrawal is in pursuance of a military necessity, solely, it must be conducted according to military usage. The fact is, Major Anderson can do nothing but remain in Fort Sumter, except at the will of those by whom, for the last two months, he has been besieged. It is impossible for him to evacuate, except they allow him to do so. The question arises, on what basis shall he have that privilege—for, after all, it is but a privilege—a privilege accorded to the Federal Government by the rebels—to evacuate Fort Sumter. Shall the garrison be permitted to embark on board of a Government ship which will be permitted to approach near enough? Or shall Major Anderson be required to formally surrender the fort himself, and garrison as prisoners of war? I heard a leader say to day, 'Now, see how the Government is in a place where it must recognize us and confirm our power.' And so it would seem. At least such appears to be the views of those who, as I have noticed, are the extreme men of the rebellion. Everybody else, I think, would be willing to allow Major Anderson to manage the business according to his own notions; which fact is an indication more or less significant of the modifying effect which the proposed action of the Government has had on the popular mind."

FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, March 22.—The Senate confirmed J. W. Nye, Governor of Nevada; Rufus King, Minister to Rome; Bradford R. Wood, Minister to Denmark; Anson Burlingame, Minister to Austria; Elisha O. Crosby, Minister to Guatemala; James O. Putnam, Consul to Havre; Freeman H. Morse, Consul to London.

Marsh B. Dunnell, of Me., was nominated for Consul at Vera Cruz, and Joshua R. Giddings, of Ohio, for Consul General to British North America.

Hon. Thomas Corwin, having withdrawn his declination, was confirmed Minister to Mexico.

The President has submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent, the proposition of the British Government to refer the San Juan question to the arbitration of Sweden, the Netherlands, or Switzerland—the United States to select which. The committee on foreign Relations has made a favorable report upon the subject, and recommend the choice of Switzerland. The matter is understood to have been debated in Executive Session to-day, without conclusion. Senator Nesmith, of Oregon, opposes the proposition, not being willing to agree to any plan involving the possibility of the surrender of the Island.

Rumors of the non-evacuation of Fort Sumter are supposed to have been put forward for political effect. It is positively certain that it will be abandoned speedily, and it is equally certain that Fort Pickens will not be reinforced. All signs are favorable to a peaceful solution.

New York, March 25.—The Herald's Washington correspondence says,—It is believed the programme of the administration in regard to the evacuation of Fort Sumter has been altered since the departure of Col. Lamon. It is now reported that the evacuation is to be conditional. Lamon is to examine the stock of provisions, and if the supply is insufficient to maintain the troops now there, he will deliver the President's order to Major Anderson to evacuate the fort.

It is said that the Government has received advices that Texas has sent commissioners to New Mexico, Arizona, Sonora and Chihuahua, to induce the people thereof to join the Southern Confederacy, and the advices, it is said, is regarded favorably.

Despatches from Fort Pickens state that the garrison is short of provisions, and can hold out but a short time.

None but official communication is permitted at Pensacola, and the squadron can neither reinforce the fort or furnish the supplies.

Appearances indicate that the Government before long, will be compelled to abandon Fort Pickens to the secessionists.

The Times' correspondence says,—I have just received a despatch from a gentleman in Charleston, who reached Fort Sumter this morning. He states that he found Major Anderson taking an inventory of everything preparatory to leaving the fort. [illegible] stated to me that he [illegible]

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY GEORGE GEDDES, OF ONONDAGA, U. S.

PART II.

While, therefore, I would recommend [illegible] I would not have [illegible] that the open drain should be laid out for that purpose until the land is brought to that state of cultivation in which the largest [illegible] in proportion to the [illegible] expended. I am decidedly of opinion that there is no Bank or Subsoil Plough for the former to invest in on draining land, until the third or fourth is long liable to be affected by a contemporary crop with the stock of the farm. [illegible] 'Deep Ploughing' should be first undertaken which will yield the largest profit in proportion to the cost, and on a majority of our farms those which force themselves to our notice as most needful are draining and removing stones. Although I have already given my opinion that in subjecting a farm to thorough underdrain to obtain only requiring as little draining as possible, yet there are very few farms that do not require some draining, and on a great many it constitutes one of the most important improvements; in fact, on land where it is required, all other improvements are useless without it. The removal of stones where they exist is no less necessary, in order that it may be thoroughly cultivated. I will first proceed to discuss this subject. It will, I think, be admitted that any suggestions which will lessen the labor of this most important operation are deserving the attention of every farmer, for there is nothing [illegible] with severe and prolonged exertion as the first of men and beast on the removal of heavy stones, even one to five tons in weight. For the smaller ones, such as may be lifted by a number of fellows, the most obvious plan, and the only economical one yet tried, is to lift them on a stout hand waggon and by direct application remove them to the desired place. Although there have been several machines invented for this purpose, I am not aware that any of them have proved of practical value. A few years ago an invention was patented in the United States for picking up and removing small stones, which consisted of a revolving cylinder resting on wheels like a common cart; this cylinder was armed with long spikes or prongs, which passing under the stones which lay loosely on the surface lifted them with its revolving motion and deposited them in a box on the top of the machine. The intention was to pass along the ridges until a sufficient load had been collected in the box, and then drive to the place where it was wished to deposit them, then lift it like a common cart, and repeat the operation. This was all very well in theory, but in practice the inventor found out, what he might have known beforehand, that the weight of the machine, together with the power required to operate it, was [illegible] enough for the team to draw, without any load, and therefore the invention was of no practical value. A number of different contrivances have been tried for the same purpose, but it is useless to describe them. It is admitted that the cheapest and most expeditious mode of getting rid of such stones as can be handled is to handle them without gloves; but when we have to deal with stones from 2 to 5 or 6 tons, we must adopt some other plan, for all the strength of man and animals that can usually be mustered on one farm is inadequate to move them. Many farmers dig large holes and bury them. This is a very objectionable practice, as it involves immense labour to dig the hole large enough to insure the stone being sufficiently deep to be beyond the reach of the plow; and besides, it leaves the uncomfortable reflection that the stones are still in the ground, and it is generally believed from experience that the action of the frost on the soil will gradually bring them to the surface again. The better way, no doubt, is to keep them above ground, where they will be useful at no distant day. Burning has been tried with good effect. In some cases the plan pursued is to collect old rails, roots, or any thing that will make a fire; remove the earth from about the stone as much as convenient to allow it to get thoroughly hot; repeat the fire as it burns down, until the stone ceases to be heated through; then throw a pail or two of water on it, when it is said it will break in several pieces. For my own part I have not tried this process, as I have found blasting so [illegible] and economical for removing them. For this purpose I use a drill 1¼ inch; what is called the long or shore drill is the speediest in operation for hard rock, but the short drill is preferable for [illegible] The manner in which the drill is to be used is to strike it smartly with a hammer, turning it a little each time you strike it. The hammer should weigh from 3 to 4 lbs. and is to be struck by both hands, and by striking constantly and steadily in the same place, at the same time turning it round in the hole, it bores into the stone. The short drill is held in one hand and turned round while it is struck by a hammer in the other. A hole is then bored in the stone from eight to twelve inches deep, according to size, twelve inches being sufficient for a stone of five tons weight. Be careful to have the hole pointing towards the centre of the stone. The hole is then filled about half full of the best blasting powder, and a piece of fuse, long enough to reach to the bottom of the powder and projecting 6 inches above the top, should be inserted. The hole should then be filled with clay, sand, or what I have found better than either, plaster that has been wet and dried again; it should be rammed quite hard, using a wooden rammer at first, until the powder is covered, the [illegible] upon till you perceive by the ring of the rammer that the hole is [illegible] then on hand to [illegible] a [illegible] about eight inches [illegible] light the fuse and get out of the way. The stone will generally burst in 5 or 6 pieces, when it may be easily removed on a stone boat. Stones of the size mentioned above [illegible] by [illegible] hard [illegible] including [illegible] and [illegible] of 10 cents.

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and is far superior to any other for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that an farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 15 to 25 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by cast-steel knives, which can be fitted into the machine, that they can easily be taken out and re-sharpened as a cutting need.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

Poetry.

I LOVE THE OLD.

I love the old, to lean beside
The antique easy chair,
And pass my fingers softly o'er
A wreath of silvered hair;
To press my glowing lip upon
The furrowed brow, and gaze
Within the sunken eye, where dwells
The "light of other days."

To fold the pale cold feeble hand,
That on my youthful head,
Hag lain as tenderly, the while
The evening prayer was said;
To smile down close to the heart,
And marvel how it held
Such tones of boundless love,
The chronicles of Eld.

Oh! people then most go much of joy,
So much of life and love,
So many hopes—ere has but one,
The hope of bliss above.
Turn then awhile from these away
To cheer the old and blest
The wasted heart-strings with a stream
Of gushing tenderness.

Yes, love the aged bow before
The venerable form,
So soon to fade beyond the sky
A shelter from the storm.
Ay, love them, let thy silent heart,
With reverence paused,
As pilgrims very near to Heaven
Regard and love the old.

The Roman Carnival.

Carnival—literally meaning "flesh farewell" is a festival lasting several days preceding Lent, which is generally observed in Catholic countries. Even here, in New York, it exists among the upper class under the name of the party season. Like most generally observed religious festivals of long standing, it is of primeval heathen origin, originating in the rejoicings of the ancients for the revival of Adonis, the reviving spring of rain (Dunlap, S. F., Spirit History of Man) or in similar periods of general license. The Roman Saturnalia, the Greek Dionysia and other seasons of rejoicings were perfect carnivals, during which every one did pretty much as he pleased, so far as using his tongue and indulging in practical jokes went.

We believe that the following article from Meister Karl's Sketch-book, by C. G. Leland, embodies most of the striking points of this singular festival. It may be remarked, by the way, that the women in holiday garb, seated at the crapperied windows, form an interesting and striking feature of the Carnival:

This feast is term'd the Carnival; which, being interpreted, implies—"Farewell to flesh;" When there is fiddling, fidging, drinking, masking.—BYRON.

"How shall I ever describe thee, thou glorious Carnival! How can I ever hope to convey even the shadow of an idea of thy exquisite folly, thy delicious madness? As well might the opium eater hope to paint his fairy-land visions, or a German Seher to describe the brilliant phantasms of the seventh sphere.

"There is one month in the year, says the sober-minded Turks, 'during which Christians are insane.' And, truly, he who does not enter into the spirit of the Carnival, may well deem himself in a world of lunatics. All the eccentricity, all the grotesqueness, all the wit, folly, singularity and oddity which can be devised by a people who are eccentric and romantic in their soberest moments, are then brought into play.

"There is a broad and beautiful street in Rome called the Corso, any part of which presents views which might serve for scenes in the theatres. From every window in this street, curtains of crimson and gold, or of blue and silver, are hung; and the balconies which project from every house are similarly adorned. These are occupied almost exclusively by beautiful women, in every variety of costume which fancy can suggest, caprice invent or imagination devise. Jews of Ate, from ope window, makes war on you with sugar-plums; Psyches pelts you with roses, while a chance Cornelius hail kills you with kisses and comfits. Anon, a beautiful Odalisque tosses you a flower, while, from an opposite balcony, a Louis Quatorze beauty discharges on you an egg full of your devoted gout. With heart-felt agony you watch it as it breaks, and lo! it is filled with cologne water! With a smile on your lips and regret in your heart, you dash on only to encounter new showers of comfits and new storms of bouquets.

"Such is the main business of the Carnival—to ride through the Corso in a carriage, or to stand in a balcony, exchanging volleys of sweets and sugar-plums, with the passers-by, and to crowd on night into a masked ball or the opera. But the thousand-and-one little incidents which serve to enhance and surround, while you hardly perceive them—the flirtations of a minute—the compromises of a second—all these, unintelligible by the uninitiated, combine to form altogether a tout ensemble of which words can give no idea.

"The infinite generosity displayed during the Carnival are of three sorts, namely the 'confetti,' 'the Comfortatory,' 'The Confortatore.' Beneath the confetti, I claim the plaster sugar-plum. These little comfits of flour and plaster of Paris are made in all sizes, from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg, and are sold by the bushel. They are, object, such as a man of the world may use without shame. When the time comes for action, we the three-quarter gets into the eyes, the attention is seldom paralyzed than otherwise. The Royal Confortatore, which, of the four, pays the greatest compliment to the person addressed, consists of a large egg of clay, filled with perfume, and covered with tissue paper. These resemble in every respect the ordinary confetti, and are thrown about in the same manner. They are chiefly used by those of the Two Tuns and Pistol-Punch boys in respect to the Fourth-of-July edition, against foreigners.

"The complimentary, for the greater part, consists of small bouquets, which are sold in great numbers at the confectioners' shops, and are chiefly used by the lower orders. To those you are on speaking terms with, you present a bouquet of natural flowers

THE DEBATE ON THE ADDRESS.

The debate on the Address has been carried on with a spirit and ability which reflect credit on the House and the country. The speeches have been, with few exceptions, of a high order of merit, and the discussion has been conducted throughout in a manner worthy of the occasion. The Ministry have had the benefit of the ablest defence which their friends could make, and the Opposition have had the fullest opportunity of criticising the measures of the Government, and of bringing forward their own views of the policy which the country should pursue. The result of the debate has been to show that the Ministry possess the confidence of a large majority of the House, and that they have the support of the country. The Opposition have failed to make out a case sufficiently strong to justify a vote of want of confidence, and the Ministry have therefore every reason to be satisfied with the issue of the debate.

The speech from the Throne, which was delivered by His Excellency the Governor General on the 19th ult., was a clear and able statement of the policy which the Government intended to pursue during the present Session. It was a plain, straightforward exposition of the views of the Ministry on the various questions which they would be called upon to consider, and of the measures which they proposed to submit to Parliament. It was received with general satisfaction by the House and the country, and the debate which followed has served to show that the Ministry have the confidence of the majority of the representatives of the people. The Address in reply to the Speech was moved by Mr. Scatcherd, the member for the North Riding of Wentworth, and seconded by Mr. Wells, the member for the North Riding of Simcoe. Both these gentlemen are new members of the House, and they both acquitted themselves in a manner which reflected credit upon their constituents and upon the House. Mr. Scatcherd's speech was a clear and able statement of the views of the Ministry on the various questions which they would be called upon to consider during the Session, and was received with much favor by the House. Mr. Wells's speech was characterized by great ability, and was listened to with the most marked attention. It was a clear and forcible exposition of the views of the Opposition, and was replied to by the Hon. Mr. Sicotte in a speech which was also characterized by great ability, and which was listened to with the most marked attention. The debate was then carried on by Messrs. Dunkin, Cameron, Gwynne, Cartier, Holton, Foley, Dorion, Macdonald, Rose, Sherwood, Mowat, Brown, Cauchon, Ross, Wilson, Cayley, Sicotte, Dickson, Ferguson, Bell, Wallbridge, Gamble, Scatcherd, Wells

LATEST from EUROPE.

ITALY.

Montreal, Wednesday, March 13.

The citadel has been delivered to the army and fleet. The troops will leave for Naples by Wednesday early in April. There was a disagreeable affair on [illegible] between the Garibaldians and Englishmen. A [illegible] 700 Papal Zouaves. A French Colonel was killed, and 40 men wounded. How the affair ended has not transpired. Ratazzo has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted. The municipal election will take place on the 24th.

NAPLES, March 12.—The citadel of Messina capitulated yesterday evening.—The conditions of the capitulation are not yet known. Civitella del Tronto will not be able to hold out much longer. Liberto Romano has tendered his resignation at Director of the affairs of the Interior.—Prince Carignan has given orders that the Neapolitan officers who are staying in the Roman States shall be allowed to return to Naples. The Italian army is to be divided into six corps d'armee; the 4th corps under command of General Cialdini, will proceed to Bologna.

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies, Zanolini, President by seniority, made a speech in which he expressed the hope that Rome was about to be made the capital of Italy, and that the deliverance of Venice was approaching. He also eulogized Garibaldi. Ratazzi, the elected President of the Chamber, on his speech on taking the chair, applauded the speeches of Prince Napoleon and St. Von Vitzthe, praised Garibaldi, and expressed confidence in the solution of the questions of Rome and Venice. Count Cavour, in presenting a project of law proclaiming the Kingdom of Italy, said:—

"Italy is completing the work of her Constitution, and in making herself one country by her laws and institutions, as she is already one by language. On the opening of Parliament, you saluted Victor Emanuel under the new title which Italy, from Turin to Palermo, has conferred him. You will confirm it, as the Senate has done by our universal suffrages."

A telegram from Rome says the Duke de Gramont had been charged to announce to the Pope that the Emperor Napoleon disavowed the speech of Prince Napoleon in the French Senate.

There were reports at Rome that the Garibaldians would be in that city on the 19th of March.

The Queen of Spain is said to have offered the Pope her Royal Palace at Madrid, but the Pope announced his intention of remaining at Rome.

An extensive system of opposition against the new Government of Italy had come to light in the shape of a long series of instructions to Confalonieri, in which almost every form of opposition to Victor Emmanuel's rule is insisted upon as a religious duty.

HAUSSONVILLE had sent in Belgique to the Pontifical Charge d'Affaires in Paris, replying to M. de la Guerronière's late pamphlet. He boldly charges the Emperor with being the cause of all the troubles which beset the Government of the Holy See.

ARRIVAL OF THE "AFRICA."

New York, March 31.

Government despatches from the British Consul at Warsaw confirmed the published accounts.

The reduction of discount by the Bank of France produced a good effect in the money markets of Paris and London.

Rentes advanced to 68f 30c.

The Corps Legislatif continued to debate on the address. The Independent members strongly advocated the Rhenish amendments already published, but the first two paragraphs have passed without amendments.

Details of the surrender of the citadel of Messina show that it was unconditional, after four days firing. Over 5,000 men were made prisoners, and 300 cannon were taken. Civitella del Tronto is not able to resist much longer.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies unanimously approves of the annexation of the rest of the kingdom of Italy.

Warsaw continued apparently tranquil, but late advices say the disturbance is increasing.

NAPOLEON'S TROUBLES.

Between the constitutional disfavour of reducing the dominion of the Church and its bitter hatred of Victor Emmanuel, and the utter inability of the Catholic clergy, his imperial majesty Napoleon III. is in pretty serious trouble. The Milan journals are [illegible] to have created on the subject of bribing officers of Government, members of the Legislature, and members of the Imperial family on a scale, and to an extent such as our great Napoleon of the Lobby at Albany never conceived of. According to one writer Milan has spent in this way more than half a million dollars in five years past. The late visit of the Emperor, Jerome Napoleon, the [illegible] to [illegible] 2000,000; his cousin the Princess Mathilde, $100,000; M. Boreale, Vice-President of the Corps Legislatif, $25,000; while M. Morny, the Emperor's illegitimate brother, and President of the body, is believed to have exceeded even the Prince Jerome in his receipts from the same trust sources of corruption. We presume the world has never witnessed a more astounding display of political and social corruption.

At the same time, the Ultramontane clergy have always cherished for the Head of Christendom now assumed a form of outspoken bitterness which has existed all France. It is well known that Napoleon has been in the habit of occasionally putting forth a defence of his policy in the [illegible] of a pamphlet [illegible] many copies, sometimes signed by Mr. Layerenais, a clever journalist of Paris and a zealous adherent of the Emperor.—One of these pamphlets lately issued at Rome, Italy, and Vienna has furnished the occasion for a general letter from the Bishop of Montauban to his clergy, in which he not only denounces the conduct of the French Government toward the See of Rome, but under the name of attacking Pitolo, insults Napoleon himself with unexpressed violence of language. This pastoral letter has been answered by the Government with a letter from Persigny, the Minister of the Interior, to the Prefect of the Department in which it was first published. The Minister denounces the Bishop as a "prelate who has not feared to make the authority of his character serve the purpose of passions unconnected with religion;" and speaks of the pastoral as a "document in which are disclosed with so much audacity the secret views of the party which, under the veil of religion, has no other object than to attack the elect of the French people." The Monniteur also gives notice that the pastoral, "which contains allusions insulting to the Emperor's Government, and which is of a nature to disturb the public mind, has been submitted to the high jurisdiction of the Council of State, charged to decide on all cases of abuse."

The Council will now determine whether the Bishop shall be handed over to the civil arm for trial and punishment as a criminal; or whether he shall be declared innocent and discharged at once. In either event, the question seems pregnant with consequences of great scope and importance.—At any rate it is not probable the extraordinary luck which has attended Napoleon III. in his political and military struggles, will continue to favor him in his more difficult and dangerous conflict with the Church.—New York Tribune.

DEATH IN AN OIL WELL.

We regret to learn that a melancholy and fatal accident occurred on Tuesday, at the oil springs at Enniskillen. It appears that a [illegible] named Cook, belonging to Erie, Pennsylvania, had purchased a claim on lot 17, 2nd Concession, Enniskillen.—He had already dug 50 feet down, and had erected a platform on which to stand while he drilled through the rock. About four o'clock on the morning of Tuesday, while he and a laborer were drilling, a noise was heard in the well. Cook incautiously lowered a lantern, to see if it was water or oil that was causing the noise. No sooner had the lantern descended, than it encountered a stream of gas which was rushing up through the hole that had been drilled, and a loud explosion took place. Poor Cook and his companion were blown into the air together with the platform, and on descending Cook fell down the well, a depth of 50 feet and dislocated his neck. When taken out he was quite dead, and also much bruised. It is believed that had he not been killed by the fall, he would have been suffocated by the gas. Her companion, whose name we did not learn, was very seriously injured, and was taken to a place of shelter in a state of insensibility. The great excitement a great excitement in the oil regions, where it is said Cook was much respected. The accident took place in Sanborne's well, Black Creek. The remains of the unhappy man have been temporarily buried, awaiting the arrival of his friends.—London Free Press.

HOMESTEADS AND FREE LANDS.

The Legislature of Michigan has just amended the State Homestead Law of 1859. Up actual settlers claim instead of forty acres of the swamp lands within the State are granted, which, together with appropriations for a system of roads and ditches, it is anticipated will [illegible] a speedy settlement of those wretched portions of the forest. The Act provides that the commissioner of the State land office shall issue a certificate of purchase to [illegible] or occupant of the swamp lands [illegible] to the State in the proper [illegible] for the eighty acres of such land, [illegible] it shall appear to the commissioner that the settler or occupant has actually resided upon such eighty acres of land for a period of five consecutive years, and that he has [illegible] drained the same in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Congress, by which the lands were granted to the State. [illegible] to these lands in the aforesaid [illegible] his claims by taking up [illegible] of land not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, by paying a discriminating nominal sum for the surplus of the eighty acres allowed as a free grant. [illegible] should appear that Canada has been [illegible] competitor in the [illegible] system, and if our Province is to join the race, it can only be by setting up [illegible] greater than those now offered by the State of Michigan. Let it ever be borne in mind that it is of the utmost importance to induce settlement on our unoccupied lands. Without population as much as anything else, until our forests are subdued and peopled, they have only a prospective value. The want of an industrious rural population is much recognized by our Western neighbors as by ourselves, and hence their [illegible] efforts at colonization.—Kingston Daily News.

REMARKABLE FACT.—The day after Christmas large lady in this city became mother of a fine and healthy girl-child.—There is nothing startling in the fact, nor calculated to excite comment. An annual mother and child did we say? progressed in health and strength. But two weeks afterwards the same lady was again the mother of a child, a fine boy, also [illegible] looking, as the doubly-dated mother. This circumstance although of extreme rarity being probably [illegible] once in the United States, is one which is [illegible] as having occurred before, [illegible] by substantial [illegible] clearly ascertained [illegible] and genuine.—San Francisco Herald.

BANK OF UPPER CANADA.—We learn that R. Cassels, Esq., at present Manager of the Bank of British North America, in this city, has been appointed to the Head Office of the Bank of Upper Canada, Toronto, vice Thomas G. Ridout, Esq., late Cashier, and the Hon. W. Cayley, President, in room of—Proudfoot, Esq., formerly President of that institution. We further understand that the former gentleman is to have the sole management and control of the discount department, and think that in this respect, [illegible] will be hugely [illegible] place which it ought always to have held amongst the moneyed institutions of the Province.—Quebec Advertiser.

HOW TO BUILD A CHURCH.

A correspondent of the Montreal Times writing from St. Thomas, below Quebec, on the 27th February, says:—

"The operation of borrowing money may be very agreeable, but equally unpleasant must be the re-paying, especially to those who never contemplate the alternative process. Such feelings against the bravery of the habitants of St. Michael de Bellechasse who, at a luckless time, were tempted to avail themselves of the Municipal Loan Fund. They had a decent enough church which served all their purposes; but the Cure, like all of his class, was ambitious to surpass other parishes in churches, and, in a credulous mood, the habitants were taught to believe they might borrow debentures, spend [illegible] of [illegible] on their church, and [illegible] fifteen years of enforced repayment. The impression prevailing at one time that debentures might be borrowed without the risk of [illegible] bearing parish to submit the following scheme to his parishioners. He said:—Do us raise $21,000; and one refurbish the church for £3,000, and the balance, £8,000, I will place at interest in the Banque Nationale, at 4 per cent interest, which will give us £400 per annum, enough to pay for our schools.' The parishioners consulted less interested [illegible] and them from the [illegible] scheme of the Cure."

A GALLANT TAR.

Among those who appeared most conspicuous at the fire on Saturday night, were the sailors from H. B. M. ship Alert, now lying in the harbor. While the banks were engaged in tearing down one of the buildings adjoining Carsaute's stone ware-house, a sailor had occasion to go up on the roof, on the side towards which the building was falling. With the nimbleness of a cat, and a presence of mind rarely excelled, he sprung up the steep slate roof, and crouched astride of the ridge, as it fell with a tremendous crash, leaving him unharmed on the top of the [illegible], which [illegible] probably [illegible] been crushed to death had he remained in his former place. Finding the building down, he sung out, "You're in a darned hurry to tear the house down," while his comrades cheered him lustily for his adventure.—Honolulu Advertiser.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY GEORGE ROOME, OF OSHAWA, C. W.

PART XII.

Having already given my views regarding the utility of draining, we may at once proceed to discuss the different modes practised. The first point to be considered before commencing the work of draining, is the proper location of the drains. If the piece of ground to be drained is a long narrow strip, commonly called a swale, then the drain will require to be made in the middle, running lengthways up the centre; but if it is one of those spongy, springy spots frequently found on hill sides, where the water comes out at the highest point and works through the ground below, some consideration will be necessary. As a general rule, the water should always be cut tested by the straightest way down hill. It was formerly thought that the best plan was to cut off the supply by carrying a drain around and above the highest point at which the water rose to the surface, in order to divert the water into the drain and prevent it from overflowing the ground below, but experience proves that the more efficient plan is to commence at the lowest point and dig straight up hill as far as the nature of the soil requires it. Quite a number of machines have been invented for digging drains, but have only been successful to a limited extent, and in particular localities, for the very obvious reason that the stones and other obstructions in the soil below the surface cannot be ascertained until the machine comes in contact with them. It is then not only liable to be broken, but it is necessary to stop while the obstruction is being removed, which occasions loss of time. It is then only on soils entirely free from stones that draining by machinery can be accomplished with advantage, and even on such lands they have as yet been little used, being cumbersome and liable to get out of order; however, the work may be greatly expedited by running a common plough three or four times along the drain, and if a sub-soil plough can be obtained, by passing it several times in the same place the soil may be loosened to the depth of 20 inches, which will greatly lessen the labor. No drain should be less than three feet deep, and in some cases four feet will be required. The sooner they are filled in after digging the better, as the action of the atmosphere on the soil forming the sides will if long exposed to it cause it to crumble down and fill up the drain after it has been covered in. If the material used to form the water course be tile this will not be the result, but much additional labor is sometimes caused by heavy thunder showers washing in the sides, so that the safest plan is to fill in as soon as possible after being opened. The most common material for filling up with in this country is stones; the water-courses at the bottom is formed in as even a way as possible by placing flat stones on edge and leaning against each other, then packing small stones between them and the sides of the drain. Another way is to lay small round stones along each side, leaving a space in the middle three or four inches wide, then covering with flat stones; and sometimes the stones are thrown in without any adjustment at all. The latter plan saves a great deal of labor, and may answer very well where there is considerable fall and the quantity of water is not great. In either case there should be about two feet of stones altogether. The stones should not touch deeper the surface than one foot, to give plenty of room for the plow. The cost of drains of this description and three feet deep will be about 30 cents per rod, and if the subsoil be clay or free from sand they will last 50 or 60 years. Another material used for the purpose is boards.—If the bottom is soft it will require a floor, as it is called, that is, a board laid in the bottom. But if the subsoil be hard, this will not be necessary. The lumber should be sound, and full inch thick. The drain need not be more than 6 inches wide at bottom; two planks 8 inches wide should be set on edge about 3 inches apart, and another laid on for a cover. A few nails should be driven in to hold them in their places until the earth is filled in. If no floor is used this will require one foot of lumber for every foot in length, or 10 cents per rod, counting the lumber at 60 cents per 100. The laying of labour in putting in the boards over the stones, will be considerable, but not quite sufficient to make up the cost of the lumber, so that a board drain will cost rather more than a stone drain. It will probably last longer as the wood will be protected from the external air, and the sides and roof being close it will not choke up so readily. Brush is sometimes used where wood or stones are scarce. It is said that a brush drain is a hard clay soil will last 30 or 40 years, but in Britain and the United States where draining is practised on a large scale THIS is almost exclusively used. It is universally admitted to be the best kind of drain yet tried, but its cost is so great as to prevent it from being introduced where land is as cheap as in most parts of Canada. I find by the circulars of the manufacturers that the price of the ordinary sized tile at the works is $15 per 1000 feet, or 25 cents per rod. The [illegible] 50 cents per rod, in what is called the [illegible] 22 feet for the average this would require 120 rods of drain per acre, at a cost of $30. As drains also need will need to be more valuable before it will pay well to drain at that rate.

AND UPWARDS SAVED to the Farmers, Aldens Mowry's

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 10 to 25 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by cast-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired at a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without altering or adjusting the Machine.

PRICE $60.

All orders directed to "M. Mowry, Ashburnham, Peterborough," will be promptly attended to.

SPRING.

BY JAMES MCCARROL.

The spirits of air are beginning to rove
Among pathways that sparkle with sunshine and showers;
And to touch the chill depths of the hawthorn grove,
Till they melt into mosts and burst into flowers.

And the skies are becoming as blue as a lake,
While the murmuring breezes, on tremulous plume,
Sing as low as a bee, in the eglantine break
Where the primrose peeps out, like a star, through the gloom.

And the meadows are dancing through light and through shade;
With a bright, balmy knot tossed, in gold, here and there;
While the heather at eve that winds up through the glade,
With her mouth full of nectalips perfumes the whole air.

And the silvery voice of the crystaline brooks,
Echoes down through the dell with a magical tone,
Or is lost on the lea or in lone shaded nooks,
Among songs, sighs or whispers as sweet as its own.

Toronto, April, 1861.

How I first Met my Wife.

There was a mystery hanging about a certain way that Morgan had, and in which he was always joined honestly by his wife—my own cousin May Stevens, that had been a way that troubled my curiosity much until one eventful evening that I was satisfied by hearing the reason why.

It was simply this: that every time a word was spoken that led to the period when Charley Morgan first met my cousin May, they would both laugh very heartily, but would always refuse to tell at what they laughed. This was certainly very provoking, and I had little hesitation in telling them so—not once but many times—at which they always ended by kissing each other and looking very affectionate.

I determined to have a solution of the matter, if for no other reason than it worried me. I am but a woman, and having gleaned to the possession of curiosity, I see no reason why sometimes it should not be indulged. With this resolution, I set forth one evening, when we three, Morgan, May and myself, were drawn up to the fire and early settled, for a talk. There was no time for mincing matters was my first idea, and with this thought I dashed boldly out with:

"Mr. Morgan,"—I usually call him Charley, but I was desirous of showing that I was really in earnest—"Mr Morgan, why do you always laugh and look at May when the subject of your first meeting with her is spoken of?"

This, I was sure, was a simple question: and yet instead of answering it in a simple way, they went back, both of them, on the old plan, and laughed as if the words I had just spoken were the very best joke in the world. I could do nothing, of course, but look grave and solemn, which in a few moments brought them both looking the same way, and then May spoke to me seriously and said:

"Cousin Jane, you take our laughing much more earnestly than I thought you would. It is only a memory between Charley and I that brings this laugh; to us it is a droll remembrance, but perhaps in telling it, there would be nothing to amuse any one."

The explanation brought back my good humor in an instant, and, with a smile, I said:

"Now, May, this is really unkind of you; for so long have you excited my curiosity, that even if the story were not worth telling you should tell it."

"Well, cousin Jane shall have that story May; I will tell it myself to her."

At this declaration I was a little surprised to see May flush up to a bright red, and then break out rather vehemently with:

"No, Charley, that is really too bad! You shall not do it, sir. If cousin Jane is to have the story, I will tell her myself," and then after a pause she said—"when we are alone."

"You shall do no such thing, Madame May," was Charley's laughing response; "you shall do no such thing. This time I shall have my own way, and cousin Jane shall not have her curiosity excited any more without being satisfied."

I saw there was to be a discussion on that point, but I knew in some way that Charley was to count off victor; so I, cleverly saying that I would be back in a few minutes, stepped out of the room and walked about the garden until I felt sure the point was settled, when I went back and found Charley and May looking as happy as birds, and laughing the old laugh so much. As I entered, Charley drew up the rocking chair, and after seeing me safely dispatched in its depths, said:

"Now, Cousin Jane, I shall tell you the story about how I first met my wife:

It is just five years ago this summer that I was granted exemption for a month from my desk, and went down with my old chum Horace Hyatt, to his father's in old Monmouth, the garden of that vulgarly abused state, New Jersey. I should never have forgotten that visit, even though I had not made that visit to substantiate that fact for ever on the other future of my life, I should remember it for the best two laughing, jolly, out-and-about weeks of the term, and the quiet way in which, within two days after my arrival, I went past the protection of a friend and made to find that it all happened to me of its just what I planned with. There were plenty of fish, and we fished; plenty of woodcock, and we shot. All this made by means of with a pointer. I say which but it is unnecessary, I do, not mean Horace's old setter, Carrie and Nettie, as having participated in all this sport. They rather interfered and obstructed, if anything they did by; they fished, and I am afraid to mention they were much better shots at quail. But they fished about enough I will not count their fish, but of the shooting I may relate. I am sorry I did not [illegible]

[illegible] Morgan [illegible] thing was executed as soon as thought of, and my head on the window which yielded, I stepped out my own room. By the moonlight which streamed in, I saw that the bed was occupied, and by the heavy breathing I knew that Horace was in a sound sleep. I would not, therefore awaken him, but save my story of [illegible] for the following day. With this resolution I slipped into bed and in three minutes was oblivious. What might I or more dreams of that night? But I shall [illegible]. I lay facing the windows as they are grouped up above the distant hills, and scattered the gray mists of morning. My bed-fellow was breathing heavily, but it was broad daylight and there was no more sleep in me, so I determined Horace should wake up and hear the story of my railroad breakdown. There are such surprises as are without terror, which deprive us of our speech until the brain has time to act and reason. Such surprises do not generate nervousness and faintness. They are expressed by open-mouthed and silent wonder. This was the case with myself and bed-fellow, as we sat upright and stared. Right by my side, with her face within two feet of my own, sat a young woman not more than seventeen, with dark hazel eyes and masses of brown curls, tucked under the neatest night-cap that ever was. She had gathered the bed-clothes, with a spasmodic jerk, up about her neck, and with the most rigid astonishment, looking as though doubting whether she was sleeping or waking, gazed steadily into my eyes. Memory serves a man but little in such cases, but if my memory serves me right, it was I who first spoke. I started out with:

"How came you here?"

The figure stared, still in speechless astonishment, but in a moment, as though recovering from her stupefaction, spoke

"Are you Charles Morgan?"

I answered in the affirmative.

"Well, then, Mr Morgan," said the figure, by this time calm, and with quite as much dignity as though in a drawing-room, "I am May Stevens, and I was put in this room after an unexpected arrival. Horace had gone over to a neighbor's a few miles off, before I got here, and was not to return till to-day. This is how I was put in this room."

So here I was, sitting vis-a-vis to Miss May Stevens, that mythical lady, for the first meeting with whom I intended to get up such a speculative toilet. A nice style of introduction and such a toilet!—And she—she by this time was as cool as the 31st of December, and sat looking me right in the eyes, as I made some rambling explanation of my being in that extraordinary position. It was a lame explanation, wonderfully mixed with incoherent matter, and stammered and stuttered through in a way that should have disgusted any sensible person. She seemed to be seriously pondering during the recital, and at the end for king at me as though asking the most simple question in the world, said:

"What's to be done?"

"Let me jump out of the window as I came in," said I, in a sickly tone of voice, for the thought came to me that to achieve this end, I must make some desperate display of myself, in a style of custom which I deprecated. She relieved me instantly:

"No, that will not do; there are people moving about and you will be seen."

It was now my turn to stammer out:

"What shall be done?" for I saw that the little hazel-eyed girl was superior to me, in greatness of mind and energy of action. She did not wait long to answer my question.

"You must lie still here until I get up. When I have left the room you can rise, dress, and go away at the first opportunity," was the response, delivered in a quiet and business-like manner.

And so I did. Under May Stevens' command I tented my head under the bed-clothes, and kept well covered until I heard the retreating footsteps on the stairs, which was but a few moments though it seemed to me an age; then with a desperate bound I sprang to the floor and turned the key on the departed one. It was the quickest dressing that I ever made, and I venture to say that an oyss ever sculptured out of his own apartments more stealthily than I did.

That morning we met—May Stevens and I, at the breakfast table—I in the character of the newly arrived that morning, and more formally introduced, during the ceremony of which, my astonished every one present, and planted a thorn of wonder in the mind of Nettie and Carrie, by blushing simultaneously to a beauty height, which we never fail to repeat when the memory of our first meeting comes up.

And now, cousin Jane, you have the whole story of how I first met my wife.

THE WHITE CANOE.

In the days of old, long before the deep solitudes of the West were disturbed by white men, it was the custom of the fashionable warriors of the Forest to assemble at the Great Council, and offer a human sacrifice to the Spirit of the Falls. The offering consisted of a white canoe filled of ripe fruits and blooming flowers, which was pushed over the [illegible] by the chief of the tribe who had [illegible] the sign of commandment. It was counted an honor to the tribe to have [illegible] the costly sacrifice, and over the doomed maiden dressed in a high ceremonial to be delivered to the [illegible] who came to the Falls. The only daughter of a chief of the Ottawa Indians was chosen as a sacrificial offering to the great spirit of Niagara. The mother had been stolen by a hostile tribe. Her father was brave among the warriors, and when the fair daughter child, an opportune of finding herself in consideration. At length the day arrived to deliver into night to the savage fathers [illegible] [illegible] and filled the canoe and [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LATEST from EUROPE.

The London Times by the mail are to the 21st ult. The news by the Asia, which left Liverpool, is three days later. Weights of little interest, however, which have not already appeared.

The Advertiser's Paris correspondent, in noticing the withdrawal of M. Thouvenel, says that the papal question is to remain in statu quo for a further period of six months.

In the House of Commons, Lord John Russell promised to produce the correspondence with the American government relative to the fugitive slave Anderson.

The Perseveranza, of Milan, asserts that private advices are arriving in Paris, from the Pope, with the object of inducing him to proceed to Venice. Bellegrado is now in Venice conducting negotiations to this effect. It would appear, however, that Austria fears the responsibility which such a step might involve.

The new Italian ministry is not yet announced. Rumor gives the following constitution:—Cavour, president of the council, and minister of foreign affairs and marine; Fanti, minister of war; Cassinis, minister of justice; Minghetti, of interior; Desanctis, of instruction; Natoli, of agriculture and commerce; Bastogi, of finance; Peruzzi, of public works; Nisten, a minister without portfolio.

The London Times of the 20th, in an article on the Confederate States of America, says:—The Congress of Montgomery has obtained itself no pattern legislature. Its secretary and political economy exhibit the narrowness of views southwards. The reopening of the slave trade, and throwing open the Mississippi navigation, and the repeal of the navigation laws, are among the first fruits of southern legislation, and the considerate politicians no doubt hope by these acts to vex themselves morally right against the world, to disarm the jealousy of northern States, and to bring over England to their side by concessions contrasting strongly with the barbarian intolerance of the old Union.

RUSSIA.

The following is a summary of the Imperial decree for the emancipation of the serfs, dated March 3:—

"The proprietors of landed property preserve the rights attached to the soil.

"The landed proprietors are, however, to cede to the peasants, for their permanent use, the dwellings with the ground, which they will be allowed to them more by law, in consideration of the payment of dues.—During this stage of things, which will form a transitory period, the peasants are to [illegible] The peasants are permitted by law to purchase their dwellings, and with the consent of the landlords, the land also. The peasants will then become free landed proprietors.

"This new order of things is to be carried out [illegible] the peasants retain two years, and [illegible] the peasants return to their former state of dependence upon the landlords."

POLAND.

A proclamation of the Governor of Poland, Prince Gortschakoff, warns the inhabitants of Warsaw in a most caustic manner against making any demonstration. A deputation of the citizens had protested against the expression of 'some individuals,' contained in the Imperial rescript, relating to the large number of signatures attached to the petition. Prince Gortschakoff replied, that he declined to receive any more signatures, and should regard their collection as an act of sedition, which he would treat in a military manner. The delegation represented to the Prince that the Irish symptoms of agitation rendered necessary the immediate preparation and execution of the reforms confidently promised by Prince Gortschakoff.

TURKEY.

Prince Lobanoff, the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople, had declared that he would withdraw the demand for a conference of representatives of the European Powers to sit permanently at Constantinople, on condition of the Porte's submitting its project of reforms to the Powers. The Porte replied that it would communicate its reforms after their promulgation by the Sultan. The calling out of the Bashi-Bazouks, Bosnia, by means of beacon fires, has been ordered to take place with the least possible delay.

It is said that the Turkish troops have been detached at Gastro.

PAPAL STATES.

The Pope delivered an allocution in the Consistory on the 18th, in reply to those who have attacked that the Papacy is incompatible with civilization, and said, that, on the contrary, the papacy had always contributed to the diffusion of civilization. The Pope declared that he was only opposed to that pretended modern civilization which persecutes the Church, imprisons her Cardinals, Bishops, and Priests, suppresses religious orders, despoils the Church, and [illegible] under foot. He deplored that the Concordat had been violated in the Kingdom of Naples. The Pope declared that he would spontaneously have granted concessions, and would have changed many [illegible] which had been adopted by the Catholic Sovereigns, but, he could not, without the consent and urgent demands of an interior Government. In conclusion, the Holy Father deplored the subversion of all authority, and promised forgiveness to all who had been misled. He concluded his allocution, entreated the Church to God, the avenger of [illegible]

Part No. 12 of Mr. Read's essay on Agriculture has been received too late for this issue. It will appear in our next.

CROPS IN ENGLAND.

The London Examiner explains approximations concerning the coming crop.—"We have arrived at a critical period of the year as regards the produce of the most harvest. The season for sowing spring wheat is rapidly passing away, while the land has not been in a favorable state for sowing. There was a great quantity of rain last week, which not only stopped all work upon the land for some time, but left the land so bandon down that subsequent sowings difficult." The editor thinks that a deduction must be made on a comparatively small breadth of wheat this year. Mr. Caird, in the House of Commons, recently estimated the deficiency of last year's harvest at thirty-two per cent. In the same speech he gave an account of the enormous agricultural disasters which happened in the autumn of 1860, ruined the crop for the inadequate harvest of last year. In October, 1859, the heaviest frost known for many years occurred, and not only prevented much sowing but extensively destroyed green fodder crops. A severe winter followed this short allowance, succeeded by a cold wet summer. Much grass was lost thereby, and the same weather continued through the harvest. Rain fell for thirty-four of the forty days from July 24 to August 31, and the thermometer ranged 13° below the previous autumn.—The crop was consequently bad, except in some early districts. At the same time the potato crop failed in Ireland, and corn had to be imported for that country as well as England. The wheat which was got in this Spring is very fine (the rabbi) hardly full.—These must be, in deficiency, however, under the most favorable circumstances.

WHEAT.

It is an error to suppose that corn, in the greatest wheat producing country. We do our fall wheat, without doubt, but our system of agriculture is steadily enhancing our best land, and in a few years a distinction of the yield will be apparent in our coarse returns. Last year's crop is assumed to be 180,000,000 bushels, but the average is probably only 120,000,000.—The average yield of other countries is as follows:

France	191,422,248
Britain	145,800,000
Two Sicilies	64,000,000
Canada	60,470,124
Spain	46,914,900
Austria	27,785,598
Sardinia	19,375,000
Russia (exports only)	18,221,776
Belgium	13,350,000
Portugal	5,500,000
Turkey (export only)	4,629,000
Holland	3,600,000
Denmark	3,000,000
Sweden and Norway	1,202,000

Here is an annual production of over 606,000,000 bushels. If the crops of this continent and included the total may be safely assumed to be 900,000,000, as the unquestioned product of Turkey and Russia must be very large. No better evidence of the primary value of the wheat plant to the human family could be given that such an exhibition as this. It proves that where the highest civilization has been attained, there the greatest production is realized.—American Paper.

WEIGHT OF FIREWOOD IN CORDS.

The figures show the number of pounds in a cord of twenty kinds of dry wood:

Shell-bark Hickory, 4460—Common Walnut, 4221—White Oak, 3821—white Ash, 3420—Swamp Whortleberry, 3361—Shrub Oak, 3337—Apple tree, 3,185—Red Oak, 3,083—Black Oak, 3,102—White Beech, 2936—Black Birch, 2815—Yellow Oak, 2810—White Elm, 2662—Maple, 2662.—Butternut, 2649.—Spanish Oak, 2391—White Birch, 2369—Pitch Pine, 1368—Lombardy Poplar, 1176.

Maple is known to be the best description of wood for fuel and to command the highest price. It has also the advantage of weighing only 2,662 lbs. a cord against 4460 in hickory, and therefore the cost of carriage measured by the relative weight would be only half as much in maple as in hickory. The bad economy of bringing green wood to market is shown by the fact that one cord in that state contains 1,343 lbs. of water. This additional carriage serves no useful purpose; but, on the contrary, greenwood is much less valuable for burning than dry.

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other; the thickness of the burrs or in use. It does not require a large power to drive it, two boys can easily turn it; with this amount of power to drive it, two boys can grind from 15 to 20 bushels of Barley per hour. No ground or other cut by cast-steel cutters, which are so fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and replaced in a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground without sifting or adjusting the Machine.

The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION, to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

THE MIDNIGHT MURDER.

BY S. P. ROSE.

The quiet hour of midnight,
A traveller all alone;
A path by a winding water-course,
Where the shadows are darkly thrown.

A blow from a heavy weapon
Dealt by an unseen hand;
The bleeding form of he helpless one,
Lying along the sand.

A vain and feeble struggle,
A few low sounds of prayer;
A thought purchases of a loving wife,
And a child with flaxen hair.

A hand with stern dark faces,
Around the corpse now cold,
Stripping the outside garments off
And counting o'er the gold.

A lifting up of the dead one,
A tramp to the river shore;
A plunge in the silent waters;
And the deed of death is o'er.

Sorrow around the fireside,
Where the lost had sat and smiled;
Grief in the heart of the anxious wife,
And tears on the face of the child.

The World's unfeeling wonder,
Affections frenzied fears;
And many a dark suggestion
That only endeth in tears.

The lapse of the Autumn season,
The passing of Winter cold;
The coming again of the Spring-time,
And the Summer growing old.

The balmy hour of evening,
A fisherman all alone;
Down by the winding water-course
Where the sun's last rays are thrown.

A half-corrupted skeleton,
Drawn to the sandy shore,
Bearing proof of untimely death
By violence,—and no more.

A heap of crumbling bones,
And shreds of rotting clothes,
Of that dark and dreadful deed of crime
Is all that any one knows.

The lost Inheritance.

The train from Paris to Lyons stopped at the Station of Joigny, a town upon the route, and after leaving a few passengers again went on.

The Station, for a moment crowded with railway porters and lookers on, was soon deserted by all but two individuals. One of these was an old man dressed in the garb of a well-to-do farmer, and the other was a young man who seemed to be waiting for some one to meet him. To this person the old man presently addressed himself.

"May I presume, sir," said he, "to inquire if you are Clement B——?"

"Yes, my good man," replied the youth, with a haughtiness of manner, "and I have no doubt you are Mr. Martin."

"At your service, sir," replied the old man.

"Well, Mr Martin," continued Clement in the same tone, 'I began to imagine that you intended to keep me waiting. That would not have been the best manner in which to have insinuated yourself on my good graces."

The old man, instead of replying, let his hand fall upon his breast, as if in deep affliction, and conducted the new comer towards a large, old fashioned carriage, to which a very rough looking horse was harnessed.

"Here is your carriage, sir," said Martin, "if you will be good enough to get in I will have the honor of conducting you to the Hermitage."

"That my carriage, sir," cried Clement, "why, I shall be taken for a travelling pedlar."

But a few days before, Mr. Clement B., who now put on so many airs, was a simple clerk in a crockery warehouse in Paris, and possessed the reputation of being a quiet, unpretending little fellow. What, then, had brought about this sudden and radical transformation? He had become, since the previous day, a rich man, and it may be well understood that the possessor of an income of twenty thousand francs a year finds it difficult to retain the modest demeanor of a plain clerk.

On the previous day, while dusting the large piles of crockery under his charge, a letter arrived for him by the post, conveying the startling intelligence that one of his uncles, of whom he had often heard as a very eccentric and wealthy old man, but whom he had never seen, had just died at his residence in Burgundy, leaving his nephew Clement, sole heir to his estate, to the exclusion of many other heirs.

The letter was from a notary in the Province, who desired him to leave Paris immediately, for Joigny the town near which his uncle had resided, where he would be met by Mr. Martin, an old confidential servant of the deceased, and conducted from the village to the "Hermitage," the name which the deceased had given the estate.

Almost driven out of his senses by such an unexpected stroke of fortune, Clement hastened to obey the notary's directions, and on his arrival at Joigny, joined Martin as we have seen.

On joining the queer vehicle in which our hero had so unceremoniously taken a place, Martin took a pair of pistols from the coach pocket and placed at their disposition.

Martin offered the honors of the Hermitage to the new proprietor, and respectfully asked in the customary form:

"Then was the sleeping chamber of poor uncle," said Martin, as they entered a large apartment, furnished in old-fashioned style, "I forgot to tell you that he died two days ago."

But the speaker, instead of entering upon the long chamber, the chamber of his benefactor, threw upon all around him a look of scorn and said:

"Upon my word, I can't say I think much of the old boy's taste! I never saw anything so very ugly in my life."

"Notwithstanding, sir," replied Martin, "it is the best we have here, and if you can't content yourself I really don't know where you will find other lodgings."

"I will have," exclaimed the young man. "You do not imagine, I am such a donkey, I hope. No, no, Monsieur Martin, as you see, Paris is the only place, so I shall sell the crazy old rookery and then be off."

"Sell the Hermitage," exclaimed Martin, "your uncle's favorite place of residence! impossible! And we servants, who hoped to end our days under this roof, what is to become of us?"

"Mr. Martin," retorted the young man, "let me have none of your complaints, I beg. Get some dinner, and afterwards drive me to the notary's."

After having eaten a hearty meal, notwithstanding he found the meats insipid and the wines sour, the legatee, still accompanied by Martin, re-entered the carriage, and the two started off.

"If I am not mistaken, observed Mr. Clement, after an hour's ride, "we passed this spot this morning, and that"—pointing to a building—"is the railway station. Do we take the train there?"

"You alone will do so," responded his companion, speaking very gravely, and in a tone which caused the young man to tremble in spite of himself. "I, sir, am your uncle. Having heard good accounts of your conduct I had resolved to make you heir to all I possess, but before doing so I wished to ascertain if you were really deserving of my generosity, and I had recourse to stratagem, which has thoroughly exposed your true character to me. Good bye, Clement; return to your business, and remember that your arrogance and ingratitude have lost you that which will never again be placed within your reach."

PEOPLE WHO HAVE SEEN "BETTER DAYS."

Every community is infested with a certain amount of decayed gentility—a class of people who are incessantly parading the fact to the world that the parchisee old dame, Fortune, has ousted them down stairs, and filled their vacancies with those better qualified to retain them. Such people are infinitely worse than the idiotic poor ones, who pinch their stomach at home, in order to flaunt before the public in fine robes, and are forever aping their superiors in social scale, and who look down upon any honest labor with unmitigated contempt, and who "put on airs," with an assumption of superiority, only to be the laughing-stock of the sensible public. Plain and wholesome food is eaten under protest by these remnants of past greatness, because it is not of that rare and dainty description they have been accustomed to in their mourned over "better days." If compelled to use the mode of conveyance proved by nature, they do it with affected disgust, as they were always accustomed to ride "in pa's elegant carriage." Such people entertain very erroneous impressions of the world as it really is. They seem to think that to sink and drown is preferable to bravely buffeting the waves and through their individual exertions save themselves from a watery grave. A fool or a coward will give way to despair at the first appearance of danger, while the brave heart will grow the more resolute, and the nerves will be drawn to a firmer tension to meet the approaching conflict, and will bravely combat its antagonist until the palm of victory ornament the brow. It is far more honorable to climb than to tumble down. It requires genius and talent to build up a reputation and fortune, while one entirely destitute of these requisites, and possessing not a shade of tact or judgment, can make ship-wreck of both in a very short time. A father may spend a lifetime in hoarding the inlaws of adverse fortune, and horesmilly battling for every advantage he obtains, to gain an honorable position in the world, while a profligate son will make a short work of it, scattering to the winds the fortune the parent struggled so hard to attain, leaving him a bankrupt in pecuniary and also moral sense. Nothing is more absurd than to claim respect and esteem on the consideration of a lost position. It is like attempting to do business on the capital and credit of acknowledged bankruptcy. Let those, pining under the shadow of their former greatness, earnestly set to work, and, by their acts, show that they still possess the germ of manhood. Throw to the winds the silver spoon you supped with in the days gone by, and on its stead substitute energy and industry and the day will eventually come when you can have it replaced, to be the more enjoyed on account of its long absence.—St. Catharines Journal.

WHO IS A GENTLEMAN?

We have heard many attempts to define a gentleman in a few words, but we have never been entirely satisfied with the conclusions set forth. We will not say what a gentleman is, but we can with some positiveness declare what he is not. He is not a man to pry into other people's business, and to shirk his neighbor's creditors with their revenue. He does not pronounce adversely or disparagingly on the conjugal morals, looks or manners of those around him. He does not try to ventilate or disgust his colleagues' views or feelings. He does not exhibit the insufficiency of letters with flashes and indelicate language. He is not rude to ladies, employees of the press, insolent to the ordained in correspondence, or ill-natured in his family. He is not heard to lie, nor proud to deceive, nor hasten to slander. Put these ingredients together and you have a pretty nearly finished gentleman.

THE STORY OF THE CUCKOO.

Every one knows that the cuckoo never builds a nest, but lays her eggs in the nests of other birds; but she is, in a word a feathered Wheeler, Van Dusen, as we gather from Marryatt's "Residence in Jutland," assign a more honorable reason for her peculiar habit.

When in the early spring-time the voice of the cuckoo is heard in the woods, every village girl hangs her hand and asks the question, "Cuckoo, cuckoo, when shall I be married?" And the old fellow, borne down with age and rheumatism, inquires, "Cuckoo, when shall I be released from this world's cares?" The bird, in answer, continues singing, "Cuckoo!" as many times as years will elapse before the object of their desires will come to pass. But as some people live to an advanced age, and many girls die old maids, the bird has as much to do in answering the questions put to her, that the building comes goes by; she has no time to make her nest, but lays her eggs in that of the hedge sparrow.

GARIBALDI AT HOME.

A letter from a medical man who stayed with Garibaldi at Caprera says: "There are no domestics in Garibaldi's house; everybody serves himself. There is however, a man blind of one eye as cook and house steward. A surprise has been given to the general. Some person unknown has planted in the Peatmoose, his favorite resort, a pear tree, with the inscription, "Pear tree of the soldier laborer." A Milanese painter, of the name of Zucchi, has been here for some days to paint a portrait of Garibaldi, but the general only gives him a few minutes at rare intervals, and on each occasion he says that the painting seems to him to be sufficiently resembling, and that he will not sit any more. The unfortunate painter is in despair. On the first day I arrived we were twelve in number, and dined together at a table which at the outside was only capable of accommodating six. The general was at a corner with just room enough for his plate. You would have half fare at Caprera, my dear friend, and I assure you that the table is not decked out with cut glass or plate; poultry little drinking glasses, such as are used in public houses, odd knives, forks made of composition metal and common delf plates, are what appear. The first evening I was with Garibaldi he was afflicted with a violent cor nebu, caught by sitting in a draught; I put a poultice on his cheek, and passed the night on a sofa at the door of his chamber. The day after he rose at his usual hour, and with his head enveloped, went out at five o'clock in the morning. A grave affair now occupies attention at Caprera—the enlargement of Garibaldi's house. Col. Deideri brought from Genoa a plan of what is to be done.—A single mason of La Maddalena has been charged to superintend the operation, but we all help him, and Garibaldi, for his part, began forming a wall out of the remains of a windmill which he commenced some years back. I shall never forget having seen the man who carried so high the flag of independence at Varese, Como, and Calatafimi, placing one stone on another, on the projected wall and going each with mortar, like the most modest of masons. But the mason who acted as architect was not satisfied with Garibaldi's work, and he said, "Believe me, general, you place more in making war than in building walls." "Perhaps you are right," answered Garibaldi, "and so I will content myself by bringing up, in a wheelbarrow, the stones required!" And for more than an hour afterwards the general was occupied in conveying stones!"

A GREEDY SWINDLER.

The robberies of the late Berlin postmaster are coming to light by degrees. It has turned out that he loaned a poor widow who owned a small farm the sum of $200, taking as collateral security a mortgage for $500, giving his note for the difference. He disposed of the mortgage and thus beggared his victim. A local paper states that he carried away $2,000 worth of funds of the township of Waterloo, lent to him by the Treasurer, without leaving any security for its payment. He got $900 also of the Township of Wellesley funds, and came near having $2,000 more. The greed of the man was as great as the duplicity of the public, as evidences of which a correspondent of the Waterloo Reformer humorously heads his article "Twelve Public Officers Missing," all combined in Dr. Nelson, as follows:

Postmaster,
County Clerk,
Telegraph Agent,
Express Agent,
Division Court Clerk,
Marriage Licence Agent,
Life Assurance Agent,
Secretary Board of Public Instruction,
Magistrate,
Conveyancer,
Notary Public,
Commissioner Queen's Bench.

When dinners lack conversation, in the view, what capital of subjects does it always furnish for the conversationist!

A person who had become dissipated was accused of having been observed "all over it, upon occasion," said he, "I own I was shaky at all."

A gunmaker finding fault to pay very hard against him, complained much. "Gentlemen! 'tis true you make me little, but I duly promise make me pay."

Gentle is the weakness of love. But, what your enemy to apply either the sword, which your gun for he hath to be your friend? Upon liquor against your love, your daughter?

A Mr. Sabretash, a Gallant manager of a company of beginners in elocution, is delivering to his pupils the following rules for gesticulation: "Always keep your right hand in motion, and your left foot forward."

A gentleman who had a very large family of children, was asked by a friend how he could support them all. "Why," said he, "I have a very large heart, and a very large house."

A TALE OF A TEA-KETTLE.

One winter's evening, scarcely one hundred years ago, the tea board was laid out and the window curtain closely drawn on the humble parlour of a small house in the town of Greenwich, in the west of England. A tidy, active matron was busily engaged slicing the bread and butter. A blazing fire roared and roared in the grate, and curled around the black sides of the tea-kettle in the midst of the fire; the water boiled with a faintly heard, gurgling sound, and a stream of white vapor came whizzing out of the spout of the kettle with a shrill, cheery hiss. As the matron stopped to pour the boiling fluid into the tea-pot, her son James, a boy of twelve summers, sat on a low bench in front of the fire.—The boy was intently gazing at the fire, absorbed in deep contemplation. The boy looked at the kettle and the steam, and the mother looked at the boy. "Was there ever such a no'er doo-weel in this world as our Jamie!" was the question which almost unconsciously she proposed to herself.—Mrs. B. stepped in a moment. Turning to the visitor, Jamie's mother said, "Mrs. B., did you ever see the like of our Jamie! look at him, he'll sit there for hours staring at the kettle and the steam till ye wad think his een wad come out o' his head." As he watched the escaping steam, the boiling fluid would gather strength and raise the lid of the tea-kettle; as the dreaming boy saw this, he knew the struggle was symbolical of intellect warring with the elements. As he sat gazing at his day dreams, his mother exclaimed, "Jamie, go by to your tea; if I find ye staring at the fire again, ye'll find the weight o' my hand." This anecdote is literally true. James Watt was born in the year 1736. This incident occurred when he was in his 12th year. He was the son of a poor tradesman in Greenock and probably had never read, the spelling book and the Bible excepted. It was he who first applied steam to any useful purpose. It's the Bible Mr. Printer, that makes Scotland differ from all nations under the sun. Burns, Hogg, and other self-taught bioderim, whose writings have charmed and enlightened the world, were all the sons of Scottish peasantry, most of whom had come to the years of maturity before they ever read a book, excepting the Bible. It was the sublime language of the Bible that inspired the songs of Burns at the plough, and of the Ettrick Shepherd, when watching his flocks by night, all seated on the ground. The 3rd chapter of Habakkuk, and the 39th chapter of the Book of Job, contain more sublime poetry than you will find in all the books—Cicero, Demosthenes and Shakspeare—put together.

THE HORSE.

Notwithstanding the horse has been the servant and companion of man for hundreds of years, and his nature, disposition and habits have been studied more than those of most other of our world domestic animals, yet there is a deplorable degree of ignorance of the extent of his intelligence, various breeds or races differ very much in intelligence, disposition and [illegible] at all inferior, will for a moment doubt,—Neither will he denied that these faculties may be cultivated and greatly improved and increased by careful and judicious management and education. The horse, like the child, may be made gentle and affectionate, or vicious and ugly by education. Few children or horses are, in our opinion, vicious or unmanlike of kindness from their teachers or superiors. By all his movements and actions, the horse admits, or seems to admit, the superiority of man, and if kindly treated, tends to him in his best friend; and every enlightened and humane man will treat his horse as his most faithful servant, and the best of all his mute friends. In the wild state, or in a wild, informed with, the horse has no intermediate pace between a walk and a gallop.—Hence it will be seen that the two-thirty trotters have been made such by [illegible] for generations and otherwise. Much may be known of the intelligence and disposition of the horse by the shape and size of its ears, and their position upon the head. Horses with rather small, thin ears, set far apart, erect and freely in motion, indicate breeding, intelligence and spirit. More may be known from the ear than the eye. If the horse is to the foregoing table, when on a journey, of carrying one ear forward and the other backward, he will be found to possess both spirit and intelligence. This shows that he is attentive to everything that is passing around him, and cannot but much fatigued, or illtimly often to determine on. It has been requested that four horses sleep without jumping one ear forward and the other back, in order that they may receive notice of the approach of objects in any direction.

Dr. Arnott says that "when horses or mules partake in company at night, thanks in front forget their ears forward; those in the rear direct them backward; and those in the centre direct them laterally, or part one way; the whole being actuated by one feeling, which explains the general subject of [illegible] of horses and mules, by the motion of their ears, as they [illegible] and hearing." The [illegible] of the horse is [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] of the

MR. McGEE ON EMIGRATION.

Mr. McGee still adheres to his first love; and is as fond as ever of the subject of Emigration—how best to promote it, and get the emigrants to settle in Canada. In moving on the subject,

Mr. McGee said,—In making this motion, it is not my intention to detain the House, at any length,—because there is no opposition to the appointment of the Committee; and, therefore, there is no need for discussion at the present moment. When the Committee reports, there may be a necessity to support their views, by arguments addressed to the whole House: on the present occasion, therefore, I shall content myself with a few words of explanation, as to the composition and utility of the Committee itself. Of the nine gentlemen I have named on the Committee, two are members of the Government, three others support the Government, and four are in Opposition: I have chosen the seven unofficial members, by districts, so that from my honorable friend from Kent, we will have the benefit of local information, covering the whole extent of the country. The utility of the Committee, should it agree upon an improved system of managing the emigrant service, will be the best shown by the results of its deliberations; but I may be allowed to refer to the Report of the Committee of last Session, in evidence of what may be done by a small number of gentlemen, giving their patient attention to an inquiry of this description. Last year, Sir, we sat seventeen days on this business, and published a Report of which the Printing Committee were pleased to publish double the quantity we asked for, considering the evidence elicited of very great importance. From Mr. Buchanan and Mr. Russell of the Crown Lands, we got at the root history of our system: from Mr. Sims, Mr. Carter, and Hans Hagens, we obtained the facts affecting our German and Norwegian emigration; from the inland agents, from members of this House, and from Provincial Land Surveyors, we sought and gained much valuable information; from railroad and steamboat agents we obtained data by calculation of information, equally valuable; and from the Municipal authorities, we collected the facts in relation to Absentee Lands, which will be found in the Appendix to the Report. With all these sources of information before us, after the exercise of our best judgment upon the evidence, the Committee concluded to recommend nine specific improvements in the emigration service. I am happy to say that suggestions No. 3, 5, and 6 (in part), have been already adopted by the Government, and it is to consider the practicability of some or all of the others, that I am making this motion. It is especially with a view to the reception of emigrants on reaching our shores, and their settlement on the public lands, that I ask for the Committee. I may observe, however, that of the 120,000 emigrants who left the British Islands last year for North America, 55 per cent were females. 25 per cent were laborers, 20 per cent mechanics, only 5 per cent were entered as "farmers." The most remarkable feature in this table is the large proportion of mechanics—who, of course, go to swell the town populations of the New World, and the small proportion of farmers. If this disparity is not accidental and temporary, it will be in vain for our Agents, abroad or at home, to attempt to force an immigration of farmers, which cannot be had; we must, to increase largely our rural population, make it easy for the class set down as "laborers" to become farmers in this country; and that will be, no doubt, one of the chief subjects for the consideration of the members of the Committee. It was by the adoption of such a policy that what are called "the Land States" of the Union doubled their numbers between 1850 and 1860, and by pursuing the same wise policy, I have no doubt we may increase our two and a half or three millions, in 1861, to five or six millions, by the next decennial census.—[Hear, hear.] So we persons more wilful than wise, have asserted that the population of this Province is quite equal to its resources. Why, Mr. Speaker, in the district of Gaspe, on the Saint Maurice, and in the Eastern Townships, there is still land enough to sustain a population equal to our whole numbers at this day. In your own section of Canada, Mr. Speaker—in that vast unoccupied zone, which lies between the lower portion of Lake Ontario and Lake Nipissing, on both sides of the central height of land, from which the waters flow on the one hand to the Rideau, and on the other to the Ottawa,—in that region alone, I think you know yourself above, that there is, [illegible] enough unoccupied to sustain a couple of millions of inhabitants. Through, or rather into that region, the fine great "Free Grant Roads" of Upper Canada from the Opeongo Road, the Frontenac Road, the Addington Road, the Hastings Road, the Bytown Road and no doubt three roads have been found most beneficial in effect; and, I trust, it may not be too much to expect our province to employ, as my hon. friend from Northumberland last year, why another road, with a view to increase the population, should not be opened out in Lower Canada. [Hear, hear.] The necessity for action on the part of the Committee is enhanced by the probable shortness of the Session, and by the reports which reach us from the other side of a large European [illegible] being expected. It is necessary that arrangements should be made to receive these emigrants promptly on landing on our shores and to facilitate their transfer to our settlements. [Hear.] It is in this spirit I have moved, and not with any personal or partizan purpose, and in that spirit I have no doubt the Committee will act unanimously together. [Hear, hear.] While on this subject, Mr. Speaker, I cannot help [illegible], to refer to the remarks concerning the emigrants as a class, made in this House, the other evening by the hon. member for Cornwall. It is no doubt, Sir, an honorable distinction to have been born in Canada; but those who came as emigrants in this age and country, should remember that they are entering at their own fathers or grandfathers. [Hear, hear.] We attach up here the [illegible] of a Irish baronetcy love of principle, fifty or a hundred years old; and provision can't pride of privilege, and contempt for new comers, is a pitiable exhibition. No statesman in this age of the world, especially on this side of the world, pretends to underrate the importance of immigration and addition of national wealth, and had not the hon. member for North Wentworth disclaimed the sentiments to which I refer, on behalf of this side of the House, I should myself have felt bound to do so on the spot. [Hear, hear.] With these explanations, Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to place the motion in your hands.—(Cheers.)

THE GOVERNMENT POSITION.

The Attorney General East had the floor after the dinner recess, and spoke for several hours—indeed, occupied the whole night, so as to put off the troublesome subject till Mr Macdonald should make his appearance on Monday. The position Mr. Macdonald holds is no longer tenable, even to not the most scrupulous of politicians.—The walls and bastions are crumbling about his ears, and he has shut himself up for the week, to consult his magicians and astrologers as to what shall be done. A strong minister, headed by the gallant Baronet of Dundurn, with Sir Henry Smith and John Hillyard Cameron as generals of division, is being formed to operate upon one of his flanks from the old fashioned and really respectable tory position; while John Ross, et al., are preparing to turn his left by some counter movement. With all this there is no doubt that the Attorney General West has a very strong personal hold on his friends. Those friends, however, are chiefly mercenary friends, fond of good contracts, and easy financial arrangements—expensive friends, dear at the best, and always wanting in times of real adversity.

* * * * * * *

It has been thought most likely that the Ministry would get over the session as quickly as possible, and then go to the country upon a new programme, to adjustment of the Representation being a leading question. From the declaration of Mr. Cartier, this idea must be given up, and the question for the Upper Canada members of the Government must be whether they are prepared to go to the country, and sacrifice themselves and their supporters upon this question? It will not do at the next election, after this explicit declaration of the Premier, for members to say that they supported the measure, when introduced, while they supported the Ministry, whose leading principle was opposition to it. No constituency can be gulled with such pretences. The necessity, therefore, arises for a resignation on the part of Mr. John A. Macdonald and his colleagues. Whether this is to be done individually, leaving Mr. Cartier in the position alone, or whether a combination to defeat him, and force the entire Ministry to resign, is now the question, and there are those who attribute Mr. Macdonald's absence to this latter desire. By leaving Mr. Cartier unsupported by his Upper Canada colleagues, he may hope to preserve a defeat, or, at least, to permit it, and thus bring about a resignation of the Ministry entire, with a chance of forming a new one without Mr. Cartier or with him in such leading strings as John A. is now held. One thing must be clear to all, that any Ministry going to the country without a distinct assertion of an amendment of the representation on the basis of population and the new census, must evidently be defeated by an overwhelming majority. The present Ministry have taken that position, but must give way, or be so defeated.

News of the Week.

No less than 1600 steamboats run upon the Mississippi River and its tributaries.—The total value of these is estimated at $60,000,000.

The Vice-President of the United States, the last Postmaster-General, the present Secretary of the Interior, and the present Secretary of War, were all Pirates.

The descendants of Daniel De Foe, the author of "Robinson Crusoe," are now partially supported by a pension of one hundred pounds, recently granted by Lord Palmerston.

William Robinson, a farmer of Seymour East, left his home on Monday last to go to Belleville; unfortunately, while crossing Gurney Bridge, he missed his way, or by some unaccountable accident which befell him, he proceeded no farther, and was found a day or two afterward lying across a log, partly in the water, dead!

From the Nevada (Col.) Democrat, we learn that a portion of the skeleton of a Mastadon was recently found by some miners on Klamath river. It was found forty feet below the surface, and the bones, though extremely porous, were in a good state of preservation. The animal, when living, must have been from eighteen to twenty feet in height.

A genius named Owen proposes, through the N. Y. Tribune, to contract for the recapture of all the Government property now in the hands of the Secessionists, and for the reinforcement of Fort Sumter, for less than eight millions. Having, as he said, made an accurate estimate of the cost of the work. The Administration had better let him have the job.

A valuable horse was standing near the Beaulieu railway station, on the South Western line, a few days since, while a train was approaching. The animal appeared greatly frightened by the noise of the train, and it soon afterwards fell down dead. Its body was opened, and it was discovered that a blood vessel near the heart was ruptured, in consequence, it is believed, of excitement from fear.

Henry Urban of St. Louis is an unfortunate man. A gang of rowdies attacked his house, and he fired upon them, breaking the arm of one. For this he was arrested, and sentenced to a month's imprisonment. When he had served out his time and went home, he found that his wife had eloped with another man. The next day, a Jew peddler sold him a brass watch for $50.—He is waiting to see what will turn up next.

Mr. Stephen H. Payne, a clerk employed in the Brooklyn post-office, came to his death in a very singular manner lately.—The deceased, in company with a young man named Smith, also employed in the post-office, left at noon to go home to dinner. On the way, being about twenty feet in advance of Smith, he turned round and threw a snow-ball at him. The force used in throwing the ball caused him to fall heavily upon the side-walk, and in fifteen minutes thereafter he was a corpse.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Morrison is not at all pleased with the way he has been treated by the Government. When he lost his election for Grey, he sent in his resignation, and he thinks Ministers ought to have announced that fact, when questioned as to whether he was yet a member of the Executive. He is annoyed, and not without cause, at being attacked by the newspapers for want of pluck, and want of decency in failing to resign; whereas the truth is, he did all he could to get out of the Ministry, but as yet has failed.

The Montreal Witness says,—"There is a narrow strip of clear water along the city, and crossing is now very dangerous. We noticed one or two with light vehicles attempting the road to St. Lambert's yesterday forenoon. On Sabbath night, Christopher Green and his wife, in passing across to their home, fell in; but were rescued by three young men named Cavanagh, Brady, and McVery, and brought back to the city. Early on Monday morning, a person named Thomas Quinn, rescued a horse and sleigh from the canal."

The report was very current in Quebec on Saturday, that the Hon. Sydney Smith, the Postmaster-General, had resigned, in consequence of Mr. Cartier's speech, 'That hon. gentleman is certainly in favor of Representation by Population'; and it would be his salvation in his own county if he took this decisive step. Up to the time I write, he has not done it however.

v course reading of Farmers, C. W.

PART XIII.

Having pointed some of the principal hygrometrical accessory, or being the Lime in proper state for profitable application, has to-day proceed to treat of the latent cultivation of the soil; commencing with that operation which is admitted by all to be the managing of good farming, namely, plowing.

The first thing to be considered is, for what purpose do we plough? It is very evident that the more turning over of the soil by passing the plough under it cannot add to it any of the elements of fertility.—One effect of inverting the surface soil is to prevent the growth of weeds, but although the seeds in it may possibly date from weeds and the seeds of any of our cultivated crops deposited in it for several years in succession, it will cause to produce a crop. Plowing therefore must produce some further effect on the soil than merely preventing the growth of weeds, and in order to prepare that operation prudently it is absolutely necessary that we should understand what we wish to accomplish by it. It is a fact which observation and experiments have established beyond dispute, that the elements of the crop must be contained in the soil in a form accessible to the roots of the plants, otherwise it will not produce it. Or in other words, in order to obtain a given quantity of any vegetable production from an acre of land it is necessary not only that we should obtain a sufficient supply of seeds of that particular plant in the soil to produce the quantity of stalks required, but that the various elements which are required to make up both the stalks and grain of this particular kind of grain must be contained in the soil, and that in such a form and position, that by the process which nature has provided they will be assimilated to the condition of the growing plant and become ren-positively portions of it. To consider so far as our limited capacity has allowed us to penetrate, the wonderful and beautiful processes by which the soil we turn over with the plow is transformed into perfectly developed plants of the many different vegetable productions of the earth, would be both interesting and profitable, but would not come within the design of a treatise, of this kind. My object has been to discuss the different modes of practice in the various operations which make up the round of the farmer's occupation. It is not absolutely necessary for him to understand the minute process by which the ends he wishes to accomplish are brought about; all that is required is to know that certain causes will produce certain results, and after all that has been said and written on the subject, and the talent and research which has been expended, how little we really know of the real process by which a single blade of grass grows on a stalk of wheat attains perfection, but this we know, that in order that our cultivated plants may reproduce their kind it is necessary that their seeds should be deposited in the soil in such a manner that they will be accessible to air moisture, and the various elements contained in the soil and which are required for their growth and maturity, and this combination of circumstances can only be obtained by thoroughly pulverizing the soil in order to produce or expedite several chemical processes necessary to its fertility and which take place either very slowly or not at all while it lies in a compact state. It is also ascertained, by experience, that some, if not all of these processes must rapidly when the soil is broken up and exposed to the active winter. Nothing has so powerful an effect on reducing and rendering available for the food of plants the different mineral substances which go to make up a part of all soils as the action of the elements of frosts and thaws which occur during the winter and spring. During a rain or thaw the hard minute of soil has been saturated with water which expands on freezing, and then pushes the particles of soil as far asunder that when the open again becomes thawed they crumble down, and thus the process is repeated until the soil is reduced to a finer tilths than could be accomplished by any artificial means of cultivating. Still keeping in view the principle I have above shown, they the crop will be in addition to the mechanical condition to the soil in an available form for the nourishment of plants, it will readily be perceived that the depth to which the soil is pulverized is another, in a perfect comprehension. To the depth of one acre of fertilizing inditient material to produce twenty bushels of wheat it is evident that the same extent of surface plowed one inch deep, and of the same fertility, will contain sufficient for forty bushels. In plowing then, we should never lose sight of the fact, that while our patent only allows us to occupy a certain breadth of surface there is no restrictions to depth or height, and that in proportion as the roots grow downward so will the stalks grow upward.

THE LAY OF LABOR.

Ho, brethren, sing to-day a song—
A strain that for its burden
Shall have, as 'mid the lay along,
The toiling artizans' guerdon!
Let others warble beauty's praise,
Or wreath with song the sabre;
United, will our voices raise
To chant in lay of labor.

The dongs that bend the captive's brow
Are nothing for these hearts!
That any victor offer can show,
Flushing from a nation's quarrels.
Some praise the minstrel when he sings;
I'd rather hear my neighbor,
Who on his sturdy anvil rings
The melody of labor.

The songs who publicly sells for hire!
On knee made dense attendance;
Mid memories may to fill the host
Of hapless independence.
The sun at high, through fog, combats
The o'gainty of labor.

Then hence unto all who toil—
Strong man or gentle woman;
Amid the daily strife entwined
There's something superhuman!
To working duty lends a blend;
So join with me, good neighbors,
And sing on field, and forge, and farm,
The honor due to labor.

THE TWO SISTERS.

The following story, the simple and domestic incidents of which may be deemed hardly worth relating after such a lapse of time, awakened a degree of interest a hundred years ago, in the principal seaport of the Bay of Massachusetts. The rainy twilight of an Autumn day, a parlor on the second floor of a house, plainly furnished, as becomed the circumstances of its inhabitants, yet decorated with curiosities from beyond the sea, and a few specimens of India manufacture, these are the only particulars to be presented in regard to season and scenes. Two young and comely women sat together by the fireside, nursing their disturbed and pensive sorrows. They were the recent brides of two brothers, a sailor and a landsman; and two somewhere days had brought tidings of the death of each, by the chances of Canadian warfare and the tempestuous Atlantic. The universal sympathy excited by this bereavement, drew numerous condoling guests to the habitation of the widowed sisters, several, among whom was also mourning, had remained until the verge of the evening, when one by one, whispering many comfortable passages of Scripture, that were shattered by more abundant tears, they took their leave, and departed to their own happier homes. The sojourners thought not insensible to the kindness of their friends, had yearned to be left alone. United in their bad fate, by relationship of the dying and now more closely so by that of widowhood, each of whatever consolation in her grief admitted, was to be found in the bosom of the other. They joined their hands, and were mutually silent. But after an hour of such indulgement, one of the sisters, all of Welsh ancestors were influenced by two united, quiet, yet not feeble character, began to recollect the precepts of resignation and endurance which her piety had taught her when she did not think to head them. Her misfortune, besides, as earliest known, should earliest seem to industries with her regular course of duties; accordingly, having placed the table before the fire, and arranged a frugal meal, she took the hand of her companion.

"Come dearest sister, you have not eaten a morsel of food, to-day," she said. "Arise, I pray you, and let us ask a blessing on that which is provided for us."

Her sister was of a lively and irritable temperament, and the first passage of her sorrows had been expressed by shrieks and passionate lamentations. She now turned from Mary's words like a wounded antelope from the hand that restores the thrall.

"There is no blessing for me neither will I ask it," cried Margaret with a fresh burst of tears.

"Would that it were His will that I might never taste food more."

Yet the trembled at these rebellious expostulations, should as soon as they were uttered, and by degrees Mary succeeded in bringing her sister's mind more to the frame of her own. Time rolled on, and the usual hour of repose arrived. The brothers and their brides entered the married state with no more than the slender means which their exertions in one household, with equal right to the property, were to constitute it. Neither the sisters were related, their housing while their dying mothers of the day, and placed a light-fire on the hearth. The dress of both gentlemen was left open, as that a part of the interior of each, and the link with their married persons, were reciprocally visible. Mary did not stand upon the pinnacle of one and the same coast. Mary experienced the effect often connected with a grief quietly thrills and then rush through the veins. Margaret, on the right shoulder, with its head and neck, and the drops of red blood upon the white ground, were plainly visible. Mary's countenance was pale as ashes, and her eyes were closed. Margaret, with a shriek, sprang to her husband's side, and endeavored to stanch the blood with her handkerchief. Mary, with a convulsive effort, opened her eyes, and a moment's recollection seemed to overwhelm her. She sank back upon the pillow

The Telegraph says that the farmers must also be aware that the Bankrupts are unmerciful and unyielding in their endeavors to obtain possession of the Estate, by breaking the leases and mortgages; they must know that the means is contrived in every possible form within the view of taking the property from the farming. This is not done at once as can be the case of sales; when carried almost to desperation by every excuse for help being offered against the through the agency of his powerful supporters, did not let them rest in the possession under and property and pay for it; was one thing which drove those different Unions, and to join hands by the same party as any other that united them for the common help one.)

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY COMMON SENSE, OF CAVANVILLE, C. W.

PAPER IV.

With regard to the mechanical operation of ploughing, the double will depend on the land on the immediate purpose for which the ploughing is intended, but there are a few general rules applicable to all kinds of ploughing which may be laid down here. And first of these is, my choice for the act of lowering the [illegible] for the particular kind of ploughing to be performed. It is surprising how few there are amongst those who call themselves ploughmen who understand them to "suit" a plough, so that it will perform its work to the best manner with the least exertion on the part of the team. Why has not remarked that some teams seem to work harder than others in performing the same work; this is generally attributed to the superior horse-power possessed by the superior horses, or to some teams over others, while in reality it is the superior skill and energy of the "driver" and holding the plough. I have frequently seen a team working harder while ploughing with a furrow of 6 inches than would have been required for a furrow of 8 inches deep with the same plough properly put in order for the work. No one has a right to consider himself even a tolerable ploughman until he is able to tell by a look whether or not his plough is in perfect order.

Whether rules which should merit so little sight, of, is to have the furrows perfectly straight—it is impossible to plough [illegible] make crooked furrows—however, if a thing is not crooked it will be of unequal width, and when [illegible] it yields more parts of the furrow than to be too wide, or too narrow, of many short turnings must be made, all of which circumstances should be avoided, and are incompatible with good ploughing. To prevent this the ridges should be set out straight and of equal width at both ends. There is no trouble whatever for making a crooked furrow if the hand is tolerably clear of stumps and stones. It must in every case be the result of negligence or [illegible] for a want of skill after a reasonable [illegible] all impedes breathing else but these two combined. In order to draw a straight furrow it is necessary to have some object of [illegible] eye steadily fixed on, (I mean the first furrow.) For this purpose set up stakes or poles to the line of the furrow, to be drawn in such a manner that two of them will always be in sight at once; but the ploughman plans himself at one end in such a position that he has at least two stakes in view, and in a line with each other; then proceed towards them keeping his eye on the stakes, at the same time keep the plow perfectly steady, the team will if accustomed to it need very little guiding, but will go straight to the pole of their own accord. The first furrow should be very light, then turn down the back and plough another so close to the one already turned that it will lap completely over it, covering it entirely up, this should also be very thin. The next may be a little deeper but not quite the full depth, the furrows of the second should be still deeper, and the fourth may be the full depth. If the furrow is done perfectly straight and the other furrows are of an equal uniform width there will be no short turnings. In finishing another rule to be observed is to finish all the ridges in going one way.—After the last, or green furrow as it is called, is turned, that is after all the surface has been turned, the next ridge should be furrowed so that there will be no necessity of crossing the field without a furrow in order to take out the [illegible] furrow, that is for the vacant space between the two last furrows; this should always be done, going the same way as the last green furrow. This is seldom attended to but it is of great importance, but any one who doubts it try the experiment and the difference in the appearance of the field will at once be perceived. In order to accomplish all this it is absolutely necessary that the ploughman should not only understand his business but be possessed of energy and industry, and an ambition to excel. A careless slovenly hand will never make a good ploughman, neither will one who thinks he has attained perfection. When we see a man following a plow across a field, as if he had not made up his mind which side of the field he wished to arrive at, and [illegible] for his every deviation from the [illegible] path of rectitude, if he tells you it is in consequence of the untractableness of the team, or the badness of the plow, or that he thinks that is as straight as any one else can plow, we may safely predict that he will never make a ploughman. Some men who are afraid of the plow, to avoid getting an occasional "pinch" in the ribs, keep so far from it that they cannot have the proper control over it. In order to guide a plow with accuracy, it must be held with a firm grasp, not merely touched with the finger; the ploughman should stand or rather walk up between the handles and feel more anxiety about doing his work properly than about saving his own bones.

Do you intend to go to the funeral of your Mr. D——, to-morrow? asked one lady of another at a morning visit.

"Why I cannot exactly say. (App there books engaged?"

"Yes a great number."

"Then I believe I shall go and take the children, for the poor little creatures have had a ride for the last six weeks.

Poetry.

"WHAT THE HAND FINDETH TO DO."

My wife love laid her hand in mine,
Her soft and gentle hand,
'Twas like a wreath of purest snow
Upon the unbrown'd land.

As white it was as snow now fallen,
Like snow without its chill;
And the blue veins meabled it sweetly o'er
But left it snow-like still.

I looked at her hand, so white and soft,
At my own so brown and hard;
"This is for strife and toil," I said,
"And that for love and reward.

"This is to keep the Wolf of Want
Away from the hearth of home;
And that to welcome me tenderly,
When back to that hearth I come.

"This is to labor with tireless nerves,
Perchance at tasks that soil;
And that to greet with a loving clasp
The palm that is rough with toil.

"This is to win through earth and wood
Agony, where way seemed none;
And this to chafe the poor proud limbs
That droop when the goal is won.

"This is to grasp in the world's long fight
The weapons that men must wield;
And this to bind up the aching wounds,
Ta'en on the well-fought field.

"This is to put forth all its strength
In Sunday's rough tasks and strife;
And that to kindle the sweet love-dear
That brighten the march of life.

"For labor, and sweat, and pears is this;
And that to scatter round
The flowers of beauty, and love, and hope
On Home's enchanted ground.

"I would these fingers, for thy sweet sake
Might a giant's strength command,
To toil for and guard thee worthily—
But love will strengthen my hand.

"And if ever its weakness o'ercome its will,
And it fail in its tuilsome part,
The fate that disables my fainting hand,
As surely will still my heart."

A TRIP TO NORWOOD.

BY EUGENE SCRIBE, JR.

I have just been on a rusticating trip, or rather a trip of observation. After rambling through Belmont for a few days and on my return home I had the felicity of seeing the Village considered by its inhabitants the capital of Asphodel. I suppose the reason assigned by them for calling it the capital is from the fact that the county judge in the course of his perambulations has an appointment to call there (I do not know the number of times annually,) for the purpose of putting the dealers in the way of collecting their small debts. The wisdom of their township do their spouting, and make laws for the good government of the people there also. There is an institution, and I might call it a valuable addition, that is the Agricultural Society, which is composed of some of the surrounding townships, hold their annual fair and exhibition here. It was on this day, viz: Tuesday Oct. 9th, 1860, that I first got a glimpse of this rural village. I was informed that there was a population of about 500 in the village, I do not know where they keep them, I do not think there is more than 300. Perhaps in order to swell their numbers they do as the Yankees do, when they want a charter for a city they take the census and if there are not human beings enough they make up the balance with dogs and cats. The first impression a stranger will labor under when he arrives is that the place is composed of Taverns, sausages, and mud-hills. And,—" So help me John Rogers,"—the only conclusion I could come to, after rambling over hills, through swamps, and over fences, (with no slight inconvenience to my vitals) and paying the closest attention, was that there was a large hill on one side, a swamp on the other, and the intervening space was filled up with taverns. Manufacturing is something they know nothing of, for the only sign you will see of it is in the shape of an old rickety flour and saw mill which looks as if the devouring elements had a sweetness on it. I will now endeavor to give you a description of the exhibition, part of the people who attended it. About 2 p.m. the men accompanied by their wives and sisters' children commenced to tumble into town from all directions, and about 12, M., there was really a motley crowd. There were old men and young men, young lads old and young, children, &c., really I must say I never in any small place saw attention so well manifested as here. A stranger especially if he had not seen the commencement of the list of prizes that were to be awarded, would fancy that there were prizes for the best specimens of beauty contest in town. I suppose you have seen Cox arrived from the country that generally attend a circus in town. I have perhaps in the course of my life seen a greater part of the fair sex of this, but really I do not remember to have seen the whole collected. It was most amusing to see the herds of spectators up and down the main thoroughfare of the village, and the shrill tone and bawling in short where it should be. He is a very convenient old gentleman in his way and very fond of flourishing the ceremony and giving the word of command to the weary travellers, many of whom relish it exceedingly. He undertook to give me a description of the Ploughing Match, but before the close of the match I thought I would be the last one present. He only gave me a description of one and thought that was enough for me, as the others were but a repetition thereof. I should think he also remembering the time that Tuesday dawned in the Virginia as the Indian who drew the drawing. Who of that world of fairies who are changing, interesting, and

ARISTOCRATIC "CHRISTIAN" CHURCHES.

We are told in James ii. 1, "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of Glory, with respect of persons." Human nature is prone to what is the above the Apostle warns us against; and we may infer from the frequency of his exposure, and interdiction in the Bible that the detestable failing was prevalent in the Apostles' days. In our day, a profession for Christian worship where gaudy and show is displayed, we are worse than the Pharisees, for in their temples distinctions of rank are unknown for the time being, the Parish standing side by side with the Villeinage, on the ground of God's presence, bestowing equal glory on each of his worshippers.

The Apostle supposes, for illustration, the entrance of two strangers into one of their houses of worship. The garb and the appearance of the one betokens poverty; that of the other rank and opulence. Then he says the man with the gold ring may be sure of all the courtesy and respect within the gift of the congregation; but the salutation to the poor man is "Stand thou there" or "Sit here under my footstool." Human nature is the same in all ages. In one more than enough is riches to compensate for the want of wit or virtue. In the election of officers in a congregation, both as respects Canada and the United States, material qualifications usually outweigh intellectual and moral worth. The choice of a pastor is determined rather by the sweetness of his voice, &c., than the piety of his character. Popularity is the best recommendation of a candidate; and of course the preacher must represent the ideas and spirit of his hearers. He must be a watchman of popular opinion and become all things to all men. His temptation to preach the gospel to the rich is further enhanced by the characters of the trustees, deacons, and elders, who are associated with him.—Financial availability had much to do with their selection also; they, in many instances, owe their elevation to their wealth or respectability. Scott tells us that one of the last things he heard from John Thornton, (a wealthy but zealous servant of Christ) was this:—"Ministers in London sin more at having full congregations than doing them good, and they preach rather for the rich than for the poor. There are two principal mistakes." But had John Thornton lived in our day in America he would have found the same doings in not a few towns and cities in Canada West and the neighboring Republic. And the sin of the door-keeper or custom runs in the same line with that of his superior officers. He is as busy as a Township Assessor in estimating the wealth of his people. He has an almost preternatural discernment between the rich and the poor. Of course he has nothing but appearance to judge by, looking not at the heart but at the gold ring; not at the heart but at the gay clothing. He greets the "honorable" stranger at the door with a smiling subserviency, and conducts him, upon whom the admiring eyes of the worshippers are turned, to an uppermost seat, where he is received with every flattering courtesy by the "honorable" occupants of the seat he is ushered into.

The sexton's self-complacency is now, however, somewhat disturbed by the entrance of another individual, whose humble and unfashionable dress bespeaks for him a very different rank from that of his predecessor. No eye follows him; indeed the "worshippers" are so devoutly reading their bibles that they cannot see any one. And the sexton barring the intruder to a side-seat or to the gallery, or he is left standing alone in the lobby to catch what crumbs may reach him of the "bread of life" uttered by the parson who preaches to the tune of some $1,500 a-year. This is indeed an age of change, and the religious world is full of them. Money has there evermore been the Archimedean Christians who are friends to the rich, but they do not honor the poor. They are careful to honor their beneficiaries upon those whose circumstances justify the honor of record. They add "honorable" friends to their entertainments; they are slow to recognize in public such of their relations even to support themselves by manual labor. Their doors would be closed against JOHN with his rough dress of camel's hair, or PAUL who "degraded" himself by tent-making. They are not likely to be of those who entertain angels unawares. And yet they have the effrontery to regard themselves as Christians, while they disdain to hold fellowship with the "common herd" of mankind, who though better Christians do not worship the Golden Calf.

"Respect of persons" has been a prevalent sin in all ages. The serpent early crawled into the Apostolic Eden. It came in through the exclusive pride of the Israelite, and the caste proclivities of the heathen converts to christianity. It showed itself among them, notwithstanding their brotherhood and profession of the Gospel, which asserts the equality of all men. Rome and High Church priests, very quite light a Republican and British Editors, who hold and maintain this doctrine. But it is with extreme unwillingness, one can the more detest of their class Gregory I.

Aristocratic "Christians" separate saints and Church in their ecclesiastical constitutions. They must worship where their Gods are. They prefer the exclusiveness, the contempt of saints and the costly sacrifices of the simple and spiritual worship of the synagogue. To Cæsar and not Christ they cling.

A young man has much wealthier or higher connexions built up, or he is aspiring after one of gaudy more pretentious churches. In the one case he is ashamed of his humble relations, and in the other he is ashamed of the Church. What kind of a man, in either case, he proposes himself by changing the Religion of the one for the fashionable worship of the other, is a question of character. The question of character is answered in the case of a young man who is ashamed of his humble relations, and who is ashamed of the Church. What kind of a man, in either case he proposes himself by changing the Religion of the one for the fashionable worship of the other, is a question of character. The question of character is answered in the case of a young man who is ashamed of his humble relations, and who is ashamed of the Church. What kind of a man, in either case we find a large and growing family. The parents wish their children to get into genteel society. The mother is anxious about the eligible disposal of her daughters. By and by they see fitting these certificates from the choicest congregations (where they could have been of more use) and connected with other equally desirable and distinguishing "Christians" in erecting a Temple of Fashion as soon. Bethel is deserted for Bethaven. They also must have some respectable House of Worship to go to, and none seems so fitting for them as the one where congregate the greatest number of the genteel worshippers of the "Golden Calf."

What we complain of is the disposition to love and make companions of persons on account of their dress, or wealth, or rank. Are not these things as perishable as the grass of the field? How often do these conceal a contracted mind, an ugly temper and a vicious soul.

If we consult history, Mr. Editor, we will find this same spirit of pride, oppressing and enslaving mankind wherever it had the opportunity. Egypt alone forget her obligations to the Hebrews, (as prosperous nations are very apt to do) and made them slaves. It has always been so; wealth and oppression go together.

If it be asked why the wealthy and the powerful become oppressors, we answer: partly because they have the advantage of opportunity. The tiger who was harmless when caged, resumes his ferocity when let loose. Men are much of their character to the absence of temptation. Hazael would have lived and died with a good character had he not been made King of Israel. Greatness in vice, as well as in virtue, is the product of occasion and predisposition.

There was wisdom in Agur's petition "Give me not riches." The fact is sufficiently evident that the rich as a class are oppressors and persecutors of the poor.—(There are exceptions no doubt, however.) And is point of fact we always find tyranny also accompanying such treatment of men. The oppressor must be an unbeliever.

Aristocratic "Christians" ape the manners, and covet and delight in the Society of such persons as palpably despise the name of Christ, and in whose presence the very mention of a religious subject would be no less a breach of good breeding than an out of social pleasantry and enjoyment.

VERITAS.

Otonabee, April, 1861.

LADIES' DRESSES IN MUDDY WEATHER.

It is an unpleasant sight to see the ladies in the streets on rainy days, allowing their dresses to trail in the mud. This is unpardonable. There is no impropriety in raising the skirt high enough to keep them out of the dirt; there is a very unladylike prudery in refusing to raise them slightly when circumstances requires it. It is not necessary, however, for any lady to hold her dress with her hands to keep it out of the mud. The English women, says an European writer, understand these things better than we, go out walking in rain and mud, wearing long dresses, and without taking their hands from their muffs, come home with their clothing as clearly as when they started out. How do they do it? They wear skirts that do not reach lower than the ankle; short enough, in fact, to keep clear of the mud without any lifting. The loops are a late invention, and are now the fashion in Great Britain. A woman who should go out in muddy weather without them would be considered a prude. A boy was made thus:—There is a belt of black ribbon, three quarters of an inch wide, and long enough to go round the lady's waist, with a hook at one end and an eye at the other, or a fastening; a piece of the same kind of ribbon, three yards long is attached to the end and the middle of the belt. The belt is now put on with the hook and eye in front; and hanging down on each side is a loop of black ribbon, three quarters of a yard long. When the lady is about to go out, she puts on her belt, and puts a part of the lower portions of her dress through each loop, which is then raised into the fastener, and all of it is above the lower edge of the petticoat. She then walks out with her hands free, her dress clean, and her conscience at ease; and if the ribbon to enter a house, she can take her dress out of the loops in an instant. The draped dress is not only clean but graceful, and it shows a white petticoat, one of the most beautiful articles of ladies' apparel, to much advantage. In England, however, white petticoat is not considered indispensable; on the contrary, modest woolen petticoats are much worn by most fashionable people, as they are not prone to stain. Fashionable white cotton stockings are the exception and not the rule, for London wear in winter. Wool is ordinarily worn, sometimes striped, or mixed with black stripes, or plaid with a variety of colours. And then the shoes are not of thin cloth with paper soles, but Balmoral boots, with heavy uppers and thick soles, lacing up in front, so if they were made for boogs of flesh and blood, lived on roast beef, and spent for rent carriage, hard work, sturdy health, and long life. Our European women are too much in the habit of following bad fashions and neglecting good ones. If they will just adopt the healthful provisions, as well as the expensive luxuries of European contrivance, it will be for better, as well as more comfortable by far. We are glad to see something that promises to bring certain of our ladies. Temperate health and comfort more than the fashions, and we may depend upon it that these as they obtain a foothold will supersede many of the present absurdities.—N. Y. Home Journal.

THE LATE MR. HOGAN.

From the Hamilton Spectator.

The new interest excited in the mysterious fate of the unfortunate gentleman, by the discovery of his remains, may possess some circumstantial account of his life, and his unknown acceptable to the public.—The writer can vouch for most of the incidents recorded.

Mr. John Hogan—the Christian having been accepted by him long after the acquaintance of the writer with him, first made his appearance in Hamilton about the year 1832 or 1833. He was then junior and errand-boy for a paper called the Canadian Wesleyan, started to advocate the principles of a lay delegation in the Methodist Conference, and was the organ of a section of that body which had just seceded from the present Conference. In 1833 (early) the writer became a resident in that city and was attracted by the bright appearance of the "canine boy" of the paper, and frequently stopped to chat with him, when he came to leave the paper. He was then but 15 years old, tall and slender, with a bright intelligent face. After a few months of this sort of acquaintance, he applied to the writer for an introduction to the late Honorable John Wilkie with the view of getting promotion in the printing office, which was under the control of that gentleman. He was accordingly introduced, and from the favorable impression he made and the testimony in his favor by the foreman, who was then about leaving, he was substituted in his place, and took over (in 1834) became an editorial contributor to the newspaper. He had meantime changed his religion—having been a Roman Catholic—and became a zealous Methodist, and soon distinguished himself as such in the prayer and class meetings where he became no "exhorter."

When the Canadian Wesleyan was given up that year (1834) or the following Mr. Hogan obtained a salaried position in the law office of Sir Allan McNab, through the intervention of his patron, Mr. Speaker Wilkie, who had articled Attorney's clerk, until Sir Allan's partner, Allan MacNab, obtained the appointment of Sheriff of the Gore District, when he became the book-keeper and Clerk, which position he held until some or three years after the rebellion. At this time, or rather when he entered on the study of the law, Mr. Hogan again changed his religion and became an equally zealous Deist, and devoured with great avidity every work he could lay his hands on, which favored his new faith. Tom Paine's Age of Reason became his vade mecum. This fit of zeal, however, only lasted, as far as external indications went, for two or three years, for he then affected to have become a devoted Churchman.

After his connection with the Sheriff's office ceased, about 1840 or 1841, he again reverted to the study of law, and articled himself to the late George S. Tiffany, Esq., with whom he completed his time as Attorney's Clerk. He made many attempts to pass the Law Society, in order to be entered as a law student, and obtain a Barrister's diploma, but was always (as the writer believes) rejected. His self-esteem and vanity, which counteracted much of the ability and force of character which he possessed, led him into many follies which it is only charitable should not be alluded to, now that his fate has been ascertained. There is one incident growing out of these predominating characteristics, however, which from its notoriety at the time must not be omitted. In one of the last mentioned years, or perhaps still later, Mr. Hogan went on an excursion or expedition to Rochester, the particulars of which are well known to the writer, as Mr. Hogan was accompanied by a near relative of his. The former had been a Reformer the year previous, and while there was introduced to a lady, whose father was a man of fortune. He dazzled that lady by his make-up impressions and what all he had to do was to follow up his adventure in order to win the lady's heart and hand. In order to again funds for this campaign, he represented to a gentleman in the city that he was engaged to be married to the lady—and in doubting reality that the would bring her home with him, and no part of the plan the young gentleman just referred to who invited to accompany him. The parties arrived in due time at the scene of operations, but the result only proved how deceitful appearances may sometimes turn out. A fortnight was sufficient to show the mistake that had been made.

The rejected and his friend, who felt much mortified to find he had been made the dupe of, set out on their return home by the canal route. At Lockport they stayed all night, and the excitement growing out of the arrest and trial of Alexander McLeod for a supposed participation in the destruction of the Caroline was then at its height, in that little but bad, of appearance. Mr. Hogan could not resist the opportunity of at once impressing an object of curiosity, and of raising a phantom of harrowing interest. He quietly pulled out a knife and told his friend that he, McLeod had been engaged in the Caroline affair, (and must secrets as evidence) and felt very unpleasant in treating himself in a place where so much violence appeared to exist. This mild request put the gentleman of the subject into fits of terror to escape, but of course great perplexity and great inconvenience to his companion, who soon succeeded in quietly pacifying Mr. Hogan's fears until the canal boat started, when he was left to his own reflections and imaginations. Reaching Buffalo a dray and passengers discharged all the baggage of the party, and Mr. Hogan's trunk was put on board the steamer which was to convey them to Detroit. Here the gentleman who had been the victim of the practical joke, and who had been the victim of the practical joke, and who had been the victim of the practical joke, and

Baltimore, April 27.

A conference was arranged this morning between the Governor and a committee of the Legislature, to consider the propriety of calling an extra session of the Legislature to provide for the payment of the interest on the State debt, which falls due on the 1st of May next. The Governor declined to call an extra session, but agreed to issue a proclamation convening the Legislature on the 15th of May, when the matter will be taken up. The Governor has issued a proclamation calling upon the people to assist the police in preserving the peace, and has ordered out the militia to be in readiness to march at a moment's notice.

A number of the Union men of Baltimore have left the city, fearing violence. Many of the secession leaders have also left the city, and it is reported that they have gone to Virginia to join the rebel army.

The Farrington and Wantage Bank, owned by Barnes, Medley & Co., also suspended. Liabilities supposed to be small.

ITALY.

In reply to an interpellation in the Chamber on the Roman question, Count Cavour said that the Italian Government could only employ useful means, and cannot act against Rome as a conqueror. He admitted that the solution of the Roman difficulty was bound up in the Roman question, and hoped that the antagonism between Church and State would soon cease. He said the Government would energetically suppress any disturbance in Naples, but the most efficacious means would be taken for the solution of the Roman question.

The Chamber finally adopted the following almost unanimously:—

The Chamber having confidence in the Government, and acknowledging the necessity for the union of Rome to Italy, in accomplishing which, however, the grandeur and independence of the Church and the Pope will be guaranteed, passes to the order of the day.

Count Cavour, in reply to a question, denied the rumors of an intended concession of the Island of Sardinia to France.

Arrests continued to be made in Naples. Persons implicated in recently discovered conspiracies were undergoing searching investigation.

Reactionary attempts were suppressed at numerous places.

Portugal has acknowledged the new Italian Kingdom.

The health of the Pope is unsatisfactory.

There are rumors of an intended Italian loan of $2,000,000 sterling.

AUSTRIA.

The Austrian Diet unanimously passed a vote of thanks to the Emperor for the new law relative to Protestants. Another law published grants to women the right of voting at elections for members of Diet.

A well known correspondent of the Times points out the temptation to intriguing Austrians, and that it is rumored to Austria to unite with the Italian kingdom is consolidated.

A bold attack, with 200,000 men, would soon bring the Austrians to Milan and Turin. A protest must be found, otherwise the French would again cross the Alps.

Austrian agents all over Lombardy are buying up corps of Garibaldians, the price being about £16 each. Once a sufficient number of these corps are bought up, a corresponding number of men can be easily put in red shirts, and be made to attack them. Austria will have a right to retaliate, and an Austrian army will re-enter Italy.

POLAND.

The Journal de St. Petersburg gives the following version of renewed disturbances in Warsaw:—"Great crowds of people having assembled before the Castle, were dispersed by force. The conflict was renewed several times. Ten persons were killed, and in many wounded. Five soldiers were killed. Forty-five persons were arrested."

Other accounts say the number of victims was larger even than stated in the original telegram.

A renewal of the disturbances is expected. The number of troops at Warsaw is 32,000.

Warlike preparations on the largest scale are spoken of, and an expenditure of twenty million pounds sterling is rumored.

THE ENGLISH, WEST OF HALE, CORRESPONDENCE IN THE ANDERSON CASE.

From the London Daily News, April 6

The issuing of the writ of habeas corpus by the Queen's Bench at Westminster in the Canadian Judge has produced the effect in that colony which we anticipated. As matters turned out, the English writ proved useless. But even if it had become necessary to bring over Anderson to this country in order to release him, it is very possible that under the particular circumstances this might have been done, and that the Canadian Judges might have obeyed the writ without remonstrance. It was pointed out in this country at the time, that the jurisdiction claimed, however convenient in the particular case, might prove highly inconvenient under other circumstances. The Canadians evidently claim a quasi independence. They tax themselves, they appoint their own judges, they have their own ministers—and indeed they assume to do everything for themselves except pay for their defence. With these millions of people it is impracticable to adopt coercive measures; and the mother country has granted to them extensive privileges short of final abandonment. Nor are the Canadians diffident about reminding the mother country of their claims, and, if necessary, of vindicating the exercise of them. They did not hesitate to tell the Colonial Secretary, when he objected to their protectionist tariff, that colonial privileges were no business of his. And now we learn from the speech of the Governor General, delivered on the 18th ult. at Quebec, that they hope to be relieved from any interference to the English courts. "My ministers," his Excellency says, "have been directed to the fact that a writ issued by the Court of Queen's Bench in England has been served in the colony. I have been advised to represent to her Majesty's Government the expediency of preventing by legislation in Great Britain any possible conflict of jurisdiction." It is impossible to produce a stronger proof of the determination of the Canadians to assert their legislative and judicial independence. The writ of habeas corpus is a writ which was invented for the protection of the personal liberty of every British subject, and every Canadian, as a British subject, is entitled to it when issued by the judge of any of the superior courts of Westminster. The only reason, therefore, for depriving the Canadians of the right to claim this writ must be, that they are subject to a government which is itself independent. And in truth such is the fact. It is satisfactory, however, to find the Canadian Government so explicit upon the point, and we commend this incident to the attention of the committee now sitting on colonial expenditure.

It is now absolutely clear that the old system of colonial government requires revision. The relation of the mother country to the colonies must be readjusted. Practically, the central Government has no power whatever over the dependencies.—Indeed, these outlying governments are more independent of the Colonial Minister than the States of America are of the Federal Government. In America the several States must submit to have their customs tariff arranged by the Federal Government, besides which each State is bound to contribute a certain quota to the expenses of the Federal Administration, civil and military. So long as the British Colonies were content to be ruled by the Colonial Minister, it was reasonable to say that, as they had no part in imposing the taxes, they ought not to bear any part of the burdens. But the power of self-defence is the first necessity. No child can be deemed fit to be emancipated until he is capable of providing for his own preservation. It is the same with the States. That community which considers itself capable of constitutional self-government impliedly confesses its ability to defend itself, and ought to be dealt with on this principle. It is impossible that men so intelligent and enterprising as the colonists should imagine that they are entitled to all the advantages of belonging to the greatest nation in the world without contributing something towards the cost of the central Government. It cannot be too often repeated that the position which the British colonists occupy towards the mother country is without parallel in history. It is perhaps hardly relevant to mention that in the year 1857 the Dutch colonies, besides defraying all their naval and military expenses, contributed £2,600,000, and the Spanish colonies contributed £1,150,000 to the Imperial Exchequer; whilst the 28 British dependencies, out of a total of very nearly four millions expended upon military defences, did not contribute towards that expenditure four hundred thousand pounds.—But it may be useful to record the fact in order to show that the colonists are by no means likely to rush into the arms of any foreign Government, seeing that, besides foregoing the advantage of being connected with the most powerful government in the world, they would probably be compelled, besides providing for their own defence, to contribute something to their new masters.

The objections commonly made against calling upon the colonies to pay for their own defences are principally two—First, it is said that as the colonies may be exposed to a state of war by the policy of the mother country, the country must bear a large proportion of the expense of the army and navy employed in the colonies. But it is tolerably clear that in the case of war the colonies would be practically free to support or oppose the policy of the mother country, as they might think best. If in the case of any future war it should turn out that a colony disapproved the policy of the House Government and declined to take part in the war, it is certain that the colonists would be left at perfect liberty to follow their own judgment. Suppose the case of a war with the United States, of which Canada disapproved, is it possible to imagine that any force would, or indeed could, be employed by this country in order to compel the Canadians to adopt our policy? If the colonists act in accordance with the war policy of this country, it will be not because they are coerced but because they consider the policy of the mother country the best policy for themselves. But again, it is said that the question is to whether the colonies are to support the troops at their own expense, must be matter of negotiation. Granted; but it is obvious that the party who garrisons the troops is in a very disadvantageous position for negotiating. His course is simple enough. The alternative to be put before the colonists is very plain. "If you want these troops for your defence, you must pay for them; if you do not, or if you decline to pay the required sum, the troops will be withdrawn."

It is to be hoped that this principle will be acted upon. The reductions of the Military and Naval Estimates is an immediate necessity. The disloyal disclosures have shown the possibility of economy. That the re-arrangement of the colonial expenditure opens a new field within which to introduce it. No time should be lost by the Colonial Minister in ascertaining the sentiment of the Canadian Government with respect to the matter of contribution; and the opportunity should not be lost in intimating to that Government, and to the other Colonial Governments of North America that henceforth they must provide for their own defence. This alone would produce a saving of about half a million; nor is there any reason why the actual charge should not be pursued with the other colonies.

The whole of the beds have, at a great expense, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRESSES. SOME DEEM IT BUT A LITTLE THING.

BY S. P. P.

Some deem it but a little thing
To trifle with another's love;
To gain the heart's best offering,
And then to other objects rove;
But it has caused full many a smart,
Which years alone can e'er allay,
And broken many a faithful heart
Which might have thrilled with love to-day.

Some deem it but a little thing
To pass their humbler brother by,
Nor deign to yield the joys that spring
From outstretched hand and friendly eye;
But it has caused—that little deed,—
Full many a scalding tear to roll,
And many an aching heart to bleed,
And untold anguish to the soul.

Some deem it but a little thing
To sever Friendship's sacred chord,
And rudely snap the ties that cling
Around the heart, by some false word:
But it has caused a world of strife
Where love and peace were wont to reign;
And many a year of after life,
Made doubly desolate by pain.

Oh! ye who heretofore have deemed
These trivial things as nothing wrong,
And by your daily acts have seemed
Regardless of the human throng.
Take heed how ye in future deal,
Nor rudely strike Affection's strings;
For wounds that time can never heal
Have sprung from such like little things.
Peterboro, May, 1861.

UP VESUVIUS.

I rose in particularly good time, and proceeded at once to Portici by the first train. The reader must be informed, or reminded, of the existence of a new little railway in this part of the world, that runs along the smiling shore of the Bay of Naples, and connects the capital with the charming watering-place of Castel-a-mare. On this railway, Portici the nearest and most convenient starting point for Vesuvius, is one of the stations; and another station, a few miles further down the line, is the town of Pompeii. The dry bones may hope to live now that Pompeii is become a railway station. Getting out of the carriage at Portici I walked on to the neighbouring village of Resina, and there halted for breakfast.—Most of the Vesuvius guides live here; and while I was cracking my eggs and sipping my coffee, a posse of these worthies were noisily disputing outside for possession of my person. Putting my head out of the window, I presumed to choose my own custodian; beckoned one, who seemed the most intelligent, up to my room, and made an arrangement by which I agreed to give him for the day's services the sum of one piastre [about four shillings], and the customary drink-money. A traveller in Italy, or indeed in any other country, will find his wheels oiled as he passes through it, if he make a point of quietly seconding to the expectations of the people in such little matters.

By 8 a. m., under orders of the guide, I had left Resina, and we were on our way to Mount Vesuvius. The road beyond the village was tolerably easy, until we came to the edge of an extensive bed or stream of hard irregular lava that had found its way out of the volcano in the year 1849. The eruption of that year caused considerable damage to the vineyards, burning them up, and completely destroying the fertility of the ground for some miles around the base of the mountain. The grapes cultivated on these slopes produce an excellent wine called Lacryme Christi; it has some resemblance to Champagne, and fetches a high price. We walked, or rather stumbled, across this sterile tract; and, in about an hour and a half, reached a small hermitage, where visitors can have the pleasure of signing their names in a book, and of being fleeced in the purchase of a box, containing minute fragments of granite, and other equally scarce pieces of stone. There is always something to be bought on a show mountain; on Snowdon they sell worsted stockings.

A little farther on, stands the Royal Observatory. A small company of soldiers are stationed here for the protection of travellers—a precaution by no means needless—against robbers; guides included, for they look upon a traveller a little too much as a bit of booty. Another hard hour's toiling brought us to the base of the cone; for on the upper part of the mountain near its mouth is terraced. Before attempting to ascend this cone—which is by far the steepest and most difficult part of the whole ascent—we hesitated, and laid in a good supply of bread and fruit, and wine, supplied by a man, who followed in our train. I should observe that travellers can ride up to this point on horses or mules; but since I had enjoyed some previous experience in Switzerland, and did not anticipate more difficulty than the mountains in that country at present, I resolved, much against the inclination of my guide, to walk the entire distance. I was not so wise, however, as I thought myself, for I had not made sufficient allowance for the entire Belgian estrangement from the difference in temperature; however, the slighest wetting, the more humble we derived from a delightful fresh breeze that came off the bay, which very much moderated the oppression of the sun. The wind, indeed, could be relied on at places where we laagered for more than one, and true and were glad to run for shelter from the hurricane of some dozen of yards. After reaching these at our own pace, a quarter of an hour, or more, was required to get to the great dish-crop. The evolution way of ascending is by zigzags to right and left; three times during the ascent we were obliged to change the direction of our path, and to take a fresh departure round the cone. We were, however, by this time well up, and within the region of the lapidarious products, and instead of following the beaten path up the loose dust and ashes—grand pile for any scavenger to contemplate—I made my way by the means of broken lava, a little on one side; they were a trifle more steep, and in a minute degree more dangerous, because a fall on the rough corners of lava would produce unpleasant cuts; and a false step might, by a remote chance, lead to a broken neck. A cool head and a firm foot are of service in such places, and it is desirable to avoid looking downward or upward, but simply to keep the eye fixed steadily in front, and wholly occupied in selecting the most convenient places upon which to plant the foot.

At length, after some severe struggling, varied by sundry slips, and an occasional pause for breath, I stood on the true summit of Vesuvius. The surface all around was quite warm, and everywhere intersected by numerous crevices, from which there were escaping little wreaths of smoke.—We first looked for the crater of 1849, and walked round its edge. This interior was encrusted with a coating of sulphur of various shades and tints, which had a peculiar effect when the sun shone on it; a sulphurous vapor issued from the abyss beneath, and enveloped us in its annoying fumes.—We then went to the large and old crater: here the heat of the surrounding surface was considerably greater; so great indeed, as to penetrate through thick-soled boots, and to be intolerable to the naked hand.—At this spot my guide commenced a series of experiments, of a highly interesting and philosophical character; the first of them consisted in thrusting a stick into one of the many crevices or fissures in the earth, and immediately bringing it out in a state of ignition. This was a waste of timber; but the next experiment had a more useful and economic bearing; it was none other than the cooking in one of the said cracks of some eggs, which were produced unexpectedly out of the guide's coat-pocket. These eggs, being then cooked, I ate. I was not hungry; but it is one of the uses of a volcano that eggs may be roasted in its crater, and it would have ill become a traveller, after ascending Mount Vesuvius, to slight whatever efforts the old fellow might make to offer him refreshment and amusement.

Travellers may generally safely descend for some depth into the mouth of the volcano; but at the time of my visit, the suffocating fumes of sulphur were rolling out more copiously than usual, and the guide dissuaded me from a too hazardous attempt. The view, of course, was grand, extending completely over the bay, with the beautiful little towns skirting its edge, including also in the distance the islands of Capri, Ischia, and Procida, and the deeply interesting and classical region of the Bay of Baiæ. Almost immediately under us, to the left, was the railway station of Pompeii. If we turned round to look inland, the country, so far as the eye could scan, was studded with white palaces and houses, which in this pure and clear atmosphere, really continue white all the year round, without the bespattering of whitewash every spring. Vesuvius, though generally represented in prints as a regular truncated cone, is, in reality, a mountain from which rise two distinct cones the one out of whose crater issued the fatal stream that overwhelmed Pompeii and Herculaneum, has long since spent its fury, and becomes quite still. Its companion every now and then, however, gives unequivocal evidence of life.

I remained at the top for about an hour and then made preparations for descending. In proportion as the ascent of the cone is, from its exceedingly abrupt steepness, more difficult than the ascent of almost any other mountain, so is its descent in equal degree more easy. It requires a good hour to reach the top, but less than five minutes are enough to see us to the bottom. The rapidity and ease of the downward motion are really quite surprising; it is a downward flight. The way farer leans back at an angle of fifty degrees, and begins to take enormous strides or plunges. At each step he sinks—deeply into the powdered ashes, so that he cannot lose his footing, or roll over; the only nervousness or apprehension that can be experienced, is derived from a conviction of the utter impossibility of stopping himself until he reaches his journey's end; if in his progress the foot should unluckily be caught against a piece of rock or lava, concealed below the surface, it is probable that he may get through the remainder of descent head foremost. After reaching the bottom I found my garment in some disrepair, but my boots having been made expressly with an eye to this feat, suffered no more injury than a slight baking.

A LION'S LOVE FOR A BLACK TIGRESS.

The Philadelphia North American records the following singular case:—"In our compartment of the cage in which the animals perform at Van Amburgh's beautiful menagerie, in Chesnut street, is a huge young Asiatic lion. His room-mate is a black female tiger. The tiger is small compared to the lion, but is fiercely ridged as a zoological curiosity, and the only specimen of the black tiger in this country. She was purchased by Van Amburgh some two years ago, and has lived with the lion ever since. The attachment between the two is something remarkable. When other animals are in the same cage, and any effort is offered to the little tiger, she runs under the belly of the lion, and uses he to the animal that dares approach her. No matter how hungry he may be, the lion never partakes his share of food, until every one of his little chum has satisfied her claims, and even then he never enjoys it overmuch until certain that she has enough. All the animals are so fat, or pudgy, that the black figures is obliterated in their proportions, and are merely seen for the profile. She has been regularly taken from him, but each time returned to the cage. Last week she was missing, and the lion refused his food and evinced the greatest uneasiness. Search was made in every part of the building, but in vain. Finally it was discovered that she had crawled into a hollow beam which is used as a support for the cage, and had become wedged in so tightly that she could not get out. Her cries were heard by the lion, and he was observed to be greatly excited. He would look up at the beam, and then at the keeper, as if he knew that she was there, and wanted her released. Finally, the beam was sawed in two, and the tiger released. The lion received her with every demonstration of joy, and they are now as happy as ever."

HYDROPHOBIA.

A Saxon herdsman, named Gaudell, now of the venerable age of eighty-two, unwilling to take to the grave with him a secret of so much importance, has made public in a Leipsic Journal the means which he has used for 30 years, and otherwise in silence in his peasant hut, to cure persons bitten by mad dogs. Immediately after the bite Take immediately some chopped or liquid onions, wash the wound about thoroughly, and then dry it; then, upon the wound a few drops of hydrochloric acid, (muriatic acid) diluted with twenty times its quantity of water, and rub the wound with the finger. Gaudell has cured with this remedy the bites of the animal by which under the same circumstances, a Russian was unfortunately killed. The lion instantly fell upon her, and at single blow broke her spine, and crushed upon of her ribs. Careful nursing saved her life, and she is still living, but with her hinder parts immovably paralyzed.

TRUTH.

The following beautiful illustration of the simplicity of truth, is from the pen of S. I. Hammond, editor of the Albany State Register. He was an eye-witness of the scene in one of the higher courts in the State of New York.

A little girl, nine years of age, was offered as a witness against a prisoner, who was on trial for felony committed in her father's house.

"Now, Emily," said the counsel for the prisoner, upon her being offered as a witness, "I desire to know if you understand the nature of an oath?"

"I don't know what you mean," was the simple answer.

"There, your honor," said the counsel addressing the Court, "is there anything further necessary to demonstrate the validity of my objection? This witness ought to be rejected; she does not understand the nature of an oath."

"Let me see," said the Judge. "Come here, my daughter."

Assured by the kind tone and manner of the Judge, the child stepped forward him and looked confidingly in his face, with a calm, clear eye, in a manner so artless and frank, that it went straight to his heart.

"Did you ever take an oath?" inquired the judge. The little girl started back with a look of horror, and the blood mantled to her cheeks and neck as she answered,

"No, sir."

She thought he intended to inquire if she had ever blasphemed.

"I do not mean that," said the Judge, who saw her mistake; "I mean, were you ever a witness before?"

"No, sir; I never was in court before," was the answer.

He handed her a Bible, open. "Do you know that book, my daughter?"

She looked at it, and answered, "Yes sir; it is the Bible."

"Do you ever read it?"

"Yes, sir; every evening."

"Can you tell me what the Bible is?" inquired the Judge.

"It is the word of the great God," she answered.

"Well, place your hand upon this Bible, and listen to what I say; and he repeated slowly and solemnly the oath usually administered to witnesses.

"Now," said the Judge, you have sworn as a witness; will you tell what will befall you if you do not speak the truth?"

"I shall be shut up in the State prison," answered the child.

"Anything else?" asked the Judge.

"I shall never go to Heaven," she replied.

"How do you know this?" asked the Judge.

The child took the book, and turning rapidly to the chapter containing the commandments, pointed to the injunction, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

"I learned that before I could read."

"Has any one talked to you about being a witness in court here against this man," inquired the Judge.

"Yes, sir," she replied. "My mother heard they wanted me to be a witness, and last night she called me to her room and asked me to tell her the commandments; and then we knelt down together, and she prayed that I might understand how wicked it was to bear false witness against my neighbor, and that God would help me, a little child, to tell the truth as it was before Him. And when I came here with father, she kissed me, and told me to remember the ninth commandment, and that God would hear every word I said."

"Do you believe this?" asked the Judge, while a tear glistened in his eye, and his lip quivered with emotion.

"Yes, sir," said the child, with a voice and manner that showed her conviction was perfect.

"God bless you, my child," said the Judge; "you have a good mother. This witness is competent," he continued. "Were I on trial for my life, and innocent of the charge against me, I would pray to God for such a witness as this."

Let her be examined.

She told her story with the simplicity of a child, as she was, but there was a directness about it which carried conviction straight to every heart. She was rigidly cross-examined. The counsel plied her with infinite and ingenious questioning, but she varied from her first statement nothing. The truth as spoken by that child was sublime. Falsehood and perjury had preceded her testimony. The prisoner had introduced himself in line till he deemed himself impregnable. Witnesses had falsified facts in the fever, and villainy had manufactured for him a sham defence; but before her testimony falsehoods were scattered like chaff. The little child, for whom a mother had prayed for strength to be given her to speak the truth as it was before God, broke the cunning defences of matured villainy to pieces like a potter's vessel. The strength prayed for was given her, and the guilty and terrible it rightly—terrible I mean to the prisoner and his associates—rush which she spoke, was like unto a revelation from heaven.

USEFUL MEDICAL HINTS.

If a person swallows any poison whatever or has fallen into any conditions from having overloaded the stomach, an instantaneous remedy is a teaspoonful of common salt used as much ground mustard, stirred rapidly in a teacup of water, warm or cold, and swallowed instantly. It is course down before it begins to come up, bringing with it the contents of the stomach; and last there be any remnant of poison, however small, but the salt and mustard will find it and neutralize it. If it is still in the stomach it quickly dissolves it and it is then absorbed into the blood, and is rendered powerless to throw that matter life or justice can inflict.

LIFE EVERYWHERE.

Under this caption an interesting and instructive article makes its appearance in the Cornhill Magazine. How mysterious the world we live in! How it teems with life! What lessons of creative skill and providential superintendence! But read the article:

Life everywhere! The air is crowded with birds—beautiful, tender, intelligent birds, to whom life is a song and a thrilling ecstasy—the ecstasy of love. The air is swarming with insects—those little animated miracles. The waters are peopled with innumerable forms—from the animalcule, so small that one hundred and fifty millions of them would not weigh a grain, to the whale, so large that it scoops an island as it sleeps upon the waves. The bed of the sea is alive with polypes, corps, star-fishes, and with shell animalcules. The rugged face of the rock is scarred by the silent boring of soft creatures, and blackened with countless muscles, barnacles and limpets.

Life everywhere! On the earth, in the earth, crawling, creeping, burrowing, boring, leaping, running. If the sequestered coolness of the wood tempts us to wander into its checkered shade, we are saluted by the numerous din of insects, the twitter of birds, the scrambling of squirrels, the startled rush of unseen beasts, all telling how populous is this seeming solitude.—If we pause before a tree, or shrub, or plant, our cursory and half-abstracted glance detects a colony of various inhabitants. We pluck a flower, and in its bosom we see many a charming insect busy in its appointed labor. We pick up a fallen leaf and if nothing is visible on it, there is probably the trace of an insect hewn hidden in its tissue, and awaiting their development. The drop of dew upon this leaf will probably contain its animals, under the microscope. The same microscope reveals that the "blood rain" suddenly appearing on bread, and awaking superstitious terrors, is nothing but a collection of minute animals (Monas prodigiosa); and that the vast tracts of snow which are reddened in a single night, owe their color to the marvellous rapidity in reproduction of a minute plant (Protococcus nivalis). The very mold which covers our cheese, our bread, our jam, our ink, and disfigures our damp walls, is nothing but a collection of plants. The many-colored fire which sparkles on the surface of a summer sea at night, as the vessel plows her way, or which drips from the oars in time of jewelled light, is produced by millions of minute animals.

THE BRAIN.

One of the readiest roads to the head is through the lungs. You may reach the brain in a minute with chloroform, for example. The power of this drug is marvellous. When under its influence, a man may have a limb cut off without any sensation whatever; and even when he recovers from the artificial trance, he may still have neither pain nor consciousness. Why? Have you ever seen a person after a fit of epilepsy? After a fit of that kind, people have no remembrance of anything done to them during the fit. During the epileptic paroxysm, the brain is all but completely torpid. The same thing happens after the anæsthetic sleep of chloroform. In neither case can a man remember what he never felt. But mark what may happen after amputation performed on a patient under chloroform. The same man who felt no pain in the stump either during or after the operation, may continue for many successive months to be attacked with the identical head symptoms for which his limb was removed. And more than this—if seized by his old enemy during sleep, he may wake, exclaiming, "O, my leg, my leg! it pains me the same as when it was on!" More curious still, he may tell you he can, so far as his own feelings are concerned, actually move the foot of the amputated limb. What do these facts prove? They prove: 1st. That the brain is the source of all motion and all sensation, morbid or sane; they prove, inversely, 2nd That the brain is the source of rest and remission, sleep included; they further prove, 3rd. That the brain is the source of all paroxysmal recurrence, whether the more prominent symptoms be general or local.—London Medical Practice.

ST. PAUL'S CLOCK.

Have you ever heard of the great clock of St. Paul's in London? At mid-day, in the roar of business, when carriages, and carts, and wagons, and omnibuses, go rattling through the streets, how many never hear that great clock strike unless they live very near it! But when the work of the day is over, and the roar of business has passed away—when cars are gone to sleep, and silence reigns in London—then at twelve, at one, at two, at three, at four, the sound of that clock may be heard for miles around. Twelve!—One!—Two!—Three!—Four! How that clock is heard by many a sleepless man! That clock is just like the conscience of the impenitent man. While he has health and strength, and goes on in the whirl of business, he will not hear his conscience. He drowns and silences its voice by plunging into the world. He will not [illegible] to this. But the day will come when [illegible] to be heard, whether he likes it or not. The time will come when [illegible] care, and gives him time to [illegible]. The time will come when he must reckon with the world, and lie down on the earth and rest from death's labor there. And then the clock of conscience, that solemn clock, will sound in his heart, and, if he has not reconciled with God, will bring remembrance and misery to his soul. Oh, sir! make it down in the pulpits of your heart—without repentance, no peace.—J. T. Rede.

A QUAKER'S RETALLIATION.

In a certain English garrison a sergeant-major questioned some thirty men of mess for disorderliness, five shillings a-piece ensued upon the charges of the other half, and [illegible]

"Pray, friend, what dost thou mean by this note?"

"Mean! Why, it is for the church-rate; don't you see?"

"Yea, friend; what is that for?"

"Why, for the repair of the church, and for the maintenance of public worship to be sure."

"Well, friend, but what have I to do with that? I don't attend thy church?"

"Oh, that don't signify; the church is always open, and it is your own fault if you don't come! Besides, it's the law and you must pay."

"Well, friend, I have leave to tell thee that I think that a very unjust law that obliges me to pay for a ministry and a religion which I do not attend. Fare thee well."

A few days afterwards the barber, by way of strengthening accounts with the parson, sent his reverence a note: "Debtor to Timothy Saltere, for shaving and hair-cutting, five shillings and sixpence." The receipt of this note by the parson very quickly brought him to the shop, in no good humor either.

"What do you mean by sending me this bill? You never cut my hair or shaved me in your life!"

"Nay, friend; but thee knowest my shop is always open, and it is thine own fault if thou dost not come to be shaved."

A BEAUTIFUL REPLY.

A pious old man was one day walking to the sanctuary with a New Testament in his hand, when a friend who met him said:

"Good morning, Mr. Price."

"Ah, good morning," replied he; "I am reading my Father's will as I walk along."

"Well, what has he left you?" said his friend.

"Why he hath bequeathed me an hundred fold more in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting."

This beautiful reply was the means of comforting his Christian friend, who was at the time in sorrowful circumstances.—Bible Record.

One of the native poets of New Zealand thus praises tobacco:—"When all things were created, none was made better than this to be a lone man's companion, a bachelor's friend, a hungry man's food, a sad man's cordial, a wakeful man's sleep, and a chilly man's fire." Tobacco lovers have at last found an advocate! we propose the presentation of a pig-tobacco medal to the wight.

A GOOD JOKE.

A young farmer of Rensselaer county, N. Y., went to Albany on a courting mission, leaving his horse on the street. The horse, after a few hours, was put in the City stable, and the owner, thinking he was stolen, telegraphed to several places a description of the horse, with direction to stop the thief. He afterwards found the animal, and in going through Troy, on his way home, he was arrested on the strength of his own description, for stealing his own horse.

The amount of coal shipped to San Francisco last year from California mines, was about 900 tons, and 80,000 tons were consumed in the State. It is thought the yield of coal from the California mines the present year will be over 200,000 tons.

The common elder bush of our country, the great safeguard against the devastations of insects. If any one will notice, it will be found that insects never touch the elder. The leaves of the elder, scattered over cabbages, cucumbers, squashes, and other plants subject to the ravages of insects, effectually shield them.

LATEST from EUROPE.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The House of Commons, on Monday, April 15, having resolved itself into a Committee of Ways and Means, the Chancellor of the Exchequer made his financial statement. He prefaced it by observing that the retrospect was unfavorable. He then proceeded to give an estimate of the finances for the year 1861 62.

The total expenditure for the year he estimated at £69,900,000. The revenue, including the duplication of the duties on chicory, certain alterations and modifications of the stamp duties, and the duties on licenses, and £70,000 he expected to receive from China, he estimated at £71,823,000, assuming the continuance of the tea and sugar duties, and an income tax. Comparing it with the estimated expenditure of £69,900,000 there would appear an estimated surplus of £1,923,000, and he then stated how the Government proposed to dispose of the balance. The Government could not be expected to keep in hand this balance, and they proposed to apply a portion to the remission of taxation by the reduction of the tenth penny of the income tax, and the repeal of the paper duty. He would not altogether abandon the hope of getting rid of the income tax altogether, but he considered this a question of expenditure. The remission of one penny of the income tax, reducing the 10d to 9d, and the 7d to 6d would cost for three-quarters of a year £850,000. With respect to the paper duty, the Government believed that this proposal would receive the approval of the Committee. The financial result for the year would be as follows: the balance of revenue would be £1,023,000; the 11d takes off the income tax would reduce the amount of the tax to £950,000; the repeal of the paper duty would occasion a net loss in the year of £665,000, making together £1,615,000. So that there would still remain a moderate surplus of £108,000.—He proposed to reduce the tea and sugar duties for one year, and he explained the form of proceeding by which it was intended to bring the several questions before the House by a series of resolutions, one as the income tax, another for the continuance of the tea and sugar duties, and a third for the repeal of the paper duty. Mr. Gladstone then placed the first resolution in the hands of the Chairman.

The budget shows the expenditure of the past year to be over £80,000 less than estimated. The expenditure of next year is estimated at £69,900,000, and the receipts at £71,823,000.

The tax on incomes over £150 is to be reduced from 10 to 9 pence. The paper duty is to be repealed from the 1st October next. The duty on foreign chicory is to be doubled. The tea and sugar duties are re-enacted for another year. The other provisions are unimportant.

American news is anxiously looked for.

The London Times editorially reiterates hopes for the maintenance of peace, and thinks it is still possible that the warlike intention of President Lincoln may not be carried out into civil war. One of its articles concludes as follows:—

"We would rather hope that the good sense of the Americans and the peaceful counsels of this country may bring about a reconciliation before the dispute has been too far carried. As long as the two sections of the Union refrain from hostilities it would be the height of arrogance and folly to interfere, but when the soil and seas of the New World are likely to be stained with blood, foreign nations may surely remonstrate in the cause of humanity."

ITALY.

President Rotazzi of the Lower House of the Italian Parliament read, at the opening of the sitting on the 15th, ult., the following letter of Gen. Garibaldi. This letter, it is said, was written at the suggestion of the Deputy Mauro Macchi, a Lombard friend of the Central, and belonging to the extreme Left. It was received by the Chamber with silent attention, and made, if one may judge from appearance, an unfavorable impression. The very galleries remained cold and did not applaud:

"Bigoor Presidente:—Some words of mine, malignantly interpreted, have given rise to the supposition that I harbored ideas hostile to the Parliament and the person of the King. My devotion to and fine duship for Victor Emanuel are proverbial in Italy. My conscience forbids my stooping to self justification. As to the National Parliament, my whole life dedicated to the independence and freedom of the country equally dispenses me from descending to exculpate myself from any irreverence towards the majestic assembly of a free people called together to reconstitute Italy, and to secure for her a worthy place beside the greatest nations of the world.

"The deplorable state of Southern Italy, and the abandonment in which my brave companions in arms are left, have indeed roused my indignation towards those who were the cause of so many disorders and of so great an injustice. I, however, bow before the holy, national cause, and, spurn any personal consideration, that I may consecrate myself exclusively and indefatigably to the said cause. To contribute, as far as I may be able, to this great end, I humbly remind of the right of initiative belonging to Parliament, and send you a bill for the national armament, and beg you to communicate it to the Chamber, agreeable to the rules of the House. I therefore hope that all parties in the Chamber will agree with the declaration of meeting all expenditure demanded, and that the Italian Parliament will take all the means at its authority to hear upon the Roman affairs of those measures which will most efficiently contribute to the safety of the country."

G. GARIBALDI.

The Diritto publishes a letter from Garibaldi, addressed to M. Bertani, the celebrated Hungarian refugee now residing in Switzerland, in which he says:

"The emancipation of the serfs in Russia has been recently saluted by Europe with thankfulness. This deed has placed the Czar among the most illustrious benefactors of humanity. But now that the work of goodness has been stained by the blood of an innocent people, it is the duty of those who applauded the generous act of emancipation to raise the voice of indignation against the contemptible cause of the most detestable of crimes."

The Official Gazette of Naples contains a decree ordering the formation of a reserve [illegible] in the provinces of Naples, in which Gen. Garibaldi's officers will hold rank.

GARIBALDI ON AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. Edwin C. Ball has received an autograph letter from Garibaldi, which we are permitted to translate:

Genoa, April 3, 1861.

"Mr. Edwin Ball,—It is indeed painful to my heart to observe that while the Italians are using every endeavor to reunite themselves, the Americans, hitherto united, are now working equally hard to separate. Try to avoid it. Your great people, like those of Europe, ought to understand that its mission is to form one great family from the North to the South. Do so, and you will be blessed both by men and God.

Yours,

G. GARIBALDI.

The screw steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Petrie, from Liverpool at 10.30 on the morning of the 28th, and Queenstown on the afternoon of the 29th ult., arrived here this morning.

A prospectus has been issued at Liverpool, with influential support, for a company to run steamers direct from Liverpool to New Orleans.

Another company is to be formed for Charleston.

The latter starts their first steamer in July.

The House of Commons rejected Berkeley's annual motion in favour of the ballot by 125 majority.

The French fleet is ordered to be fitted out to convey French troops home from Syria. A commercial treaty between France and Belgium is reported signed. Prince Napoleon, at the instance of family council, has abandoned his intention of going to England to seek satisfaction from Duc D'Aumale.

The Italian Chambers agreed, by a large majority, to consider Garibaldi's project for arming the country.

The correspondence between Cialdini and Garibaldi has been published. Cialdini reiterated the friendship, but objected to Garibaldi's last act. Garibaldi characteristically defends his position.

The Independence Belge states decidedly that negotiations between Paris and Turin for opening Rome to the Italians appear such a favourable conclusion.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

By CORNELIUS SNIDER, Esq., of Vaughan, C. W.

PAPER XV.

There is a good deal of difference of opinion even amongst good farmers, in regard to the best time to plow for the different crops. Some argue in favor of Fall ploughing stubble land for spring crops, and also for summer fallow whether it be stubble or grass land; others prefer Spring ploughing for all purposes; while others still prefer both Fall and Spring ploughing for Spring crops. There is no doubt but that the nature of the soil should be an important consideration in forming an opinion on this subject. Heavy clay soils, if ploughed and subjected to the Fall and Spring rains, will become baked, and unfit for the reception of seed; yet I am of opinion that on no other description of land is Fall ploughing of so much importance, from the fact that the frosts of the winter have a powerful influence in disintegrating and pulverizing them. On what is called Hazelnut soils I think it is not of much importance, so far as the advantages to the soil are concerned; but on loam, and all light soils, Fall ploughing is decidedly to be preferred, as they are thereby rendered more compact, and withstand the drought better. It will be understood that in these remarks I refer to land intended for Spring crops. For Summer fallow I have found it not quicker when ploughed as early in Spring as the ground would admit of. I have observed a number of fields of which a portion had been ploughed late in the Fall and the remainder early in Spring, and have invariably found the Spring-plowed part the best rotted at the time of cross-plowing in June. But there are other considerations of importance in favor of Fall plowing in all cases where practicable first. The shortness of the time the land is in a working condition between winter and seed-time prevents the possibility of a great amount of plowing being done. It is seldom that stubble land is in a state for working until the second week in April, and as all grain crops should be sown by the first of May the time is too short with the ordinary help of the farmer to plow the land for, and harrow in the seed. So that if all was left until that time, it would not only be hurriedly done, but sowing would be delayed so long as to endanger the safety of the crop. Another great advantage generally overlooked is that a much greater quantity of soil is turned over in proportion to the depth of the furrow. When the land is dry and compact a furrow 6 inches deep will turn more soil than the one 8 inches deep when the ground is upheaved by the expansion of frost and the absorption of moisture.

In view of all the facts I think it safest to plow all that can be done in Fall, commencing with that intended for Spring crops and finishing with that intended for next year's fallow. Thus in Spring I would replow as much as the time would admit of, taking care not to go quite so deep as the fall furrow, so that stubble, grass, &c., might not be disturbed, so they would not be sufficiently rotted. Summer fallow should not be cross plowed until the inverted sod is completely rotted. But it sometimes happens that from want of sufficient help we are compelled to take other circumstances into consideration, and to plow at such time as it can be accomplished although it may not be precisely when the land is in the best condition.

In Britain it is considered of the greatest importance that the furrow should be set up in a certain shape, nearly on edge, with a sharp angle or corner pointing upwards. For this purpose they use very long plows, the object being to crack or break the furrow. Slice as little as possible but leave it perfectly smooth; it is considered one of the main points in good plowing to set up the furrow at the proper angle. I have often inquired the reasons for this practice, but could never obtain a satisfactory answer. One reason given is that it assists in covering the seed; but if the land is harrowed smooth before sowing, so I think it should be, then I do not see how the shape of the furrow can effect it. Another reason given is that it prevents baking with the winter rains; in a climate like that of Britain, and on heavy clay soils this may be a good reason, but in all such cases land should receive a light plowing in Spring to break up the crust, but we will speak of this matter again when on the subject of sowing and harrowing.

To give my opinion in a few words of what constitutes good plowing. It should be straight and deep on most soils; not less than 6 inches, or if 10 all the better; the furrow should be laid quite flat or as nearly so as possible, so as to cover up all curious vegetation, and as the main object of all plowing is to pulverize the soil, I cannot perceive the advantage of turning the furrow without breaking it on the contrary the more it is broken in turning the better.

$100 A YEAR

AND UPWARDS SAVED to the Farmers, Millers and Mowers by the

CHOP GRINDER.

This Machine has just been patented, and has great advantages over any other for the same purpose, now known or in use. It is so simple that any farmer can use it, and it requires but a small amount of power to drive it, two horse power being sufficient; with this amount of power of any kind, it will grind from 10 to 30 bushels of Oats per hour. The grain is ground or rather cut by case-hard cutters, which can be fitted into the Machine, that they can easily be taken out and repaired at a trifling cost.

All sorts of Grain can be ground whether wet or dry, by altering or adjusting the Machine.

Peterboro', April 5, 1861.

M. Mowry,

Dear Sir,—I have used your Chop Grinder two seasons in my mill, grinding corn, oats, and peas, to the amount of eight or ten thousand bushels. I have not had any difficulty with the machine, one of my labouring men attending to it. I cheerfully recommend your Grinders as the best I know of, and that my Grinder has given me every satisfaction.

Yours respectfully,
S. DICKSON.

The inventor, Alden Mowry, will sell to any one desiring it, the right to manufacture and sell the Machine in any limited locality.

Address, "Alden Mowry, Peterboro', C. W."

To meet the extensive patronage, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed in the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many improvements and convenances hitherto unknown to its guests. The whole of the beds have, at a great expence, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada

Poetry.

ONE HOUR OF YOUTH.

Oh! for one hour of childhood's wilds and joy,
Where long ago I wandered a merry little maid,
With eye as bright, and step as light, and heart
from sorrow free,
Oh! youth, no after years repay for one hour spent in thee.

Give back to me one sweet hour within the sunny glen,
Not with the friends who love me now, but those who loved me then;
We'd cast aside a little while the gathered care of years,
And each forget the grief which makes this world "a vale of tears."

Oh! once again to roam the hills, where flowers we used to gather,
Where happy hours we spent in twining wreaths of purple heather,
The gleesome songs we used to sing with shouts of mirth between,
And not the least of all our joys the dance upon the green.

Give back, give back the kindly hearts I knew in joyous youth,
The honest faces where were read sincerity and truth,
The silent clasp of friendly hands, when loving glances met,
And tongues refused to tell the tale, that eyes would ne'er forget.

Give back, give back—nay wake me not, in fancy I am free,
If 'tis but to dream such pleasure given, and adds no one to thee,
What matters it my earnest cry is uttered all in vain,
Still let me live in memory one hour of youth again.

Ah! no, the chord is touched that brings to me a change of scene,
Fled are the visions of the past as if they ne'er had been,
But a halo of their happiness still lingers o'er me yet,
As if the joys of that brief hour I never could forget.

The pleasures of maturer life surround me once again,
But unlike those of sunny youth, they're mixed with much of pain;
I yet can laugh, and sing, and look in love and friendship's rays,
But oh! it thrills not to my heart like that of other days.

Then farewell scenes of childhood, I ne'er may see thee more,
For long I've known a foreign home upon a foreign shore;
I'll give my t oughts to future years, by cheerful duty led—
To future deeds of usefulness, and leave thee with the dead.

"Poor Richard's" Maxims.

Looking over an old magazine, a short time since, which was published in 1758, our eyes fell upon the following article, reprinted from an American Almanac of the preceding year. We are happy indeed to meet again with the admired productions of the illustrious statesman and philosopher—Benjamin Franklin, whose works and wisdom did so much in establishing our ancestors in habits of industry and independence; and we feel assured our readers will derive an equal satisfaction and benefit from its perusal; many of whom, in all probability, will have now seen this quaint old series of useful maxims for the first time.

Courteous Reader: I have heard that nothing gives an author so great pleasure, as to find his works respectfully quoted by other learned authors. This pleasure I have seldom enjoyed; for though I have been, if I may say it without vanity, an eminent author (of Almanacs) annually now a full quarter of a century, my brother authors in the same way, for what reason I know not, have ever been very sparing in their applauses; and no other author has taken the least notice of me, so that, did not my writings produce me some solid pudding, the great deficiency of praise would have quite discouraged me.

I concluded at length, that the people were the best judges of my merit, for they buy my works; and, beside, in my rambles, where I am not personally known, I have frequently heard one or other of my adages repeated, with "as poor Richard says," at the end on't. This gave me some satisfaction, as it showed not only that my instructions were regarded, but discovered likewise some respect for my authority; and, I own, that to encourage the practice of remembering and repeating those wise sentences, I have sometimes quoted myself with great gravity.

Judge, then, how much I must have been gratified by an incident I am going to relate to you. I stopped my horse, lately, where a great number of people were collected at a vendue of merchant's goods. The hour of sale not being come, they were conversing on the badness of the times, and one of the company called to a plain, clean old man, with white locks—"Pray, father Abraham, what think you of the times? Won't these heavy taxes quite ruin the country? How shall we be able to pay them? What would you advise us to do?" Father Abraham stood up, and replied, "If you would hear my advice, I'll give it you in short, for one word is enough, and many words won't fill a bushel," as poor Richard says. "Pray stand up, friend," said he, "and tell us your mind." Then he proceeded:

"Friends, the taxes are indeed very heavy, and if those laid on by the government were the only ones we had to pay, we might more easily discharge them; but we have many others, and much greater, three times as many as we have government taxes. And the worst of all is, that we have them all of our own laying. Pay these, and you may expect good times, for, as poor Richard says,

'Lost time is never found again, and what we call time enough, always proves little enough.' Let us then up and be doing, and doing to the purpose, so by diligence shall we do more with less perplexity. 'Sloth makes all things difficult, but industry all easy,' as poor Richard says; and 'He that riseth late, must trot all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night. While laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him,' as we read in poor Richard, who adds, 'Drive thy business, let not that drive thee;' and 'early to bed, and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise.'

"So what signifies wishing and hoping for better times? We can make these times better if we bestir ourselves. 'Industry need not wish,' as poor Richard says, 'and he that lives upon hope will die fasting. There are no gains without pains; then help hands, for I have no hands,' or if I have they are smartly taxed. And, as poor Richard likewise observes, 'He that hath a trade hath an estate, and he that hath a calling hath an office of profit and honor;' but then the trade must be worked at, and the calling well followed, or neither the estate nor the office will enable us to pay our taxes. If we are industrious we shall never starve; for, as poor Richard says, 'At the working man's house hunger looks in, but dares not enter.' Nor will the bailiff or the constable enter, for 'Industry pays debts, while despair increaseth them,' says poor Richard. What though you have found no treasure nor has any rich relation left you a legacy, 'Diligence is the mother of good luck,' as poor Richard says, 'and God giveth all things to industry. Then plow deep, while sluggards sleep, and you shall have corn to sell and to keep,' says poor Richard. Work while it is called to-day, for you know not how you may be hindered to-morrow, which makes poor Richard say, 'One to-day is worth two to-morrows;' and, further, 'Have you somewhat to do to-morrow, do it to-day.' If you were a servant, would you not be ashamed that a good master should catch you idle? Are you, then your own master, be ashamed to catch yourself idle,' as poor Richard says. When there is so much to be done for yourself, your family, your country, and your gracious king, be up by peep of day; 'Let not the sun look down and say, inglorious here he lies.' Handle your tools without mittens; remember that 'the cat in gloves catches no mice,' as poor Richard says. 'Tis true there is much to be done, and perhaps you are weak handed, but stick to it steadily, and you will see great effects, for 'constant dropping wears away stones, and by diligence and patience the mouse eat into the cable;' and little strokes fell great oaks,' as poor Richard says in his Almanac, the year I was not just now remember.

"Methinks I hear some of you say, 'must a man afford himself no leisure?' I will tell thee, friends, what poor Richard says, 'Employ thy time well if thou meanest to gain leisure; and, since thou art not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour.' Leisure is time for doing something useful; this leisure the diligent man will obtain, but the lazy man never; so that, as poor Richard says, 'A life of leisure and a life of laziness are two things.' Do you imagine that sloth will afford you more comfort than labor? No; for, as poor Richard says, 'Trouble springs from idleness, and grievous toil from needless ease. Many without labor would live by their wits only, but they break for want of stock.' Whereas, industry gives comfort, and plenty, and respect; 'Fly pleasures and they'll follow you.' The diligent spinner has a large shift; and 'now I have a sheep and a cow, every body bids me good morrow;' all of which is well said by poor Richard.

"But with our industry, we must likewise be steady, settled, and careful, and oversee our own affairs with our own eyes, and not trust too much to others; for, as poor Richard says,

"'I never saw an oft removed tree,
Nor yet an oft removed family,
That throve so well as those that settled be.'

And again, 'Three removes are as bad as a fire;' and again, 'Keep thy shop, and thy shop will keep thee;' and again, 'If you would have your business done, go; if not send.' And again,

"'He that by the plow would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive.'

And again, 'The eye of a master will do more work than both his hands;' and again, 'Want of care does us more damage than want of knowledge;' and again, 'Not to oversee workmen, is to leave them your purse open.' Trusting too much to others' care is the ruin of many; for, as the Almanac says, 'In the affairs of this world, men are saved, not by faith, but by the want of it;' but a man's own care is profitable; for, mind your business,' as poor Richard says, 'and not depend on friends; what you have to do, keep your eye always on, else your servants or your neighbors will shame you.'

The American Revolution.

New York, May 8.

[illegible] Washington dispatch says that a skirmish fully equal to Bull Run occurred on Thursday last, at Fairfax Court House, between the Federal and Confederate troops. The Federals were repulsed with great loss. Col. Ellsworth, of the Fire Zouaves, was killed while tearing down the secession flag from the top of the Marshall House. Col. Corcoran, of the 69th regiment, was captured, and is now in Richmond.

A gentleman from Alexandria, Va., arrived in St. Louis, reports that Alexandria had been occupied with a regiment of the most picturesque, Ohio rowdies, dressed, and armed in a manner that defied description. They were encamped on the heights of Fairfax, and were to be increased by the arrival of 7,000 Zouaves.

From correspondence of newly-enlisted men from Cadiz, Ohio, to their friends, it appears that the Virginians behind the Potomac, and were engaged in fortifying them. A number of skirmishes occurred, resulting as follows: Ohio, 6,000, were there

SECOND DESPATCH.

New York, May 12.

The Great Eastern left Milford Haven on the evening of the 1st inst. She made the entire passage in nine days and thirteen hours. She encountered a heavy gale on the 5th, during which she rolled heavily, though no seas went over her.

In the House of Lords on the 30th, Lord Woodhouse stated, in reply to a question, that the Government recognized no right or obligation to interfere in the conflict unhappily commenced in America, either diplomatically or otherwise.

The English papers continue to discuss American affairs. The entire London press, except the Times, is sympathizing warmly with the loyal States, and anticipating an early triumph for the Government. The Times fears serious conflicts if the North are determined to force obedience.

The Emperor of Morocco recognizes the Kingdom of Italy.

Turkey has proposed that a thousand French soldiers remain in Italy until the reforms decided upon by the European Commission are carried out.

The young men of Pavia have honored Garibaldi with an ovation in consequence of the refusal of the congregation of Venetia to elect members of the Council of the Empire.

The Government is about to proceed to a public examination of elections in some communities and deliver certificates to persons who are elected.

The President of the Court of Appeal, at Modlin, Poland, has declared all persons who were arrested during the late events not guilty.

Nearly a hundred inhabitants of Perth were present at the funeral of the late President, Pulvegy. All the houses were draped in black. National songs were sung, and patriotic speeches made, but there was no disturbance.

The elections in Portugal resulted in the choice of 64 Ministerialists and 16 Oppositionists.

Rentes closed at Paris on the 30th at 68f 75c, or ten centimes higher than on the previous day.

The Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands has issued a proclamation, declaring that the country shall be placed in a state of seige if disturbances continue.

Captain Thompson, formerly of the Glasgow, commands the Great Eastern.

BRITISH POLICY.

On Wednesday evening, April 17th, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress gave a sumptuous State banquet to Viscount Palmerston and Her Majesty's Ministers at the Mansion-House. The Egyptian Hall, which has recently been entirely renovated and embellished with additional statuary, was tastefully ornamented for the occasion.

Lord Palmerston, in responding to the toast, "The health of Her Majesty's Ministers," said: "It is satisfactory to those who stand in the position which we occupy to be able to congratulate you, as I think we may, upon the internal condition of the country. (Cheers.) After seasons the most inclement, which in former times might have produced either a famine or a financial crisis, my right hon. friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer—(cheers)—has been able to propose to Parliament and the country a surplus of revenue over expenditure, which has enabled him to propose a large remission of the burdens of the people—(cheers)—without diminishing in the slightest degree those military and naval means of defence to have diminished which, in the State in which the world now is, would have been a betrayal of the trust which has been confided to us. (Cheers.) But I say it is a great proof of the solidity of the resources of the country—of the productive nature of the national industry, that in spite of all those unfortunate circumstances of climate, and notwithstanding the large reductions which were made last year, the Chancellor of the Exchequer has been able to present to the nation so favorable a prospect as that which he no longer than two days ago submitted. (Cheers.) This is most encouraging, not simply with a view to our internal condition, but also with regard to our external relations.—(Cheers.) The function of England is to endeavor by the influence which she justly possesses to maintain the peace of the world. (Cheers.) She has no ambitious object, she has no aggressive policy, she has no warlike preparation. (Cheers.) We wish not only to enjoy ourselves the blessings of peace, but we wish, by the legitimate exercise of our influence on other countries, to secure for the rest of the world that blessing which we prize so highly ourselves. (Cheers.) I need not, I am sure, remark that the influence which a country can exercise by its sage and prudent counsels with others must necessarily depend upon its own internal and defensive strength; and that unless a nation is able to boast that she is secure from any foreign attack—that she is in a position to repel hostility, come from what quarter it may—her counsels must bear the appearance of timidity; she would seem to be discouraging war, because afraid of its recoil on herself, and her persuasions, therefore, would proportionally have less influence and weight. My Lord Mayor and gentlemen, the state of the world at present is such that the peaceful influence of this country may perhaps be as well exercised as at any former time. There are questions pending in different parts of the continent which, if judiciously managed use of by those who wish to obtain the power of the world, might furnish an honorable and honor respectable term. (A laugh.) Not one of these questions is such that it might not be amicably and honorably settled without any appeal to arms—(cheers) and I trust that the wisdom, the good sense, and good feeling of the rulers of the different end of the feature of parties may lead to that happy conclusion. (Cheers.) I trust that the clouds which now hover over some parts of the Continent may be dissipated and dispersed. I trust, at all events, that the glorious consummation of the unity of Italy may be accomplished without any check or hindrance. (Cheers.) There is no event to which I am sure, the feelings and wishes of the people of this country point with greater intensity than the accomplishment of that object. (Cheers.) Well, gentlemen, I can only say that the influence of England, as exercised by Her Majesty's Government, will be directed to the maintenance of peace; and, whatever may be the aspect of affairs in some quarters of the world, I still trust that the year 1861 may pass over us a year of peace, and that the apprehensions which at one time were entertained that the spring and summer of this year would be distracted by the clang of arms and stained by the effusion of blood, may be disappointed, and that we shall arrive at the termination of the year with that happiness which peace confers and enjoying that prosperity which security for industry must afford." (Loud cheers.)

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in replying to the toast "The House of Commons," said: "My Lord, I apprehend that each civilized nation has its own functions to fulfil, and we, who rejoice in our own national traditions, may have much to learn from others. But something has been reserved to England to do in behalf of others, and I trust that at this time of day we may say that England has done something for the world in offering to it the pattern of a popular legislative assembly. That problem which has been so difficult in all times to solve—the means of bringing a free representation of the wishes and inspirings of the community at large into harmony with fixed laws, and with ancient and monarchical institutions—that problem has happily reached its solution among us; and never was there a time when, and on the British Constitution is, it might truly be said that it possessed more of the strength and vigor of youth. (Cheers.) It is with no slight satisfaction that other nations, as they enter upon the path of freedom, seem to make it the first condition of progress in that career that they should attempt to create for themselves what resembles the House of Commons—(cheers)—and among the distinguished men who sit at his table, and who act at the Court of the Queen as the representatives of foreign sovereigns, I rejoice to think how many there are in those countries we have seen grow, within the memory of man, institutions in which the spirit of the nation is reproduced, and in which, so far from that representative proving to be source of danger to permanent and fixed authority, it has been discovered that it is the real security of the person and of national growth and vigor." (Cheers.)

—In Europe, rumors of wars compose the chief staple of the news. Poland is dissatisfied. Hungary meanses insurrection; while Italy, evidently, is looking forward to the establishing of her capital at Rome, and to the freeing of Venetia.—Drilling, arming, and the manufacture of rifled muskets and rifled cannon, seem to be the chief business of the year 1861.

—A mayor in the department of the Deux Sevres, named Gille, has been sentenced to six years imprisonment for fraudulently putting the government mark upon thirty-four trees in the state forest of Aulney, in order that he might cut them down for his own benefit as being included in a contract which he had made with the state.

GROWTH OF THE TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN.

The following branch of statistical information, relating to the commerce of England dates so far back as the year 1699, when the imports were only to the value of £2,890,195, and the exports £6,552,651, and from whence the trade has increased to what it was, exclusive of the trade with Ireland, in the year 1760, when the imports were £8,845,000, and the exports £14,693,703. From that date to the year 1795, the growth of British commerce was in an increased ratio, and it then included imports of £20,409,183, and exports of £22,220,710. In the subsequent 5 years the progress was still greater, but it was only in 1826 that the exports exceeded 40 millions sterling, the total for that year being £40,165,479 and it was even as late as the year 1846 that the imports reached that amount, it being £40,648,000, against imports of £110,484,997. Thus showing that whereas the foreign trade had increased say £8,000,000 in five years, or say £50,000,000 in thirteen years, the increase in the exports was respectively £44,000,000, and £100,000,000. In 1859 the imports were £117,402,236, and the exports £236,836,396. —English Paper.

A BROWING DOG.

A correspondent of the American Agriculturist at Union Springs, Ind., relates a "[illegible] story" of a dog of that place. A large number of sheep had been killed in the neighborhood, and an apparently worthless cur, kept at a grocery, was suspected of the crime, though for a long time no proof could be brought against him. But "murder will out," and one day a farmer and his neighbor saw the dog besmeared with blood, in the act of tearing a sheep which was still alive. As soon as the dog saw he was discovered, he ran to a wood lot about fifty rods north of the spot, and the men at once proceeded to the grocery, which stood half a mile distant in a southwest direction, to inform the owner. To their surprise, on entering the store, they saw there the very animal they had come to complain of, lying on the floor, apparently asleep, as though nothing had happened, and as though just worked—But on examination found him very warm, and very wet, he having undoubtedly washed himself in a hurry, and run for life to his master. But the evidence was too strong against him. Pity that a dog of such intelligence could not have met a better fate.

JUDSON'S
Mountain Herb Pills.

ABYE, we present you with a perfect Heaven of Health, a chief of a tribe of the strange Aztec Nation, that once ruled Mexico. You will find a full account of him and his people in our Pamphlet. Here we introduce to be but gratis, from the Agents for these Pills.

The inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in traveling, having visited nearly every country in the world. He spent over six years among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was then that the "Montain Herb Pills" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once introduced to every organ of the body. Every device feels the poison, and all the vital organs of the body complain. The stomach will get deeper the good positively. The liver ceases to prepare a healthy bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence, a cough, all from a single cause, the impure and unhealthy blood of the blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring from which run a tiny rivulet, in a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes dirtied and discolored. As quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lungs of its sons dies out.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the membranes of the body; they are, therefore, unrivaled as a

Persons indeed, in 6 to 10, that are able to place within your reach, a medicine like this "Mountain Herb Pills," that will pass directly to the diseased parts, through the blood, and thus remove the cause, and restore the sufferer to health with the feeling of beauty and happiness.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, in which we have labored to produce the most effectual alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must possess of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proved by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:—

SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, ERUPTIONS AND ERUPTIVE DISEASES, ULCERS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TUMORS, SALT RHEUM, SCALD HEAD, SYPHILIS AND SYPHILITIC AFFECTIONS, MERCURIAL DISEASE, DROPSY, NEURALGIA OR TIC DOULOUREUX, DEBILITY, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION, ST. VITUS'S DANCE, OR ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE, AND indeed the whole class of complaints arising from IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can, by the aid of this remedy, spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; or else it when you find it is obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep it pure, and the health of it is full, people order better health, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and all is well; and nothing but pabulum of life should ever pass or be in it. Where any thing is wrong, and the great machinery of life is disordered or overthrown.

Sarsaparilla has, and deserves much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the full virtue alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be sarsaparilla or extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no curative properties whatever. Hence, bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistible by the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

has won for itself such a reputation for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidences of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we will do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their ways all it has ever been found to do.

NERVOUS DISORDERS.

What is more fearful than the breaking down of the nervous system? To be unstable or nervous in a small degree is most distressing, for where can a remedy be found? There is one—drink but little wine, beer, or spirits, or for better none; take no coffee,—weak tea being preferable; get all the fresh air you can; take three or four Pills every night; eat plenty of solids, avoid the use of slops; and if those golden rules are followed you will be happy in mind and strong in body, and forget you have any nerves.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

If there is one thing more than another for which these Pills are so famous it is their purifying properties, especially their power of cleansing the blood from all impurities, and removing dangerous and suspended secretions. Universally adopted as the one grand remedy for female complaints, they never fail, never weaken the system, and always bring about what is required.

SICK HEADACHES AND WANT OF APPETITE.

These feelings which so sadden us, most frequently arise from annoyances or trouble, from disordered stomachs, or from eating and drinking what is unfit for us, thus disordering the liver and stomach. These organs must be regulated if you wish to be well. The Pills if taken according to the printed instructions, will quickly restore a healthy action to both liver and stomach, whence follow as a natural consequence, good spirits, good health, and clear head. In the East and West Indies scarcely any other medicine is ever used for these disorders.

DISORDERS OF THE KIDNEYS.

In all diseases affecting these organs, whether they secrete too much or too little water; or whether they be affected with stone or gravel, or with aches or pains settled in the loins over the regions of the kidneys, these Pills should be taken according to the printed directions, and the Ointment should be well rubbed into the small of the back at bed time. This treatment will give almost immediate relief when all other means have failed.

FOR STOMACHS OUT OF ORDER.

No medicine will so effectually improve the tone of the stomach as these Pills: they remove all acidity, occasioned either by indigestion or improper diet. They reach the liver and reduce it to a healthy action: they are wonderfully efficacious in cases of spasms,—in fact they never fail in curing all disorders of the liver and Stomach.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy in the world for the following diseases.

LITTLE GRAVES.

BY S. P. P.

In yonder pine clad churchyard,
Where sleepeth a motley throng,
There is many a grassy hillock,
That is not very long;
And many a marble tablet,
In that lonely spot appears,
Which marketh the stay of departed ones,
By months and not by years.

Each telleth a mournful story,
Of pleasures that come no more,
While they whisper the glad assurance,
"Not lost but gone before."
Each telleth of loved ones missing,
In many a home of love,
But they speak of a glad reunion,
In a happier home above.

Oh! there's ever a holy influence,
Circles around that spot,
Not three feet long in the churchyard,
Which lovelier scenes have not;
And a tide of mingled feelings,
Whose mortal may not control,
Within view of its hallowed precincts,
Comes rushing upon the soul.

THE STORMING OF FORT NIAGARA.

(BY ONE OF THE STORMERS.)

The Capture of Fort Niagara, on the 19th of December, 1813, was one of the most successful exploits recorded in the annals of military achievement.

The enemy had succeeded on the 27th of the previous month of May, in getting possession of Fort George, (the British military post on the Niagara river, nearly opposite Fort Niagara,) by landing an overwhelming force under cover of the guns of his squadron; which anchored as near the shore as possible, and swept the plain around Fort George and the adjoining village of Newark, (the present Niagara,) with showers of shot. A most determined resistance was offered by thirteen hundred men, (regulars and militia,) under Major General Vincent, but 'twas of no avail. In fact, the wonder is, that any effort should have been made to repel his overwhelming barbarian hordes as no rampart of human bodies could resist.

After this, the enemy held possession of the place till the 12th December following, when they crossed the river to their own side, previously destroying the village of Newark; delivering up to the flames the houses and property of the unoffending inhabitants, under circumstances of great and unnecessary cruelty.

The weather had been unusually severe for several days previous to the 10th Dec., and every one here knows what a Canadian winter is. Towards nightfall on that day, notice was first conveyed to the inhabitants of the intention to burn the village. They could not believe it true, but they were soon convinced, by the appearance of the incendiaries. Men, women, and children, huddled together outside their dwellings, saw the torch of the brutal enemy applied, and their all destroyed;—houseless, they wandered as best they could for shelter, from cold and want. It must have been a dreadful scene; many hundreds of old and infirm men (for all the young and able-bodied had taken arms and were away)—these old and infirm men, and women, with their children and grand-children, wandering from their burnt homes, over snow and in darkness, to the nearest farm-houses.

It was a desperately cruel and wanton act. The commanding officer declared he had orders to destroy the village from the Secretary of War, but the latter denied it. The excuse for the atrocity was, to prevent the British troops, who were then rapidly advancing, from finding shelter, but it is entirely insufficient.

Bitterly did the enemy repent the act, (although it was not the first of the kind they had committed—he had,during the summer, destroyed the village of St. David's) bitterly did he repent it, and dearly did he pay for it. In three short weeks from the night when the flames of Newark reddened the sky, the whole of the enemy's frontier from Erie to Ontario was black with smoking ruins; not a house was left standing; fire and sword-swept away both population and habitations; and in August of the following year, when the British army took possession of Washington, Newark was not forgotten.

Major General Vincent, then posted at Burlington Heights, having heard of various wanton acts and proceedings of the American General and forces at Fort George and in its neighbourhood, detached Colonel Murray of the 100th Regiment, with 400 men of his own corps towards the enemy; who abandoned the ground as he advanced. The following despatch from Colonel Murray to General Vincent, will explain more fully:—

Fort George, Dec. 12, 1813.

SIR,—Having obtained information that the enemy had determined on driving the country between Fort George and the advance, and also carrying off the loyal part of the inhabitants, notwithstanding the inclemency of the season; I deemed it my duty to make a night and forced march towards him with the light company my command, which was intended for other designs, but consented him to evacuate Fort George, by precipitately crossing the river.

[illegible] enemy on their approach, he hid [illegible] town of Newark to retain, passed over the common and upper bridge, but failed in an attempt to destroy the fortifications, which are evidently opposite [illegible] in the possession, as might have enabled Gen[illegible] (the commanding officer) to have maintained a regular siege; but such was the apparent panic, that he left the whole of his field artillery, [illegible] the unfortunate exception of this hurried [illegible] many have rendered an essential service to the country, by removing from a merciless enemy the inhabitants of an extensive and highly cultivated tract of land, stored with cattle, grain and provisions of every description; and it must be a consolation to them to find themselves delivered from the oppression of a lawless banditti, composed of the disaffected of the country, organized under the direct influence of the American Government, who carried terror and dismay into every family.

I have the honor to be,
&c., &c.,
J. MURRAY, Colonel.
To Major General Vincent,
&c., &c., &c.

The description given in the last paragraph of the despatch, of the banditti by whom the outrages on the inhabitants were chiefly perpetrated, affords melancholy proof of the intensity of hatred engendered between residents of the same country, and neighbours, by political differences. A portion of the American army consisted of a corps named the "Canadian Volunteers,"—altogether composed of residents of Canada, (but who chiefly had been citizens of the United States.) Many of them, no doubt, considered that the enemy would overrun the country, and joined their ranks under that conviction;—others did so from national predilections; and perhaps not a few from political or social animosities.—Their leader was a person of the name of Willcocks, who, at the beginning of the war, was apparently loyal and true, and had combatted the enemy at Queenstown; but, rather that he thought the country would be conquered, or was false to the colors in his heart, he went over to the enemy, and formed the corps of Canadian Volunteers, accepting the commission of Major. It is understood that he was a principal instigator to the barbarity of destroying Newark, urged on, as is asserted, by personal and political annoyances from members of the loyal families of the neighbourhood (as'd in those days the disloyal were, as the poet has said of Angel's vices, "few and far between.") The traitor was an Irishman (a Protestant) and had been a magistrate of the Home District. He fought vindictively against us until killed at Fort Erie, and it is gratifying to know that he and the larger portion of the traitorous crew he commanded, were slain during the war. But although Colonel Murray alluded to that band of villains as the lawless banditti from whom the inhabitants of the country had suffered [illegible] he by no means intends any reproach in such conduct. The enemy, generally, wherever they appeared in Canada, acted harshly and vindictively. The consequence was, [for even women and children were zealous to defend and destroy the enemy, as numerous facts can testify,] almost every inhabitant of the country, male or female, was animated against them by the fiercest hostility, the most deadly animosity.

So intense and burning was the thirst for vengeance, for the wanton barbarities that had just been perpetrated upon them, that the immediate invasion of the enemy's country was determined on.

Colonel Murray,—a bold and enterprising officer,—conceived the project of carrying the strong fort of the enemy at Niagara by a coup de main, and arrangements were immediately made for that purpose.—The Americans, when they fled from Fort George, had removed all the boats they could collect, and it became necessary to bring others from Burlington Bay. To conceal the project from the eye of the enemy, who could survey every movement, and all that was doing on the Canadian shore, the boats were not brought nearer than two or three miles from Fort George, and from that they were transported by land from the lake to the river, or rather, to a very deep ravine about a mile above the Fort, where they were secretly deposited. This service was handsomely effected by Captain Kerby, a militia officer, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather and badness of the roads. A sufficient number of batteaux were thus collected for the enterprise. It was the intention to have made the attempt during the night of the 16th, and accordingly the men were under arms at midnight, near the ravine where the boats were,—but after waiting an hour or so, an order was received to turn the men in again. Again the next night, at the same hour, they were again under arms, and after a long delay were a second time ordered to turn in.—These disappointments caused a good deal of murmuring among the men. It savoured of great indecision, which soldiers have a strong dislike to, and not without good reason, for men knowing their lives to be in the hands of their commander, become naturally greatly diminished and out of humour at any symptom of irresolution. It was so on the night in question, particularly the second night, when many observations were made by the men, in an under voice, not very flattering to the chief—about harrassing the men—not knowing his own mind—&c., &c.

It afterwards transpired that the cause of the first delay was, that, at the last moment, it was considered the number of boats was insufficient, and the second night, General Drummond having arrived at Fort George, wished to inspect personally the preparements and force to be employed. The night of the 18th arrived, and again at the hour of midnight, the troops were under arms, but this time, there were no orders to turn in. The batteaux had been all launched into the river, at a spot directly facing the site of the present village of Youngstown; and the river being little more than half a mile across at that point, the shore to be approached with the utmost secrecy, so that no unusual noise should alarm the enemy. It was subsequently ascertained that the Americans had either received information of the intention to cross the river on the night of the 19th or 20th, for on both nights they had been on the alert, all that time, having ascertained from the prisoners taken had positioned their battalions right down Fort George, and consequently where the navigation was four or five miles wide. Had the British, they likewise expected, it certain that they [illegible] and guard on the night of the 18th, they would have done so. It was most fortunate after all, that the men had been turned in on the nights of the 16th and 17th,—although, at that time, it was considered an unjust hour.

The enemy with which the expedition was planned, was not more admirable than the fidelity displayed by every man, regular or irregular, on the British side of the river: for not a suspicion seems to have been entertained on the night of the 18th, that the attack was to be made. Not a desertion took place; no inhabitant communicated with the enemy. The desire for vengeance animated every breast, to the exclusion of every other consideration.

The troops destined for the enterprise consisted of a small detachment of the royal artillery, the grenadiers of the Royal Scots [the present Royal Regiment,] the flank companies of the 41st, and the effective men of the 100th regiment, amounting altogether to nearly 500 men.

Colonel Murray's quarters were in a farm-house near the ravine where the batteaux were launched, and about an hour before the embarkation took place, an officer of the 41st, Lieutenant Bullock, [now Colonel Bullock, late Adjutant General of Militia for Upper Canada,] having occasion to see him, entered the room where he was. Lieutenant Dawson, of the 100th Regiment, the volunteer to lead the forlorn hope, had entered a few moments before: The following conversation took place between them:—

"What description of men have you got, Dawson, for the forlorn hope? Can you rely on them?"

"I can, Colonel,—I know every man of them; they can all be depended on."

"Yes, yes,—Dawson,—I dare say that, but what I mean is, are they a desperate set. The fact is, I want fellows who have no consciences; for not a soul must live between the landing-place and the Fort!—There must be no alarm given the enemy."

"They are just that description of men, Colonel."

Murray smiled upon his young officer, and said no more.

At midnight, all the preparations for embarkation having been made, the men moved down to the boats, under strict injunctions not to open their lips, or make the slightest noise, and all embarked as stealthily as so many house-breakers. An eddy at the point of embarkation, set up the river, and this was taken advantage of to proceed [illegible] a mile or more [illegible] thither, and with scarcely a sound, that body of resolute men sped over the swift waters of the Niagara. The boats touched the shore a little below the five-mile meadows, about three miles above the Fort. There the force landed as noiselessly as they had embarked, and formed on the bank, in the following order of attack:—Advanced guard, or [forlorn-hope,] Lieut. Dawson and twenty rank and file, [volunteers from the 100th Regiment;] grenadiers 100th Regiment; Royal Artillery with grenades; five companies of the 100th Regiment, under Lieut. Col. Hamilton, to assault the main gate and escalade the works adjacent; three companies of the 100th, under Capt. Martin, to storm the eastern demi-bastion; Captain Bailey, with the grenadiers, Royal Scots, was directed to attack the salient angle of the fortification; and the flank companies of the 41st Regiment, led by Lieut Bullock, were ordered to support the principal attack. Each party was provided with scaling ladders and axes.

The force was soon in motion towards the fort. The night was dark; the sky pretty much clouded over: no moon was visible, but an occasional star twinkled dimly through the darkness as if to light them to their work. The ground was hard frozen, with a slight sparkling of snow.—Silence! Silence! was the word, and every man trode cautiously and stealthily, as if not to awake a sleeper.

The site of the present village of Youngstown was then occupied by a solitary tavern of large dimensions, with its outbuildings. It is distant just one mile from the Fort;—not a soul had been seen up to that point,—but, there, not very far from the tavern door, was discovered, with shadowy indistinctness, the form of a sentry. Up towards him breathlessly crept the leading files of the forlorn hope;—he never saw nor heard them,—he was within their reach,—he was seized by the throat, whilst "Silence, or you're a dead man," was breathed in his ear:—"Give the watch-word,"—[it is said that Colonel Murray had previously obtained the watchword from a deserter, and that the sentry at first gave a wrong word when commanded to give the watchword, but afterwards the right one.] The stern order "Not a soul must live between the landing-place and the Fort," was remembered, and, whilst hands clutched the throat and covered the mouth of the victim, to prevent the escape of sound, several bayonets were passed through his body, and his corpse laid on the ground—that done, light and sounds from the house, showed the attempt to prepare was there. The men mounted the steps at the door,—it was not locked or bolted,—they entered,—upon the left of the passage was a capacious room, the full length of the house, and twenty-one men of the 41st Regiment were asleep, whilst others were staying by all doors of a table not far from the stove, by the dim light of a tallow candle. Shortly and stealthily crept in their midst the desperate men of the forlorn-hope, the sharpers detailed hand to hand with them, [it was the last they took as living men,] [illegible] pistols [illegible] ground [illegible] were without four yards of [illegible] served,—when one, raising himself on [illegible] exclaimed,—"Bayonets are trumps!" [illegible] bayonets [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Lincoln, which may possibly [illegible] Southern Confederacy to have become most dangerous and corroding cells under the old system. They have adopted a moderate tariff, which will at least discourage smuggling, and bring some considerable and reliable revenue into their coffers; and, as they have not yet—any more than the Northerners—the nerve or the virtue to establish an energetic scheme of direct taxation, and yet must have funds, we are by no means sure that the plan of an export duty upon cotton is not open to as few objections as any other. Certainly it is not deserving the unmeasured condemnation which has been passed upon it. If the States were the only cotton producing country in the world, then maybe the double obnoxiously be the right one to impose; it would be analogous to the case of saltpetre in India, which the ingenuity of Mr. Wilson at once fixed upon as fit to bear an export duty. America is not the only cotton growing country, but it is the principal one; and to levy on the duty is moderate and the demand brisk, it is not probable that it will perceptibly check imports, though it may preponderately embarrass rivals. Of course, as the American cotton thus burdened will have to meet Indian and Egyptian cotton in the markets of the world, the duty will to a great extent come out of the American producer; but then, if ten millions of dollars are realized and must be got, how could they be extracted out of those buttoned pockets at once less ostensibly and less vexatiously? It is as if the planter surrendered (say) every tenth bale to the State, to be sold and exported for the public benefit. We by no means say that it is a good financial measure, but if a property tax will not be endured, we do not know that any better could be substituted.—Economist.

The American Revolution.

Washington, May 16.

Gen. Ashley, M. C., from Ohio, has just arrived in this city. He proposes to lay before the Government a plan for fitting an army down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico for the purpose of taking that city.

Two spies from the South have been arrested, and are now in jail awaiting their trial.

Three trains per day between this city and New York commence to run to-day on the old route carrying the mails.

The Charleston Courier reports that on the 19th instant the British barque Hope was refused entrance in the port by the Niagara.

The British ships Monmouth and General Parkhill were also ordered off.

The British ship A. & A. was pursued, but ran into shoal water and was towed up to the city.

The British ship Susan G. Odgen, from Liverpool, was boarded but finally permitted to pass.

An officer of the Texas army, who was taken prisoner there, has arrived, and states that he was permitted to go to New Orleans by General Herbert, commander there, and was compelled to take a solemn oath not to take up arms against the Southern confederacy. He reports that many of his brother officers were also forced to take a similar oath or be thrown into prison. On his route he met numerous bodies of men in motion, all concentrating northward.

It is learned from the Postmaster General that it is intended to-morrow to suspend all the steam mail service, from which the Government derives no benefit, because such contracts will therefore be annulled by the Government.

A young man, a resident of Newark, N. J., who had this evening arrived from Charleston, S. C., says there is very little military activity there; that all the troops had marched for Virginia; that business of all kinds is absolutely prostrated; that he witnessed the bombardment of Fort Sumpter; that if any were killed at Fort Moultrie or the batteries, they were buried there, and the fact was not known in Charleston; that he has seen Gen. Beauregard twice since the bombardment. He remained in Richmond one day. There all is action. Troops are continually arriving and departing. Legislature trade is all stopped. The cavalry troops are good men, but poor horses seem to be very numerous, and perfect confidence as to the result of the conflict reigns everywhere.

It appears that the Government is steadily carrying out its programme of action as to the rebel States. It has determined to appoint collectors for the different Southern ports, and is engaged in selecting men-of-war, whatever may be the opinions of legal authorities here or elsewhere on the subject.

A private letter dated on the frigate Minnesota, Hampton Roads, on Friday, says: "We arrived from Boston on the 13th, and have commenced our cruzeita on the enemy. We have seized about $300,000 worth of ships and tobacco. We are anticipating an attempt on the part of the enemy to fortify Sewell's Point. If they do we shall attack them."

Rumours are in circulation that the Virginians were encamped in the rear of Arlington Heights, two miles from Washington, but they are not credited, although all the troops are ordered to sleep on their arms with the artillery on the alert with double shotted guns.

There was another attempt at riot in Pratt street, Baltimore, on the occasion of the passage of the Dorchesters Guards, with the Ringgold battery, but the fire-looking secession crowd was headed off by a loaded rifle which deterred any serious movement.

New York, May 16.

The 14th regiment goes to-night by mail direct for Washington. It is a splendid regiment. The 2nd regiment is ordered to go on Monday. The 6th and 71st later.

The Highlanders leave on Monday for Fort Monroe.

Washington, May 20.

Last night [Sunday,] one of the Government guard vessels got ashore at the mouth of the Potomac and was attacked by a number of rebel privateer boats. She was, however, boarded by a large force of the regiment, and a brisk running fire ensued between the rebels and soldiers. Lieut. Peter Gerrardeau was killed, and two others killed or wounded. The guard then put the vessel afloat, and proceeded to the navy yard, where she now lies. Troops are continually arriving at Fort Washington, which is under the command of Gen. Mansfield.

Another contraband case has occurred. Two negroes belonging to Mr. Mason, of Virginia, have escaped to the Pennsylvania shore, and have been employed by Government in the erection of fortifications on the Virginia side. They were claimed by their master, but were retained in the employment of the Government.

The Seventh regiment, Col. Marshall, with 1,000 men, arrived this city on the Potomac, this afternoon, and marched to the Capitol, and encamped on the east front. They are finely equipped and in excellent condition for the field. They were received by the Sixth regiment, Col. Jones, and escorted to their quarters.

The Highlanders have arrived at Fort Monroe.

LOSS OF THE STEAMER COMET.

TWO LIVES LOST.

The steamer Comet, Capt. F. Patterson, left Kingston port for Toronto and Hamilton shortly after eight o'clock on Tuesday night. After clearing Nine-mile Point she headed for Timber Island, to avoid the track of a number of vessels which were coming down the lake. When about ten miles from the Point she came in collision with the schooner Exchange, of Cleveland; and subsequently sunk in deep water, the topmast alone being visible. The wind was blowing fiercely from the south-west, and the schooner when seen from the Comet was running before the wind. The schooner was sailing for Kingston and carried a bright light forward. Capt. Patterson hove the steamer up a point, in order to give the schooner a wide berth; but the schooner heading across the Comet's bow, as intended, the two came in collision. The Comet struck the schooner's starboard side with her stem, springing the steamer's planks and opening her to the sea. The capt. changed the steamer's course and bore after the schooner, they having hailed that they thought they were sinking and to keep close to bear a hand, but running fast with the wind she got out of hailing distance. Meanwhile the pumps were worked and the fires kept up for the purpose of making shore, the steamer at the time of collision being about ten miles above Nine-mile Point.—The firemen, waist-deep in water, did not abandon their task until the fires were drowned; and if the steam had held out ten minutes longer, much would have been gained towards raising the steamer. During this the life-boat was swung out, with three lady passengers, one gentleman, and the lady's maid, and brought round to leeward, and as many of the crew put into it as the captain deemed consistent with safety. Those made for shore, but at the same time the large yawl was cut loosing astern and taking in water. Two hands, J. Blake and J. McCarthy, the former from the neighborhood of Kingston Mills, and the latter a salt-water boy from Dublin, Ireland, got out to bale her, but while about to do so, she struck against the steamer's guards, thus throwing the men off their balance into the lake. Going down Blake cried out to his brother, a deck hand, "Good-bye, Jim," and the "saltie," "Good-bye, boys," and then they bade them farewell. The Captain, at this time, was busily engaged in the endeavour to run the steamer ashore, but finding it fruitless, had the small yawl put out with nine thirteen men, and made for shore under a heavy sea. To add to their peril, all oars but one were lost in getting the boat out, but reduced to this and four or five cedar life floats, they made their way ashore to the Point. Filled beyond her capacity, a distance of another quarter of a mile would have swamped the boat and compelled them to swim. Mr. Ellerbeck, the mate say, was cheerily cool, having remarked, while handling his clumsy float, that if down, so that he could hold it better. Indeed, the Captain says every man did his duty, and those who have any knowledge of the trying circumstances in which he himself was placed, can imagine how he fulfilled his part. The steamer went down about a mile and a half, nearly west of Nine-Mile Point Light-house, in sixty feet of water. Several ship-joiners, who were at work on her fittings, lost their tools, and the hands their clothing. But little freight was on board. At day-breaking yesterday [Wednesday,] the steamer Pierrepont went up the Bateaux channel, and took up the crew on the south shore of Simcoe Island, and those at the light-house. Some had lighted a fire, and were warming themselves on the shore, while those at the light-house found good quarters there. One of the ship-joiners was badly hurt, from being struck on the back by the surging of the small yawl against the steamer's side. It is supposed that the vessel's cabins will be destroyed from the elevating action of the water during her descent. It is probable, however, that the actual damage to her hull and machinery will not be very large, especially if the weather should prove favourable for a few days. It is doubtful whether an attempt will be made to raise her. The steamer was insured in Montreal but we have not learned the amount.

THE TELEGRAPH AND THE CANADIAN STEAMERS.

We have often had to complain of the injustice done to the Canadian steamers by the telegraphic correspondents of the American Associated Press. THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1861.

QUEEN'S BIRTH-DAY.

To-morrow, 24th May, is the anniversary of the birth-day of our Gracious Sovereign Queen Victoria. The Mayor has issued a proclamation requesting all good and loyal subjects to abstain from business, in testimony of their respect. We have heard of no special arrangements for the celebration of the day. The Annual Militia Muster will take place on the Court House Green, and the Rifle Band will likely parade the streets during part of the day. There will be a Soiree of the Sons of Temperance at Peasant's Corners, Smith, affording opportunity for a pleasant excursion. Tea to be served at 3 o'clock.

IMPORTANT FROM QUEBEC.

May 17, 1861.

In consequence of my first letter not appearing in the Examiner of the week for which it was written I supposed that you had thought it too late in the session to begin a correspondence, and I did not therefore continue it. This I regretted when I afterwards saw the letter and your note attached, stating that the correspondence would be continued. It was then too late to remedy it and I can only therefore offer my apology to yourself and your numerous readers for my not fulfilling the promise formerly made to you. Ere this reaches you the last session of the present parliament will have closed, as the Premier has just made the announcement that the Governor General will prorogue Parliament to-morrow, at 2 o'clock. A session will then be closed which has been perhaps as barren of useful legislation of a public nature as any that has occurred since the union.

The boasted Bankruptcy law for Upper Canada has been abandoned; the repeal of the usury laws was thrown over, and a Bill introduced by the Government to abolish the appeal from the Courts in Lower Canada to the Privy Council got the "three months boist" by the Legislative Council. A number of private and local Bills have been passed, but even they have been passed through both branches with almost indecent haste, and it will probably be found that many even of the promoters of them will

In fact the principal part of the Session has been consumed by both parties in manufacturing what is here familiarly styled "bunkum" in view of the approaching election for which they are preparing. The three measures above alluded to partook largely of this character, the first for Upper Canadian use and the two latter for Lower Canada.

Reports have been circulated here for some time past that the commission appointed to examine into and report with reference to the position of the Grand Trunk Railroad have completed their labors, and that when the result is made known it will reveal an almost startling state of matters.

Gross mismanagement and extravagance it is said has prevailed to a very great extent, and that unless a change is made, and that speedily, the concern will be involved in hopeless bankruptcy.

You will doubtless have noticed by the debates in the supplies in the House of Assembly that the large amount which the present Government have in one way and another been obliged to advance during the past year amounts to about £1,700,000. Hale said that with the present management the concern must annually run one million and a-half dollars behind.

It was rumored a few days ago that at a caucus of the Ministerial members the subject of fixing the time for the elections was discussed, but no definite conclusion arrived at. I understand now that the French Lower Canadian influences which was said to be favorable to bringing on the elections immediately has prevailed, and that it has been decided to hold the elections not later than the early part of July. Mischief-making is current the Liberals of Upper Canada especially have no time to lose in preparing for the contest. Wishing them and you every success, I am, &c.

PROSCRIPTION IN CANADA.

It will hardly be credited that political proscription exists in Canada—yet such is the fact. "Ministers have apparently been, as reckless, as heedless of public opinion, that in more than one instance persons holding office under the Crown have been removed because of their political opinions, and leaders of the Government have been appointed in their places and stead. The late gaoler of Beauharnois, C. W., is a case in point. Mr. Robertson, a respectable and trust-worthy business man, has been removed by the Post-master General for no other reason than that of being a Reformer in sentiment; the son of a supporter of the Government has been appointed in his place. Many will ask—can such things really be? Unless aware of the proscription existing in high places few would be prepared to credit such acts. We presume to think surprised when this case comes to our notice, having been told personally once a young man age as a carrier for the Montreal Crown official (who this Reformer succeeds) stated that he stated that equally copious his appointment was to his official superior commence a Refuge journal, although under other circumstances he would gladly do so, because of the [illegible] of Ministers, who, himself, might without any other reason remove him from office. With such emphasis he intimated to free Canada's No. 1 post as [illegible] the feeling of thousands in the land. In the face of such facts can any shadow of disposition thing vote against Proscription and the Proscriptionists.

Among the localities which have already suffered severely from the depression of commerce in the United is the Town of Peterborough. The lumber trade, of which it is the principal [illegible] totally [illegible], and the Town is in consequence, brought to the verge of ruin.—Colonist.

Quite in point truly. That will have suffered, and which probably will suffer much from the depression in the lumber trade is true, but that our Town has been "brought to the verge of ruin" in consequence, is made of the mark. On the contrary, evidences are everywhere visible of prosperity, and in fact it has been remarked of late by many, that the condition of the Town is unusually good. We think Peterborough may compare favorably with any place in Canada at present, and no grave fears for the future are entertained by those who are mostly interested. Will the Star do us the justice to correct its (no doubt, unintentional) misrepresentation.

A DUEL.

A disgraceful "affair of honor" recently occurred between two members of the Canadian Parliament, Hon. Messrs. Desmaulles and Morin. Fortunately the affair turned out something like the bombardment of Fort Sumpter—the pistols were fired, and the powder and smoke expended, but neither of the combatants was hurt. Dame rumor is cruel enough to say that the seconds of one of the parties, in dread of consequences forgot to bring the balls with him; and that the shot used on the occasion was bird peas. The cause of the rencontre is variously stated, but the Hon. Mr. Desmaulles was the challenger; the Hon. Mr. Morin the challenged. We have not heard if the parties declared themselves satisfied before they left the ground; but they certainly ought to have done it. Mr. Morin being the Solicitor General, it would be needless to ask him to look to the matter, and direct the attention of the Crown Prosecutor for this district to the lamentable facts. Nor do we see how Mr. Johnson very well could proprio motu submit the case to the cognisance of the next Grand Jury that shall be empannelled. But there can be no question that the example of these gentlemen is a very bad one, and will be fraught with the worst of consequences. But it shows, after all, that the age of chivalry is not extinct yet; and that the code of honor, almost everywhere else repudiated, is fully recognised here. What a great people we are; and what mighty things may not be expected from us. Only to think of two Frenchmen fighting with pistols; and fighting in such an innocent, loveable way. The practice, it must be allowed, was Yankee, but it probably answered as well as the ancient and more deadly way of settling these affairs.

TOWN COUNCIL.

At the meeting on Monday night His Worship the Mayor stated the result of the mission to Quebec: the Consolidation Bill had passed, but the B. R. clauses was thrown out in Committee. The Mayor also stated that he had been served with a writ in a suit, C. Elias Burnham against the Town for late Judge Hall, amounting to £57. He also called the attention of the Council to the rowdyism prevalent in the streets, and urged the necessity of appointing special constables to preserve peace.

The By-law to amend By-law 128 respecting licenses, was read in Committee of whole, also read a third time and passed.—The principal clause provides for the amending of By-law 128 by adding after the word prosecution, "And any person keeping an open house, with a bar, exhibiting glasses, bottles, and decanters, or keeping a sign intimating that the house or place is public, shall be prima facie evidence of selling spirituous or fermented liquors, and liable in consequence."

A By-law to appoint an Inspector of public buildings was read and passed. Robert Elliott, R. Rowe, and R. Graham were proposed for the office; Mr. Graham was elected.

The Council went into Committee on the Market By-law. Several clauses were read, when it was moved the Committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.—Carried.

The Council adjourned for one week.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. E. Poole, undertaker, &c., met with an accident on Tuesday afternoon. He was driving the horses with the hearse to the funeral of Mr. Snyder's daughter, when some part of the gearing of the vehicle becoming detached the horses became frightened and ran off, pitching Mr. Poole over the hearse into the road, and dragging him about 150 yards. One of his arms was broken in two places, and he was otherwise injured, but he is, we are glad to say, recovering.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—A colored man named Hornbeck, butcher in the market, was fined $10 and costs by A. S. Fenton, Esq., for shooting cruelly perpetrated on a cow on its way to market. Such practices are too common among butchers, and if the accused in this case had to be imprisoned for a year or two it would have a salutary effect on some parties.

☞ A new paper has been started in Cobourg called the Cobourg Sentinel.—The typographical appearance is fair, and if rightly conducted, the Sentinel will be liberally patronized. There is a good opening for a good paper in Cobourg.

"GO ABROAD FOR NEWS."

This subject is illustrated by the following extracts from the Hamilton Republican, published on Thursday, May 16:—

"REVOLUTION IN CANADA.

"We have been permitted to peruse a letter received by a young gentleman of this city, from a friend in Quebec. The letter is dated Montreal, April 17, and after reading it, we should say they are having pretty lively times of it in "Her Gracious Majesty's most loyal colony." Insurrection—establishment under Abraham British Americans and the government are for open rebellion, against the Government.—$400,000 have been raised by the Bank, for the protection of [illegible] Government steamboats [illegible] Montreal, between the militia and Queen's troops. At the time of the writing this letter, a descent was anticipated on the island of St. Helens, in the St. Lawrence, for the purpose of seizing a large number of field pieces and other munitions of war, stored there by the British Government."

These are items of news to us living in Canada.

THE TOWN'S POOR.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Mr. Editor,—I trust you will excuse my reverting to the subject of making some more efficient provision for the poor of the Town. The reason why I press it is because, to my personal knowledge, there are several cases which have not hitherto been properly attended to. I shall specify one—the latest. A woman, whose husband is sick, having four children and [illegible] a fifth. Poor before, and unable to work, she was in want, having, as it appears, scarcely bread to eat, and afraid to call a doctor for fear of the expense. They were reduced to two meals each a day. The baby's eyes became greatly inflamed. A little child suffered from the inability of individuals; especially a dollar from one who was not even asked for it. But this is not cause about a fortnight too late; so that the consequences, to the poor baby in particular, might have been very serious. Now I do not blame the parties whose duty it is supposed to be to attend to such cases. They acted liberally as to their personal means; but they had no funds provided them, and were not authorized to deal with such cases in a proper manner. There should be some one person whose duty it is to make inquiry after and into all such cases, to whom any application may be made at once; and who should be empowered at his discretion to attend to it at once, and so be held responsible for the manner in which the poor are attended to; not to maintain them in idleness, but to set them on their feet again as speedily as possible. I write because I feel the responsibility at present resting on the whole town, and I write so late, because I wished the Mayor to be at home himself to attend to a matter of so much general importance to all christian and kind hearted people.

I remain, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly,
CIVIS.

Peterboro', C. W., May 22, 1861.

CANADIAN LAND AND EMIGRATION COMPANY.

Latest English papers announce the formation of a company by this name, under the limited liability act, with a capital of £250,000. It is well known that our government to encourage emigration are offering for sale tracts of land, comprising townships of from forty to fifty thousand acres each, at fifty cents per acre, provided that one settler for each 200 acres be placed on the land within ten years. The directors of the present project state that they have secured from the Canada Agency Association the power of selecting any number of townships out of those surveyed in outline as above, with very favourable modification of the published conditions of settlement, and of these townships they propose to purchase ten in the first instance. The locality fixed upon is about 95 miles from Toronto and Kingston. Each township is to be divided into lots, and it is proposed to reserve a proportion of them for future disposal, at the much higher prices which with the progress of settlement, in the first instance only one-half of the shares are to be issued and it is said that of the 25,000 shares of £3 each, into which this first issue is divided, 12,300 have already been applied for, and have had the deposit paid on them.—Interest is to be allowed on the paid-up capital of the ratable per cent. per annum until January 1st, 1863. If no allotment be made, the deposits are to be returned without deduction.

STRANGE SCENE IN A HAMILTON CHURCH.

A scene occurred in the McNabb street Presbyterian Church, last Sabbath, which I consider it but proper to make public, as it shows a bitter intolerant spirit on the part of the office-bearers of that church.

It is known to many of your readers that a short time ago Miss Reid was excommunicated—and I think most unjustly—by the session and Presbytery, for having brought an action of ejectment against the office-bearers of the Church, in consequence of their allowing what she considered heresy to be preached from their pulpit. This, it seems, was not considered sufficient punishment for her, and so, when the time expired to which her pew rent was paid, they decided that they would not receive from her any more rent, or allow her or her brother a pew or sitting in the church. Acting upon this determination, they packed up the Bibles and other books which were in her pew, and sent them, without any bandage, by their door-keeper and a teamster, to the residence of Miss Reid, opposite the door of which they were thrown down upon the pavement.

On Sabbath last, Miss Reid and her brother James proceeded to church, as usual, and into it they went, she taking the lead. On reaching the pew, they beheld in it two persons. Miss Reid leant over to open the door and ask for admission, but received a reply in the negative. She repeated her request, and received the same reply.—Finding that she could not gain admission, her brother went in search of stools, and in fifteen or twenty minutes returned with one. On this his sister sat, having, no doubt, become wearied of standing, for over half an hour in the aisle. During all this time Mr. Inglis was in the pulpit, but he did not ask the lady to take a seat! During all this time she was to be seen by the office-b

LATEST from EUROPE.

ARRIVAL THE "CANADIAN."

Father Point, May 20.

The steamer Canadian passed here at 5 o'clock this morning, with 39 cabin and 322 steerage passengers.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Parliamentary proceedings are unimportant. The American crisis continues the leading topic. Markets for American produce generally continued excited.

It was reported in London that an American ship from Liverpool en route for New Orleans had been insured at fifteen guineas. A ship from Shanghae for New York was done at 40s.

FRANCE.

The Chambers of Commerce have called the attention of the French Government to the necessity of taking measures for the protection of French vessels in American waters.

The Minister of Commerce in reply promised to concert with the Minister of Marine to have a conference with the Emperor on the subject.

The Government presented a bill to the Corps Legislatif opening credit for 45,000,000 francs for great works of public utility, and another for issuing bonds amounting to one hundred and four million francs, repayable in thirty years.

It is stated that the effective force of the French army is 75,000 men in excess of the number mentioned in the Budget.

High mass was celebrated at the chapel of St. Roch, Paris, on the 8th inst., for the Warsaw victims. The congregation was numerous, and many were attired in mourning.

The harvest prospect in France presented a very bad appearance, owing to the inclement weather. The first crop is lost. The wheat is seriously damaged by the frost. Irreparable mischief is done to the brandy crop at Cognac.

The Bourse was flat on the 8th, but closed a shade firmer.

It was stated that an American agent had reached France to purchase army and military equipments.

HUNGARY.

Great hostility prevailed owing to the examination of Count Teliki.

A Pesth despatch of the 8th says, at a sitting of the Lower House, the President confirmed the news that Count Teliki had been found murdered at his residence.

The House, on the announcement being made, raised a cry of despair, and several ladies in the galleries were carried away fainting.

M. Deak, with voice nearly stifled with emotion, proposed that the sitting of the House be adjourned till the 13th.

Pesth is highly excited.

It is alleged that Teliki committed suicide, but not credited.

POLAND.

Affairs at Warsaw are unchanged.

An extraordinary sitting of the Council of State had taken place (continued) days at Warsaw on account of some of the peasants having refused to perform the forced labor required of them.

Later news announces that in some districts the peasants were less refractory.

The Parasus took out the news that the British Government recognizes the Southern Confederacy as belligerents.

American matters continued to attract attention in the House of Commons.

Mr. Gregory postponed his motion in favor of a prompt recognition of the Southern Confederacy till the 17th.

Mr. Foster gave notice that he should call attention to the desirability of not recognizing the insurrectionists.

Mr. Horsfall postponed his motion relative to belligerent rights.

Lord Palmerston stated that pending grave and complicated questions, now being considered, the discussion of the subject at present was inopportune.

Active preparations are going on in the navy yards for sending a powerful squadron into American waters.

The London Times says America heretofore industriously vindicated principles and made precedents, all of which now go to the contradiction of her own belligerent rights. She upheld privateering, and denied the right of search, and both these are now turned against her.

California gold, diverted from New York, was being insured from Panama to London.

Mr. Baxter gave notice in the House of Commons, that he will ask Government if they intend to ask for a rope of $78,000 for the Galway contract.

French politics unimportant.

One quarter of the town of Limoges is burnt.

The Bourse has been firm, but flat and lower, on the 7th closing at 69-25.

The reactionary movements in the Neapolitan provinces were suppressed.

It is reported that the Czar sent the Grand Duke Michael to Poland on a conciliatory mission and with full powers.

ARRIVAL OF THE "PERSIA."

St. John's, N. B., May 20.

The Persia was off Cape Race on Saturday evening.

A large quantity of war material as freight was refused by the Persia.

It is confidentially asserted that letters of marque had reached London and Liverpool, and vessels are reported to have left with them, but this is doubted.

Earl Derby expressed, in the House of Lords, the hope that the forthcoming proclamation by the Government will give emphatic warning that if British subjects join privateers in either side, their blood will be on their own heads, with no redress from England.

Preparations are making for an American Union meeting in London.

The Times says the mediation of England might as well be offered to a barricade as to the United States.

No Gulf of Mexico war risks were taken at Lloyd's or the Exchange.

The Paris Opinione calls on Napoleon solemnly to recognize the new Kingdom.

There are symptoms of insurrection in Hungary.

A religious insurrection at Kurnah, Russia, had broken out. Seventy persons were killed.

Shanghai, March 18.

The three trading ports adjacent under the treaty are, Ulsun, King-tang-hien, and Hankidang, where Canton duties were left.

The fur trade of Pekin is dull at 4½.

Canton, April 1.

An edict has been published, announcing the establishment of the Board for Foreign Affairs at Pekin.

Imports improving.

Melbourne, March 25.

Trade is dull.

At New Zealand the natives have been granted 40 hours' armistice.

Liverpool provision market generally steady. Various circulars state beef steady, Pork quiet but firm. Bacon heavy. Lard quiet at 52s a 56s. Tallow quiet at 53s a 55s.

Produce market—broker's circular.—Ashes firm; pots, 35s 6d a 36s; pearls 38s a 39s.

London Markets. — Baring's quote wheat active, except for inferior, which has declined 4d. a 2s. Sugar dull, and declined 6d. Coffee firm. Tea—little enquiry and prices weak. Tallow dull at 58s a 58s 3d.

Money market generally unchanged with an active demand.

The latest sales of American stocks reported on Friday were Ill. C., 36 a 38½ discount, Erie 20½.

SPANISH FILIBUSTERING AND SLAVERY.

The Spanish subjects who have so suddenly proclaimed the reannexation of the half-caste Spanish Republic of St. Domingo to the Crown of Spain are not likely to stop short at the limits of the Spanish settlement. It is said that three frigates have already been dispatched from Havana with more than 5000 regular troops to St. Domingo, that large bodies of troops are on their way from Spain to Cuba, and that the Hayties people are already in the most profound alarm, feeling attached that President Geffrard has no force at his disposal competent to resist this invasion. No doubt the step contemplated is the reannexation of the whole of the island to the Spanish Crown. The moment is favourable, for the Southern States of America are certainly not strong enough to enter at present on a war with Spain; and the Northern Union, under its present Republican Government, will not probably have the will, even if it has the power, to interfere. The last democratic Administration would certainly have seized the opportunity for a quarrel which might have ended in the conquest both of Cuba and Hayti.—But Spain has no longer the same occasion to fear this; and she may doubtless think that Cuba will be safer in her hands if she is able successfully to "revendiquer" her right to this missing link in the chain of islands which commands the Carribean Sea. Hayti once more in her hands and connecting Cuba with Porto Rico, will stretch a Spanish cordon completely across the space between the Windward West India Islands and the Peninsula of Florida; and thus Spain will be able to meet the Confederated States with a far more imposing force than before. We are, however, happy to learn from Lord J. Russell's reply to Mr. Gregory on Thursday night, that it is still doubtful whether Spain will accept the addition to her dominions which the filibusterers are anxious to press upon her, In this case the Governor of Cuba must be acting on his own responsibility in sending aid, and ought to be recalled. The blow, if it falls, will be felt severely by the Anti-Slavery party, and colored people throughout the United States, as well as by the natives of Hayti. Since the overthrow of Soulouque the Western or African side of the Island has made considerable advances towards a better Government. President Geffrard, who now governs the African Republic, is, we believe, a man of high courage and character, who is doing everything in his power to favour immigration, which is the great want of the Island. The most liberal terms had been offered by the Government to poor immigrants; and the remarkable facilities of Hayti for growing cotton of the finer kinds would have, it was hoped, stimulated this immigration at the present crisis in the history of cotton supply. It is but too probable that if Spain appropriates this new stroke of policy, Hayti may supply the vacuum in the cotton market, as Cuba supplies the sugar market. The free black population of Hayti is already near a million, while Cuba, though half as large again as Hayti, has, according to the best estimates not more than half a million slaves. It is obvious, therefore, what an opening there is, even without any stimulants to the slave trade (which would, however, necessarily follow,) for introducing slavery into Hayti by the subjugation of its free negroes.—Such a soil with a million of laborers, under the "beneficient whip," would be a source of wealth such as richer countries than Spain might envy. And we think it will be essential to watch her proceedings very carefully, for it would be disgraceful in Great Britain to allow an extension of slavery, and, as an almost necessary consequence, of the slave trade, at the hands of a Power to which we have actually paid a large sum of money to abolish the latter.—Economist.

TOO MA NY IRONS IN THE FIRE

A countryman visited Detroit recently, attempted to carry two pigs under one arm, a coop full of chickens under the other, and quart of eggs in his coat tail pocket. The beginning of his troubles was to drop one of the diminutive porkers, which shot around the corner like greased lightning. He laid the coop on the other to hold it down, and started in pursuit, returning victorious to find his other wig-released by the benevolent notion of an old sow who upset the coop and freed the prisoner. Reasoning the other in like manner, he started in pursuit again, and in course of twenty minutes loomed up with piggy No. 2 under his arm. By this time No. 1 had wiggled out and was gone again; thereat he was enraged that he sat down on the eggs unawares, and smashed them. Descrying the rascal in a neighboring street, he dashed after him, tumbled over a gutter plate; and saw both his porcine tormentors disappear under a barn with a flirt of their short tails.—Wending his way sorrowfully back to the coop, he arrived in time to see the last of his biddies disappear over a picket fence in the distance, released by the mischief of some malicious boy that sat on the cobstone and asked him what he was looking for. When last seen he was using his best endeavours to trade the coop for a bottle of lemon pop—making the best of adverse circumstances.

LEEMING'S MONTREAL CIRCULAR.

Montreal, May 16.

PRODUCE.—Flour reached the lowest figure during the last five days that are recorded for many months. Sales of No. 1, Superfine were made at $4.30c. Yesterday and to-day $5 to $5 5c is the market price, the latter figure if for choice samples of 500 to 7000 barrels to fill orders. No. 2 is in fair demand at $4 75c. Extras are enquired for and prices firm, good samples bring $6 50c to $6 60c.

Bag flour jumps in a very uncertain way, last week it was almost unsaleable at $2 50c to $2 60c, and to-day nobody knows how much to ask, good would bring $2 90c.

Wheat is very dull on account of the difficulty in finding room for it; $1 10c is offered for good samples.

Pease are dull; No sales have been taken for a cargo afloat. More is asked and expected in a fortnight; in fact we look for a general relief by that time.

Butter is in pretty good demand though the enquiry is principally for new; 13c to 14c is quoted for good samples of old; poor is unsaleable.

Eggs—Are not arriving as fast as they did a week ago; 5½d is still the price.

Pork—Is in good demand at $20 for small lots of Mess; $15 50c for Prime Mess, and $14 for Prime.

Lard—is firm, clear samples bought at 10c; the bulk of that in stock here is worth only 9½c.

Scrofula diseases are the putrid think from which arises a large portion of the fatal maladies that afflict mankind. They are as it were a species of potato rot in the human constitution, which undermines and corrupts all the sources of its vitality and hastens its decay. They are the germ from which springs Consumption, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Liver Complaints, and Eruptive Diseases, which will be recognized as among those most fatal and destructive to the races of men. We know then we shall proclaim welcome news to our readers when we tell them that Ayer's Sarsaparilla does accomplish the end desired, and it is well worthy the attention of those who are afflicted with Scrofulous complaints.

ESSAY ON AGRICULTURE.

BY GEORGE GEDDES, OF SYRACUSE, N. Y.

PART XVI.

The next operation which demands our attention is that of sowing and harrowing. In discussing this subject, I intend first to show that the ordinary practice of putting in crops is contrary to great waste of seed and also lessens the prospect of crops, and then to point out the manner by which I consider a large saving would be effected and the crop considerably increased. I think it may be safely asserted that not more than a third part of the seed sown ever comes to maturity. This may appear startling at first to one who has not considered the subject, but I think I will be able to show that that estimate is not extravagant.—If we abandon a field of grain, any wheat for example, before cutting, we find that on ordinarily rich soil several stalks have been produced from each grain of the seed. I [illegible] We may safely average the number of stalks from a grain at three, and the number of grains in the head at 30, so that on good soil and under favorable circumstances a grain of wheat is capable of producing 90 fold. By the same calculation we will find peas to produce about 60 fold, and oats about 100 fold, and this not in isolated cases but as a general rule. And yet I am convinced from observation that these grains do not produce more than 18 fold of the seed sown. The question naturally arises: what becomes of the remainder of the seed; I answer that it either fails to germinate in consequence of not being properly deposited in the soil, or imperfectly matures from causes which the farmer has the means of preventing, in order to prevent that the usual quantity of seed sown is much more than is necessary to produce a good crop. I have accurately calculated the number of seeds in a bushel of different grains and grasses, and also the quantity required to cover an acre, allowing a given space to each grain. I find the number of seeds in a bushel to be as follows:

Wheat	802,560
Oats	603,296
Peas	168,960
Timothy Seed	33,723,520
Clover Seed	16,467,920

Now taking the standard for a crop of wheat at [illegible] acres, peas at 30 and oats at [illegible] will be agreed by all that these figures are far above the average, although I think they are not more than ought to be obtained with proper management, and taking the average produce of each grain already given, we find that 401280 seeds are required for an acre of wheat, 241318 for an acre of oats, and 126720 for an acre of peas. And as an acre contains 6272640 square inches, the following table will show the space occupied by each grain and the quantity of seed required for that purpose I may mention also that in what was considered a good crop of clover I find that the average space occupied by each root is about four square inches, and in Timothy about two square inches:

Square inches occupied by each seed.	Quantity of seed per acre.	Produce.
Wheat.....15¾	30 lbs	30 bushels
Peas.....15¾	45 "	30 "
Oats.....12¾	12½ "	40 "
Clover.....4	8½ "	———
Timothy...2	4½ "	———

It will be understood that the quantities of seed given in the above table are required to occupy the spaces indicated and to produce the quantity per acre accordingly given. Now, as I have already remarked, the produce is much over the avera e while the quantity of seed is less than ¼ of what is usually sown. Now for the question—what becomes of the other ¾? In the first place, as heat is usually pleasd, especially stubble land, for Spring crops, the furrows seldom lap close to each other, many open spaces are left between these, through which a great deal of grain runs, as it falls in sowing and lodges in the vacant space under the furrows where it remains nearly as dry and safe as if it were in the barn, for although the harrow may close up the opening by which it found its way down; yet the earth does not come in contact with the seed and it never germinates, or if any of it does it is impossible for it to push its way up through a solid furrow 5 or 6 inches thick. It has been proved by numerous experiments that about 2 inches is the proper depth for covering most of our grain crops.

(To be continued.)

IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is at once distributed by the circulation of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, and skin, are the four organs to consider a little purifying of blood. The nature of the heart is misunderstood, and on the circulation it feeds. The lungs become charged with the poisonous matter; blood, a thick, clogged oil from a clear transparency at the female head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, dirt, stones, in a pure spring, from which you a day riveted, to keep back the fresh waters of the stream become disturbed and discolored. So quickly does impure blood by every part, and leave ill effects behind. All the passages become obstructed, and nature in obstruction is necessary, the lungs of life soon dies out. These pills put only purify the blood, but regenerate all the members of the body; they are, therefore, instructed as a

SUNSHINE COMES TO-MORROW

Here's a lasting truth to learn
To that trouble borrow—
Though thy path be dark to day,
Sunshine comes to-morrow.

Tho' the skies of summer fade,
Ne'er the sweetest flowers
And e'en winter rudely brings
Dark and gloomy hours.

Yet the spring-tide will come again
With its tender glances;
And again summer'll bloom
As the year advances.

Then the birds will warble songs
In the summer meadows;
Branches waving in the breeze,
Cast on earth their shadows.

Darkness will appear to flight—
Night will yield to morning;
Brighter days are on the wing—
Gladness, hope adorning.

Soon the light of holy truth
Error's cowls shall sever;
'Neath its rays shall wrongs grow right—
Peace shall last forever.

O, let work and hope and love,
However dark the hour,
Trust to him who rules the storm
With Almighty power.

Then this lesson wisely learn—
It will heal your sorrow;
That however dark the day,
Sunshine comes to-morrow.

Ben Jonson's Mother.

In Hartshorn Lane, near Charing Cross, about the year 1560, dwelt Mr. Thomas Fowler, a master bricklayer. He had married, in 1575, Mrs. Margaret Jonson, a widow; and had become the protector of her little boy Benjamin, then about 4 year and a half old.

Benjamin is now in his sixth year. He duly attends the parish school in St. Martin's Church; for his father was "a grave minister of the gospel," and his mother is anxious that the only child, poor although he must be, shall lack no advantages of education. We see the sturdy boy daily pacing to school, through the rough and rainy way of that half-rural district. In his play hours he is seen in the fields, picking blackberries in Hedge Lane, or flying his kite by the Windmill in St. Giles'. His father-in-law is a plain, industrious, trusty man—not rich enough to undertake any of the large works which the luxurious wants of the town present; and oftentimes interfered with, in the due course of his labor, by royal proclamations against the increase of houses, which are rigidly enforced when an humble man desires to build a cottage. But young Ben has found friends. To the parish school sometimes comes Master Camden; and he observes the bold boy, always at the head of his class, and not unfrequently having his "clear and fair skin" disfigured by combats with his dirty companions, who litter about the alleys of Saint Martin's Lane. The boy has won good Master Camden's heart; and so, in due time, he proposes to remove him to the Westminster School.

Let us look at the Shadow of his Mother as she debates this question with her husband, at their frugal supper. "The boy must earn his living," says the bricklayer. "He is strong enough to be of help to me. He can mix the mortar; he will soon be able to carry the hod. Learning? stuff! he has had learning enow, for all the good it will do him." "Thomas Fowler," responds the mother, "if I wear my fingers to the bone, my boy shall never carry the hod. Master Camden, a good man, and a learned, will pay for his schooling. Shall we not give him his poor mouth and his pallet bed? Master Camden says he will make his way. I owe it to the memory of him who is gone, that Benjamin shall be a scholar, and perhaps a minister." "Yea; and be persecuted for his opinions, as his father was. These are [illegible] times, Margaret—the lowest are the safest. Ben is passionate, and obstinate, and will quarrel for a straw. Make him a scholar, and he becomes a Papist or a Puritan—the quiet way is not for the like of him. He shall be apprenticed to me, wife, and earn his daily bread quietly and honestly." Night after night is the debate renewed. But the mother triumphs. Ben does go to Westminster School. He has hard fare at home; he has to endure many a taunt as he sits apart in the Abby cloisters, intent upon his task. But Camden is his instructor and friend. The bricklayer's boy fights his way to distinction.

Look again at the Shadow of that proud Mother as, after three or four anxious years, the boast of his advancement. He has an exhibition. He is to remove to Cambridge. Her Benjamin must be a bishop. Thomas Fowler is incredulous—and he is not generous: "When Benjamin leaves this roof he must shift for himself, wife." The mother draws one more urgent but hopeful sacrifice in her Benjamin's pocket.

It falls about night of 1590, when Benjamin Jonson, well-stored the good library of Hartshorn Lane. He is twenty-one last January. His joyful friend Master Camden is dirty enough. That darling which tended to Benedict's mother's eyes while they slept, is savagely dumb—speechless, and all the space her eyes rove to is dirty roofs although the sun shines with the utmost clearness. The bricklayer measures the hole with a line, and tells the lads they must dig deeper. "Hi! Ben is employed!" hard work and altogether living more like study under them. The ambitious lad has humiliations for his endowments. His spirit has been already wounded. The minister of Stainer, he should ponder the daily trouble which hints by word by the father of Benedict, to the hunger for which gods has to grant not palace. Benjamin Jonson journeyman bricklayer.

And now, for two years, has the mother—by hopes unchastened, for love only the richer—in love of unsatisfactory ambition. The youngster duly marries and [illegible] Child of the [illegible] 1594 has won his way to handle a trowel;—but he is not comfortable in all things. "Wife," says Thomas Fowler, "that son of yours will never prosper. Cannot he work,—and cannot he put his hands,—without a Greek book in his pocket?" This every-morn must be cast himself, at dinner hour, in the shade of the wall in Chancery Lane, on which he first [illegible] and there comes a journeyman Bricklayer and begins discourse with him; and Ben draws this his book—and they talk as if they were equal. Margaret, he is [illegible] for life; he is above his trade." "Shame on ye, husband! Does he not work honestly and daily? and will you grudge him his Scholar?" "He haunts the playhouses; he sits in the pit—and cracks nuts—and hisses and claps hands, in a way quite unbecoming a bricklayer's apprentice. Margaret, I fear he will come to an ousel." One night there is a fearful quarrel. It is late when Benjamin returns home. In silence and darkness, the pan and platter meet. She is resolved. Benjamin, my son, my dear one, we will endure this life no longer. Take this sword;—it was your [illegible]'s.—A gentleman wore it; a gentleman shall still wear it. Go to the Low Countries.—Volunteers are called for. There is an expedition to Cadiz. Take with you those few crowns, and God prosper you."

Another year, and Benjamin's campaign is ended. At the hearth in Hartshorn Lane sits Margaret Foster—in solitude. There will be no more strife about her son. Death has settled the controversy. Margaret is very poor. Her trade is unprofitable; for the widow is befriended by her servants. "Mother, there is my grandfather's sword—it has done service; and, now, I will work for you." "How, my son?" I will be a bricklayer again."—We see the Shadow of the Mother, as she strives to make her son content. He has no longer "the lines and marter" hands with which it was his after-fate to be reproached; but he hastens the master's eye upon his mother's workmen. Yet he has hours of leisure. There is a chamber in the old house now filled with learned books. He reads, and he writes, as his own pleasure dictates. "Mother," he one day says, "I wish to marry." "Do so, my son; bring your wife home; we will dwell together." So a few years roll on. He and his wife weep:

"Mary, the daughter of their youth."

But there is an event approaching which sets aside sorrow. "Daughter," says the ancient lady, "we must go to the Rose Playhouse to-night. There is a new play to be acted, and that play is Benjamin's. "Yes, mother, he has had divers monies already. Not much, I wot, seeing the labour he has given to this 'Comedy of Humours'—five shillings, and ten shillings, and, once, a pound." "No matter, daughter, he will be famous." A calamity clouds that fame." The play-writer has quarrels on every side. In the autumn of 1598, Philip Henslowe, the manager of "the Lord Admiral's men," writes thus to his son-in-law, Alleyn: "Since you were with me, I have lost one of my company, which berieth me greatly—that is, Gabriel; for he is slain Hogsden Fields, by the hands of Benjamin Jonson, bricklayer." Twenty years after, the great dramatist, the learned, thus relates the story to Drummond:—"Being appealed to the fields, he had killed his adversary, which had been hurt in the arm, and whose sword was ten inches longer than his; for the which he was imprisoned, and almost at the gallows." There is the proud Shadow of a Roman Matron hovering about his cell, in those hours when the gallows loomed shadily in the future.

The scholar and the poet has won his fame. Bricklayer no longer, Ben is the companion of the illustrious. Shakespeare hath "wit-combats" with him; Camden and Selden try his mettle in learned controversies; Raleigh, and Beaumont, and Donne, and Fletcher, exchange with him "words of subtle fame," at "The Mermaid." But a new trouble arises—Jonson is come to the throne. Hear Jonson's account of a remarkable transaction:—"He was detained by Sir James Murry to the King, for writing something against the Scots, in a play, 'Eastward Ho,' and voluntarily imprisoned himself, with Chapman and Marston, who had written it not agst them. The report was, that they should then have had their ears cut, and noses." They are at length released. We see the shadow of a banquet within the poet gave to his friends,in commemoration of his deliverance. There is a joyous company of immortals at that feast. There, too, is that loving and thankful Mother. The wine-cups are flowing; there are songs and jests, eloquence, and the passionate earnestness with which souls drink spark when the heart is opened. But there is one, whose Shadow we now see, more passionate and more earnest than any of the company. She rises, with a full goblet in her hand:—"Son, I drink to thee. Thou art poor, my beloved son, thine friends, my beloved son, thine. I drink to thee. But ye the poor; one grain of the smallest drop which I drink to night, from ye we ever pledge confidence in that country would I learn pledged thee—many strong drinks, and the sparkling wines commend The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A proclamation has been issued by the British Government relative to affairs in the United States, warning British subjects against engaging in the American war, that all doing so will be held responsible for their own acts. The proclamation declares the intention of that Government to maintain the strictest, impartial neutrality between England and the Government of the United States, styling themselves the Confederate States of America. It warns all British subjects if they enter the military service of either side, or join ships of war or transport, or attempt to get recruits or fit out vessels for war purposes, or transport or break, or endeavor to break, any blockade, lawfully and actually established, or carry soldiers or despatches, or any material contraband of war for either party, they will be liable to all the penalty and consequences, and will do so at their peril, and in no wise obtain the protection of their government.

A RIOT IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

TROOPS FIRING UPON A MOB—TWO MEN KILLED AND FOUR WOUNDED.

St. John's (Newfoundland) papers of the 14th inst. report the occurrence of a bloody riot in that city. On Monday, May 13th, on the occasion of the meeting of the legislature of St John's, advantage was taken by the crowd of the absence of the troops at the Colonial Buildings, to perpetrate wanton outrages on the premises of respectable citizens, whose only fault would appear to be their relationship to the candidates who opposed the so-called liberal nominees in the Harbor Main district—the scene of the late encounter, resulting in the death of two and the wounding of a dozen persons. The arrival of a detachment of troops on the ground put a stop to the sacking of premises which had previously engaged the attention of the mob, though it did not cause its dispersion. On the contrary, towards dark the mob increased to such an extent that it was feared further riotous demonstrations would be made, under cover of the darkness, the excitement increasing with the numbers. Efforts were made to induce them to disperse, without avail, when the riot act was read, and the demand again made to disperse by the commander of the troops, Colonel Grant, with similar success. Colonel Grant made another attempt to induce the mob to retire, informing them if was the last time he would do so, and if the call was not obeyed he should feel it his duty to order the soldiers to fire. The usual time being allowed to elapse, the order to fire was given, when two men fell dead, and four persons were wounded, one of whom was a Roman Catholic priest, Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, who received a wound in the ankle. One of the others wounded it was thought could not recover. This led to the dispersion of the mob.

A SCOUNDREL.

A case of a most cold-blooded nature has just occurred in the neighborhood of Lyon, about six miles from Brockville. It appears that a young man named Richard Hayworth, a Wesleyan Methodist, who had been living up the Canadian on that portion adjoining him on a property, was united in the matrimonial bonds to Miss Hayworth was a married man, but in June last, from ill-health, or some other cause, his wife returned home to England, of which country both she and her husband are natives. On being settled in the Lyn neighborhood as a pumpeer, Hayworth took up his abode in the house of a respectable farmer, where he was fed and cared for in the kindest manner, his common and proper being extremely comfortable, not only to the farmer, but to the people in the locality who attended his ministrations. The kindness shown him by the host and hostess was most kindly repaid. In the family were three daughters, one a most interesting girl of some twenty years of age, and the ruin of this young woman the hypocritical, accomplished himself to work to accomplish. When the people thought the growth attending to the spiritual interests of their child, the hypocritical fiend was undermining the daughter's virtue, and he succeeded in the diabolical purpose but too well, and when the fact became known, Hayworth decamped, and is now, it is said, on his way to England. We will do our best to ferret this chapter in his history after him, in order that others may guard against the wiles of such a scoundrel.—Brockville Recorder.

DREADFUL SUFFERINGS OF AUSTRALIAN EXPLORERS.

The Australian papers publish an account of the sufferings undergone by Wedger Lyons, and Macpherson, the saddler, in endeavors to overtake Mr. Burke and the advanced portion of the exploring expedition. Information of their pitiable condition was at length brought to the reserve camp by an aboriginal. A party was at once sent out to their succor, and arrived just in time to save them from what appeared to be certain death. Since that period the whole of the party have moved forward as Mr. Burke's track, while the second forming a permanent depot at Cooper's Creek, which place it was supposed Mr. Burke had left for the interior. Macpherson writes: "We two pushed on very hard for the water, and just as the sun got up we found ourselves in fearful pain; our tongues began to swell, and we could scarcely speak. We then opened our clothes, and allowed what little breeze there was to play about our bodies as we went along and from this we found some little relief. We went along in this manner, suffering the most intense agony, and never speaking a word to each other until we came to a place about six miles on the track, when we sat down under a tree. When we got up we could not see the trees, we were so giddy, and we were nearly blind. The agony at this time I cannot describe. We started a few yards and neither was of us was able to ask the other whether he had got the track. I presently lighted round and saw Lyons going about as if he had found the track, but I could not cry out to ask him, and I felt angry that he could not turn round. He walked on, however, and I followed, staring after him, and then I found the track. The heat was now most intense; we were extremely weak, and in fearful pain, and we had to sit down again about five miles from the water. We did not, however, stay long, but pushed on again, and never halted until we arrived at the waterhole. Our feelings now I cannot describe. I felt as if that waterhole was worth the world. I shall remember that waterhole while I live. I feel as if I could cry when I think of it. We drank about two pints each; that made us feel very queer, and we drank another pint. This brought all the skin right off our mouths, and tongues, and lips, and we felt great pain. We then threw our feet into the water, which relieved us greatly, and we bathed each other's hands, which was also a very great relief to us. Shortly after we were very sick. Vomited a great deal, and we then fell off to sleep. How long we slept I cannot say, but we were awakened by the black fellow Dick, who made his way to the water." The chiefs the party were put to for food seem to have almost reached the limit of human endurance. After the only horse which had been preserved had in some measure recovered, Macpherson went back to where the dead bodies of the others had been left, with a view of cutting off portions of their flesh for food. He says: "I got to the brown horse, and I found him swelled up greatly, and a very strong smell coming from him. I cut into the hind quarter and lit a fire with a view to cook a portion of it, which I did, but it would not stay on my stomach. I filled the bag with the remainder of the meat, and tied it up in a true, and went on to the place where the saddles were, about two and a half miles beyond. I put the saddles together and covered them with an oilskin. I then started back again. I found the meat in the tree, but I could not take it with me on account of the strong smell. I started to the camp, feeling very weak. Lyons asked me if I had brought any of the horse-flesh. I told him no, and he felt much disappointed. I went to the fire and had some tea, which at once made me very sick.—That night I was quite mad with the pain and sickness. The next day we started off from the waterhole, following the tracks back, and we came to the other waterhole which we had passed before at a distance of about five or six miles. We camped there, and the next day we made our way to the main part of Cooper's Creek. We stopped all day there, and gathered a lot of mussels in the creek, and filled our bag with them. We made an early start next morning, and went on that and the next day, subsisting on the mussels. On the third day after leaving the creek, Macpherson got bad, and we camped all night. On the fifth day Dick killed a snake, and this we cooked and ate. On the following day we pushed on without anything, hoping to make Lake Torrocts again; and the seventh day we got another snake, and some very young birds like swallows. On that night we found these little native animals like rats. We saw them come out of holes, and after a good deal of difficulty I managed to kill three of them by sitting up all night. Next day we travelled all day and all night, and on the following day Lyons' legs began to swell up very high, and it was clear he could not keep on walking. Dick and I then left Lyon all the water we had (about a quart) telling him to come on slowly to Lake Torrocts, and that we would go on and get the black horse there whether we could was not obeyed he should find it his duty to order the soldiers to fire. The usual time being allowed to elapse, the order to fire was given, when two men fell dead, and four persons were wounded, one of whom was a Roman Catholic priest, Rev. LAZY PLOUGHMEN.

Mr. Editor:—Please give this a place in your valuable paper.

"Have you seen anything extraordinary about ploughing in the Examiner lately," asked a friend of mine the other day as we met. "I have been very busy lately, and have not perused it," said I, "for that paper has always something good on such subjects, and I would like to see what it has to say about ploughing." We parted off together to his house; he brought me the paper; I read on for some time at the letter he pointed out to me, which was one of a series of letters on Agriculture. At last I came to a passage, and I stared; I looked over again, thinking, I had made a mistake;—but no, the same words were there still. "Well," said I, "only that it is known that the writer of that essay wishes to give instruction to the people, and had ploughmen in particular, I would be mad enough to ——— Lazy fellow, indeed; well; who would ever think of that?"—"Think of what," asked my friend. "Of calling all who cannot plough straight and good, lazy fellows," said I. "That is not there," said my friend. "What else can you make of it, when the fault is not in the horses or plough, but laziness of the man. You know some horses are very hard to manage, there should be some allowance made for that." My friend agreed with me and said he would like the essayist follow that No. 2 of his, and the grey team. If ever he had to step out in his life it would be then, and he defied him to do such fine work as he speaks of. It would be good punishment for any man who would accept that 75 per cent of all ploughmen are lazy to make him follow my horses for one good warm day, on the high field. I guess the idea of laziness would be well shook out of him; he would change his notions of ploughing and ploughmen. I don't think he meant an insult, but nothing else can be taken out of it. Perhaps it was only to rouse you there to a sense of duty." And we both took that view of it, and I am determined to cut half a-cord of gads and start in the morning and see what I can do.—If I improve, Mr. Editor, you will hear from me again.

HARDY ABBT.

Otonabee, May, 1861.

POTATOES CHEAPLY GROWN.

As usually cultivated, potatoes require a serious amount of heavy work in planting, hoeing, and harvesting. Anything which promises to lighten the labor of raising this indispensable crop, is worthy of consideration. The editor of the Illinois Farmer proposes an apparently feasible method, where the soil will admit. Corn stubble, or ground previously occupied by some other hoed crop, is chosen, a light furrow, about three inches deep, is struck, and the soil deposited seven to nine inches by the subsoil plow. As they follow the subsoiler, and [illegible] place, and [illegible] Together in the furrow. The first shallow furrow [illegible] the subsoiler in run through as before. At the third furrow, three feet from the first, another row of potatoes is dropped, to be covered up by the next furrow slice, and so on until the field is finished. In this way, the weeds, etc., are all turned under, the best soil is left for the nourishment of the growing crop, and the whole field is also subsoiled. Two teams and a boy to drop in the seed, will put in near two acres in a day.

After planting, the land is left until the shoots begin to break the ground, when a two-horse harrow is thoroughly used, followed by a roller to pulverize the soil. In about a week they are ready for the cultivator, with which they are dressed once a week until six inches high, and then slightly banked up with a shovel plow. When the blossoms are set, another banking up is given with a large shovel plow. Weeds growing afterward, are kept down with a cultivator, or by hand labor, but the hills or drills are not disturbed. The fork spade is recommended for digging the crop, but this labor may also be lightened by the use of a potato digger, drawn by a horse.—Amer. Agriculturist.

HINTS ON SOWING GARDENS.

Nature covers lightly. She scatters seed from the ripened stalk, for rains to wash into the earth, or the falling leaves to cover. The gardener often plants too deeply. Seeds which push up a large head as squashes or Lima beans, and others with a feeble stem, like onions, parsnips, etc., can not well force their way through several inches of stiff soil, packed down by heavy rains. A covering one half inch deep is sufficient for most seeds—less than that will answer for many.

In covering, see that lumps of dirt or small stones do not take the place of fine earth. This often happens when the seed is covered by raking the drills lengthwise; a better way is to pass the back of the rake crosswise over the drills. The old fashion of cutting up the garden into beds four to six feet wide, then wasting a large portion of the ground in useless paths, is now nearly out of date, and very properly. A few long rows of beets, carrots, onions, etc., across the garden, are more easily worked than beds of short rows.—American Agriculturist.

SEVEN YEARS.

THE seven years of unrivalled success attending the

"COSMOPOLITAN ART ASSOCIATION,"

have made it a household word throughout every quarter of the Country.

Under the auspices of this popular Institution over three hundred thousand homes have learned to appreciate—by beautiful works of art on their walls, and choice literature on their tables the great benefits derived from becoming a subscriber.

Subscriptions are now being received in a ratio unparalleled with that of any previous year

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Any person can become a member by subscribing three dollars, for which sum they will receive

1st.—The large and superb steel engraving, 30x38 inches, entitled,

"PALMETTO RECRUITING HIS RECRUITS!"

2nd.—One copy, one year, of that elegantly illustrated magazine,

"The Cosmopolitan Art Journal,"

3rd.—Four admissions, during the season, to The Gallery of Paintings, 548 Broadway, N.Y.

In addition to the above benefits, there will be given to subscribers, as gratuitous premiums, over Five Hundred Beautiful Works of Art, comprising valuable paintings, marbles, parians, outlines, &c., forming a truly national benefit.

The superb Engraving, which every subscriber will receive, entitled "Palmetto Recruiting his Recruits" is one of the most beautiful and popular engravings ever issued in this country. It is done on steel, in fine line and stipple, and is printed on heavy plate paper, 30 by 38 inches, making a most choice ornament, suitable for the walls of either the library, parlor or office. Its subject is the celebrated scene of Sir John Falstaff receiving in Justice Shallow's office, the recruits which have been gathered for his "ragged regiment." It could not be furnished by the trade for less than five dollars.

"THE ART JOURNAL"

is too well known in the whole country to need commendation. It is a magnificently illustrated magazine of Art, containing Essays, Stories, Poems, Gossip, &c., by the very best writers in America.

The Engraving is sent to any part of the country by mail, with safety, being packed in a cylinder, postage pre-paid.

Subscriptions will be received until the Evening of the 31st of January, 1861, at which time the books will close and the premiums be given to subscribers.

No person is restricted to a single subscription. Those remitting $15, are entitled to five memberships and to one extra Engraving for their trouble.

Subscriptions from California, the Canadas, and all Foreign Countries, must be $3 50 instead of $3, in order to defray extra postage, etc.

For further particulars send for a copy of the elegantly illustrated Art Journal, pronounced the handsomest magazine in America. It contains Catalogue of Premiums, and numerous superb engravings. Regular price 50 cents per number. Specimen copies, however, will be sent to those wishing to subscribe, in receipt of 18 cts, in stamps or coin.

ALBION HOTEL
MONTREAL.
L. W. DECKER, Proprietor.
IS pleasantly situated at the head of ST. PAUL STREET, amongst the largest wholesale houses in the city. It has (with business men generally, and especially with the best Merchants of both Provinces) become so great a favorite, that it is now acknowledged to be THE business Hotel of Montreal. To meet the extensive increase, during the last year in the business of the house, the proprietor has built a large addition. The Dining Room has been extended and made more commodious; there have been completed in the new wing, a great number of well-ventilated sleeping rooms, and the House throughout has been refitted, and now contains many large, comfortable and convenient suites of rooms unknown to the old Hotel in Canada.
The whole of the beds have, at great expense, been furnished with NEW SPRING MATTRASSES. The Proprietor expects that by continuing his personal management of the concern, THE ALBION to say the least of it, will continue to be, as it now is, the best Dollar and a half Hotel in Canada.

THE IVY GREEN.

AN OLD SONG.

Oh! a dainty plant is the ivy green,
That creepeth o'er the ruins old;
Of right choice food are his meals I ween,
In his cell so lonely and cold.
The wall must be crumbled, the stone decay'd
To please his dainty whim;
And the mouldering dust that years have made
Is a merry meal for him.
Creeping where no life is seen,
A rare old plant is the ivy green.

Fast he stealeth on though he wears no wings,
And a stanch old hand hath he;
How closely he twineth—how tightly he clings
To his friend, the huge oak tree!
And slyly he traileth along the ground,
And his leaves he gently waves,
As he joyously hugs and crawleth round
The rich mould of dead men's graves,
Creeping where grim death hath been,
A rare old plant is the ivy green.

Whole ages have fled, and works decay'd
And nations have scattered been;
But the proud old ivy shall never fade
From its hale and hearty green!
The brave old plant in its lonely days
Shall fatten on the past;
For the stanchest building man can raise,
Is the ivy's food at last.
Creeping where grim death hath been,
A rare old plant is the ivy green.

A Real Ghost Story.

BY DR. S. CAMPTON SMITH.

Some thirty years ago the interior counties of the State of New York, particularly those along the Erie Canal, were infested by an organized gang of thieves and robbers, whose head quarters were supposed to be in the city of New York. Their operations were not confined to the empire State, for there were abundant evidences that they extended through to the western States, and even to Canada.

It was supposed that there were among these rascals canal-boatmen, warehousemen, and others engaged in the forwarding trade of the canal, for scarcely a cargo of merchandize arrived at its destination along that great artery of commerce, from which one or more packages of goods had not been abstracted.

These losses, of course had to be made good to the owners by the transportation line to which the boats belonged, while it was useless to attempt to trace up the thefts to their sources.

Besides those employed on the canal there were others connected with the organization, and dwellings, barns, stables and cellars were nightly plundered, and even the fields and pastures were despoiled of sheep and cattle. Indeed, nothing came amiss to this gang of villains. Horses stolen in the East were disposed of in the West and those from the West found ready purchasers at the East, or to avoid suspicion, they were passed from hand to hand by the robbers, so entirely to elude pursuit or detection.

Even highway robberies were not unfrequent, and finally, to such an extent were these rascalities perpetrated, that many respectable farmers and others were glad to opportunities to sell out and remove to portions of the country where their property would be more secure. This state of things has never been paralleled on this continent, except by that more recent organization in the Mississippi valley, notorious as the Mysterious gang, whose field of operations covered no less than fifteen States.

It was no uncommon thing for farmers, when going over their premises, to find places where stolen goods had been temporarily secreted, and hunters penetrating the deep woods and swamps came unexpectedly upon hidden encampments, which in some instances, had the appearance of having been occupied for months. Sometimes they were deserted, and in some instances they were still occupied. But a second visit to these last would always find them broken up, and the rogues had fled to parts unknown.

Many persons were suspected as members of these gangs, but as nothing positive could be brought against them, they were seldom molested. Among them was a man by the name of Joe Gardiner, a small farmer in the town of Middlebury, in the then county of Genesee, but now Wyoming county. This man was rapidly accumulating property, but the secret of his success was a wonder to his honest neighbors. His horses and cattle increased in number to an astonishing degree, when his former poverty was considered, and his present apparent means.

Among the stock that Joe Gardiner possessed was a remarkable prolific mare. He was in the habit of mounting this animal in the fall, and after being absent all winter in Michigan, as he asserted, would return in the spring, leading a fine span of colts, which he always declared were the offspring of old Dolly. Every year the old mare was followed home in this manner by twin colts, and what made it more remarkable was that these colts were sometimes nearly as old as their reputed dam, yet Joe, never denied, except they were the produce from his wonderful mare. Every year found Joe Gardiner becoming richer and richer, and he was soon able to buy out the neighbor's farms, and cause them to his own homestead.

Still with all his wealth, this man was not respected. There was a mystery in his frequent absences and unexpected returns, his rapidly increasing property, and mishaps in his connections with strange, suspicious looking persons, that caused the neighbors to avoid his society, lest their own reputations might suffer thereby.

There is in Wyoming county an extensive cedar and hemlock swamp, through which flows the Tonewanda Creek. At the time of which I write this swamp covered many hundred acres, and had been but partly explored, except by enterprising lumbermen, for whom, however, but few inducements were held out, except in regard to cedar timber, which was extensively used in the construction of canal locks. The greater portion of the swamp was then owned by Joe Gardiner, who had purchased it for a mere song, as it was considered valueless for agricultural purposes, being mostly underlaid with quicksand.

Some distance into the swamp, on a small island, was a deserted shanty, which had been built by a party of lumbermen, who had been engaged in getting out cedar timber, but had left it in consequence of the sickness which had prevailed among them during the summer, and which was supposed to be caused by the miasma arising from the swamp.

Gardiner had purchased this shanty, and had been in the habit of visiting it frequently during the fall and winter, and it was supposed by many that he had secreted his ill-gotten gains there, as no one ever saw him carry anything away from it, and he was frequently seen to enter it with a bundle, which he would leave there on his return.

Such was the state of affairs in Wyoming county in the fall of 1829, when I, in company with a young man named Fowler, who had been a student of medicine with me, left Buffalo on the canal packet for Rochester, where we intended to take the stage for Batavia, at which place we had some business to transact. We had taken passage in the cabin, and had retired to our berths for the night, when I was awakened by a violent shaking, and on opening my eyes I found Fowler standing by my berth in a state of great excitement.

"Get up, Doctor," said he, "get up, for God's sake, and dress yourself, for I have seen a ghost!"

"Nonsense," said I, "you have been dreaming, Fowler; lie down and go to sleep."

"I tell you I have seen a ghost," said he, "and I must have company, or I shall go crazy. Get up, I say, and dress yourself, for I will not sleep another wink to-night."

Finding that Fowler was in earnest, I arose and dressed myself, and then inquired what he had seen.

"I will tell you," said he, "when we get on deck, for I cannot bear to speak of it here."

We accordingly went on deck, and Fowler proceeded to relate what he had seen, as follows:

"I had been sitting in the cabin for some time, and finding it rather close, I went out on the deck, and walked forward to the bow of the boat, where I sat down and commenced looking at the moon, which was shining brightly, and thinking of home, when I was startled by a voice behind me, saying, 'Fowler, I am glad to see you.' I looked around, and to my astonishment saw standing by my side a man who resembled in every particular my friend Scott Fowler, living in the township of Orangeville, who being an intelligent and spirited young medical man, and knowing the value of cedar shingles, determined to erect a shanty in the heart of the swamp, and occupied himself during the fall of 1829 in getting out bolts, which could be hauled out during the winter, when the sloughs being frozen over, teams could penetrate the forest. Finding it impossible to obtain the assistance of others, Fowler went alone, and selecting a suitable location, soon had a comfortable shelter, and commenced the work of felling trees and cutting them into bolts.

For a day or two nothing occurred to discourage him; but after that time he was disturbed by strange sounds. He would sometimes be suddenly aroused by frightful screams close to the door of his shanty, like those of persons in imminent peril. Then the sounds would die away in groans, and finally would cease altogether for the night. At other times his shanty would be pelted with pebbles, and other means were resorted to to excite his alarm. But Fowler was not to be scared by these things, and several times he sprang from his pallet, and catching up his rifle, ran out and searched the vicinity for the cause of these disturbances. But nothing could be discovered; and as no very serious attempts had been made, he gradually became accustomed to these sounds and did not permit them to discourage him in his work. In the daytime he was never molested, and he continued to work away at his shingles and bolts as if there had been not the least cause for alarm.

He had no doubt that the swamp was occupied by persons who wished to get rid of his presence there, and had adopted these means to accomplish their object. But so long as they offered him no injury, he was determined to accomplish the work for which he had entered the swamp.

He had thus worked nearly a week, when, Saturday arriving, he concluded to secrete his tools, and return to his home, till Monday.

It was near night when he reached the edge of the gloomy swamp, when there suddenly appeared a strange figure in the path before him. This apparition which to his excited imagination seemed to be at least eight feet in height, was enveloped in the folds of a white sheet, so that nothing but a ghastly face and two staring eyes could be perceived.

Fowler, as I have said, was a brave man and had always ridiculed the idea of ghosts or disembodied spirits having anything to do with mortals. But all men are more or less superstitious; and Scott Fowler, with all his courage, felt that he was standing in the presence of some unearthly being. He was satisfied in his own mind that no living man ever wore so deathlike an expression as was seen in the bloodless and pallid face of the figure before him; and then the steady glare of those motionless, leaden eyes, which were fixed upon him with a dull gaze, certainly could not be human. Besides, he argued, nothing human that he had ever seen towered to the height of this apparition.

At all events, "he felt good spirit or a devil," Fowler determined to salute the ghastly stranger; and approaching to within a few yards of where it was standing, he demanded—

"Who are you and why do you rise up in the path before me?"

A deep groan was the only reply the sheeted figure deigned to give this abrupt questioning.

"I never did harm to mortal man," exclaimed the woodman, "therefore I fear no harm from you. So out with it, old fellow, and tell me who you are!"

"I'm a spirit!" replied the figure, drawing out the words solemnly, and with a sepulchral sound.

"Spirit of what—of who?" asked Fowler, whose courage arose at the sound of his own voice. "If you have any business with me, speak out! You see I ain't scared!"

"Mortal" groaned the ghost, "do you know you are on haunted ground?"

"Oh, yes," was the prompt reply; "I found that out several nights ago. But what of that? What do you want?"

"I have a deed of blood to divulge to you! But not to-night. Will you meet me here on Monday night, at this same hour?" asked the ghost.

"Well, I reckon I will," was Fowler's reply.

At that moment an unearthly scream behind him made the shingle-maker turn his head suddenly in that direction, and on recovering his former position the ghost disappeared. Whether it had sunk into the grave from which it had risen, or had melted into thin air, was a mystery to Fowler, who, finding his path clear, made haste to quit the gathering shadows of the swamp.

On his way home he received this suggestive colloquy in his mind, and the more he thought of it the more strongly he became impressed with the idea that some kind of a trick was about being played upon him.—He remembered the fact that the spot where the dead upon the spirit was encamped by a cedar stump, which might have been mistaken in the dim twilight for the figure. This discovery being made, it was easy to explain the other circumstances of the unearthly figure and hollow, sepulchral voice, for ventriloquism, he knew, might have been resorted to for the purpose of frightening him away from the swamp, and keeping up the story of the place being haunted.

This circumstance led to the final breaking up of the gang, and old Joe, with a number of his fellow thieves, served out a long apprenticeship in the strong building at Auburn.

ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

An English newspaper, the Western Morning News, states that a few days ago a house in the parish of St. Issey, Cornwall was struck by lightning. The lightning passed into the bedroom; one of the pillows on the bed, on which a woman was laying, was cut in two as if with a knife, and the pieces thrown to the other end of the room. The headpiece of the bed was broken in two like a match, and the bed curtains rent in pieces. Two children, who at the same time were playing on the window bench of the same room, were not hurt although the window was carried clean out. The bricks and stones which fell from the chimney fell on the bed, almost burying the woman, but she was not seriously hurt. The electric fluid passed downwards through the floor, breaking a stone 14 inch thick, which was under the fire place, and splitting the mantlepiece in pieces. A tea tray was torn up in a roll like paper, and a teapot and other things that stood there were scorched, and smelt as if it had been blasted with powder.—The lightning struck on the ground floor, and tore the stone up just where a young woman was standing washing; she was knocked down and rendered temporarily senseless, but was only a little hurt. In its progress through the house the lightning broke the hinges of the kitchen door off, smashed the glass of the clock and broke off the door, and threw a cabinet out of a parlour standing on the contrary.

AN INFANT LOGICIAN.

A gentleman of Two Rivers, whose little son's years had not reached to four, was in the habit of teaching to her mind. "A. B. says that the Bible is made of green cheese and I don't believe it." "Didn't you believe it? Why, dear?" "I know it isn't—did they tell you so, father?" "Why, no, my child, I don't believe that; but I don't know what makes you think it." "Why, I don't believe it because I don't believe it." Which shows that the little one's mind is not to be led astray by the assertions of others, but that it is capable of forming its own opinions.

NAPOLEON'S REMAINS.

The remains of the Emperor Napoleon I. were recently transferred from the Chapel of St. Jerome in the Church of the Invalides in Paris, where they had rested for the last 20 years, to the tomb placed under the Dome. This solemn ceremony was performed in presence of the emperor, the empress, Prince Napoleon, the Princess Lucian and Joachim Murat, and the other members of the imperial family, the marshalls, admirals, etc. The emperor was received on his arrival at the entrance of the Invalides by the governor and by Prince Murat and his son. A double line was formed by the old soldiers, through which the emperor walked. The Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, Grand Almoner, recited the vespers in the chapel of St. Jerome. After the prayers the remains of the Emperor Napoleon I. were carried by 24 Cent-Gardes and lowered into the crypt. The Count de Casabonceres, grand master of the ceremonies, conducted the cortege. The banners were carried by Marshal Magnan, Vaillant and Randon. At the conclusion of the ceremony the emperor reviewed the old soldiers and distributed crosses.—Paris Presse.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.

Professor Silliman, of New Haven, recently closed a Smithsonian lecture by giving the following sensible advice to young men:—

"If, therefore, you wish for a clear mind and strong muscles, and quiet nerves, and long life, and power prolonged in old age, permit me to say, although I am not giving a temperance lecture, avoid all drinks where water and mild effusions of that fluid, shun tobacco, opium, and everything else that disturbs the normal state of the system; rely upon nutritious food, and mild, diluted drinks, of which water is the best, and you will need nothing beyond these things, except rest, and due moral regulations of all your powers, to give you long, happy and useful lives and a serene evening at the close."

IMMORAL PUBLICATIONS.

From the Journal of Education for April

A great deal has been said and written on the pernicious tendency of much of our cheap literature, and books of this class are now to be purchased from booksellers who not only profess to be moral but who exert the character of being religious men; and even worse still, many of what may be considered the less directly immoral of them are admitted into the family circle either through ignorance of the dangerous nature of their contents, or from a sort of sighted philosophy that the young had better read almost anything in the shape of a book than read nothing at all. With respect to the New York Ledger it cannot be disputed that it contains many excellent articles, and herein consists its danger, were all its papers and paragraphs of a vicious character, the periodical would be generally shunned, and it would rank in the general catalogue of immoral publications and excluded from all respectable society. (Such publications undermine the morals of a people, and young Harter lately executed for murder gave evidence of their destructive tendency.)

NOT DEEP ENOUGH FOR PRAYING.

We heard, a night or to since, a touchable story of a couple of raftsmen. The event occurred during the late big blow on the Mississippi, at which time so many rafts were swamped, and so many steamboats lost their sky-riggings. A raft was just emerging from Lake Pepin as the squall came. In an instant the raft was pitching and writhing as if suddenly dropped into Carvedis, while the waves broke over with tremendous uproar, and expecting instant destruction, the raftsmen dropped on his knees and commenced praying with a vim equal to the emergency. Happening to open his eyes an instant, he observed his companion, not engaged in prayer, but pushing a pole into the water at the side of the raft.

"What's that yer doin', Mike?" said he; "get down on yer knees, now, for there isn't a minit between us and Purgatory!"

"Be aisy, Pat," said the other, as he coolly continued to punch the water with his pole; "the slap, now! what's the use of praying when a feller can tech bottom with a pole?"

Mike is a pretty good specimen of a large class of Christians, who prefer to omit prayer as long as they can "tetch bottom."

PRAYING AND PAYING SOLDIERS.

A letter from a lady in Washington contains the following:—

"There is a story told by one of the N. Y. Generals, that no one can listen to without tears and a glow of pride in our New England soldiers. He says: 'While encamped in Maryland, I wandered off one day and came up to a farm-house, where I saw a party of three Massachusetts fellows—wait, no, they were Rhode Island boys, but it's all the same—talking with a woman who was greatly frightened. They tried to vote to quiet her apprehensions. They asked for food and she cried, "O, take all I have, take everything, but spare my dear husband." "O," said one of the men, "you don't going to hurt you, we want something to eat." The woman persisted in being frightened in spite of all efforts to reassure her, and herded whatever food she had on the table. But when she saw the company stand about the table with bared heads, and a soft-faced man—the tallest and handsomest of Gods blessing on the bounties spread on their behalf, the poor woman broke down with a fit of sobbing and crying. She had no longer any fears, but bid them wait, and in a few minutes had made them her welfare inquiries. After they had satisfied their appetites they would not accept any pay for their meal, but insisted upon paying for her." The Lieutenant tells this with great expression. Said he, "Their asking a blessing took me by surprise, and when I saw this I felt that our country was safe with such men to fight for it."

STRIKE THE KNOT.

We once read this, purporting to come from an old gentleman in California:

"The substance of the story, as far as we remember it, was that when quite a boy he was trying to split a small log. The axe had been lying in the wood-pile a long time, and had become hard and dry.—It was too small for a back-log, and yet too large for a fore-stick, and to make it still more unfit for use, it had a large knot projecting from one side. At the earnest request of his mother, he undertook to split the log into kindling wood, and in the hope of overcoming it, was dealing one blow after another in one end of it. 'Strike the knot,' said the father, who happened to observe his son's unsuccessful efforts, 'strike the knot, my son, and you can split the log readily enough.' He did so, and the trouble was soon over. And the old gentleman says those words, 'Strike the knot!' have been his motto through life, and he believes he has got along as well as most people, perhaps rather better. In every difficult and troublesome task he strikes at the knottiest part first, and we think his rule a good one for all to adopt."—Life Illustrated.

A TAME LINNET IN THE WILD WOODS.

A singular circumstance happened in a plantation near Lytham a short time since. Several woodcutters were busy at work, when their attention was attracted by a green linnet, which seemed anxious to make their acquaintance. In a short time it selected one of the men, and perched on his shoulder, ate crumbs from his hands, and even allowed him to put it in his pocket, where it seemed quite at home. It was let go again, but continued to follow the man at their work during the afternoon, occasionally alighting on the one it at first selected, and was finally taken with him to his home in the evening. No doubt the little songster had been accustomed to more refined quarters than the open woods; but, at this season of the year, to prefer the society of men to that of its feathered companions, and to select one from a number for its special attention, does seem somewhat singular.—Scotch Paper.

THE TWO RIVERS.

In Switzerland there are two rivers which mingle their waters and form one river.—The water of one is turbid, the other very clear. When they first meet, the waters refuse to mingle. The clean and muddy flow along, forming one river; but you can clearly distinguish the one from the other. By degrees the clear, bright waters of the one become united with those of the other, and the clearness is lost forever.

Virtuous and vicious persons can associate for a time, keeping their characters distinct. But if the association be continued, the virtuous, pure character will become soiled by the vicious. No one can associate freely with the wicked without becoming in some measure like them.

CAUTIOUS MEN.

Some men use words as ridicules do bullets. They say little. The few words used go right to the mark. They let you talk, and glide with their eye and face, on and on, till what you say can be answered in a word or two, and then they issue out a sentence, pierce the matter to the quick, and are done. You never know where you stand with them. Your conversation falls into their minds, as rivers fall into a deep chasm, and are lost from sight by its depths and darkness. They will sometimes surprise you with a few words, that go right to the mark like a gun-shot, and then they are silent again, as if they were re-loading.

THREE CHANCES FOR A WIFE.

When a man has three chances for a wife it is hard if he should fail. The following is a chase which might have occurred "down East," but it is doubtful if any such occurrence was ever known in any other part of the world. A friend of ours says:

I once courted a gal by the name of Deb Dawkins. I made it up to get married. Well, while we were going to the Deacon's, I stopped into the mud puddle, and spattered the mud all over Deb's new gown, made out of her grandmother's chintz petticoat. When we got to the deacon's he asked Deb if she would take me for her lawful wedded husband!

"No," says she.

"Reuse 'em," says I.

"Why," says she, "I've taken a notion to you."

Well, it was all up then, but I gave her a string of beads, a few hisses, and some other nice young notions and made it all up with her; so we went up to the deacon's a second time, I was behind to come up with her this time, so when the Deacon asked me if I would take her for my wedded wife, says I,

"No, I don't do no such thing."

"Why," says Deb, "what on earth is the matter?"

"Why," says I, "I've taken a notion to you."

"Well, it was all over again; but I gave her a new apron and we were all right to get married. We expected that then that we would be wed at last; but, as misfortune's seldom will, but often do, about the dearest we wished nearly ruined us.

"No, I didn't do no such thing."

"Why, what on earth is the reason?" says she.

"Why," says he, "I've taken a position' to both of you."

That was too much for the dearest, but getting her self together, she says, "Well, I'll have you, and I'll have him, and I'll have no other man!" and she has.

THE FIGHTS FOR THE UNION.

The special correspondent of the Rochester Evening Express (newspaper paper) writing from Manila, says:

"I have heard a great deal about 'old revolutionary patriotism,' but if I were to take the volunteers of Washington Navy Yard as a criterion to judge by I should pronounce it a very scarce article. It is said that Americans sing the 'Star-spangled banner' still write 'home lyrics,' talk of the 'glory of our arms,' and in patriotic times wear badges and caps; but, if my experience may constitute the substance of these traits, we will find the great blessings of the age gone. Why is this? Why are the [illegible] ready to be the first to leap to the defence of their father's graves? Is it because of the greatly degenerating influence of [illegible] ed aristocracy, growing in this country, which is poisoning the springs which gave life to the Pilgrim Fathers? The Americans youth is raised into young men days on benches "there who gone"—he is more at home, when "perfumed like a milliner," he speculates over some matrimonial "scheme"—or bargains the least of the family burying ground at a "second hand?" This is the light in which I see "American patriotism" in the shade. If over the "flowery flag" is trailed in the dust, it will be because Americans loved the "Almighty Dollar" more than the God of their fathers, and hired Irish and Dutchmen to do the fighting!"

ARRIVAL OF THE "AMERICA."

HALIFAX, May 30.

The Royal Mail steamship America, from Liverpool, has arrived.

The Hibernian, for Liverpool the 15th instant, for Quebec, put back with slightly damaged machinery.

The steamship Columbia, of the Cunard line, had arrived at Liverpool to repair damages received from ice.

In the House of Lords, on the 16th instant, the Earl of Ellenborough asked the Government whether the term ignited blockade, used in the recent proclamation, was to be identify interpreted or with qualifications, or, according to the strict meaning of the Paris agreement, it was impossible to maintain an effective blockade. He complained of the vagueness of the proclamation, with respect to articles contraband of war.

The Earl of Granville replied that useful blockade must be maintained by sufficient forces; that it was not absolutely necessary to render all ingress and egress impossible, but to render it extremely difficult. In respect to other questions, he stated that certain articles were clearly contraband of war, but certain other articles were dependent upon special circumstances and contingencies which could only be decided by a Prize Court, and which it was impossible to define beforehand.

The Earl of Derby said there were two points on which it was desirable that the Government should come to an understanding with the United States. They proclaim a blockade of the whole Southern coast, which they have not the force to maintain. Although they could lawfully blockade certain ports, it was not desirable that they should proclaim a universal blockade. The Northern States also declare that they should treat privateers as pirates; but they could not do so by the law of nations, and it was desirable that, notwithstanding the proclamation, it should be declared such. The enforcement of the penalty on British subjects would not be viewed with indifference by England.

Lord Brougham said, privateering according to the international law was not piracy, but to join an expedition against a Power at peace with England was a piratical act. To constitute an efficient blockade, such a force must be maintained as to make the passage of it absolutely impossible, but this was very difficult.

Lord Chelmsford denied the doctrine of Lord Brougham relative to privateers.

Lord Lansdowne said that Earl Granville had laid down the law correctly with respect to the blockade of articles contraband of war. A subject of another Power holding letters of marque was not guilty of piracy.

Lord Kingsdown said that the Northern States might consider citizens of the Southern States as rebels and guilty of high treason, but this would not apply to the subjects of other powers becoming privateers.

At a preliminary meeting of the great Ship Company, the Chairman said that contingent orders had been given to the Captain of the Great Eastern in respect to her employment by the American Government, and the Ministry would be asked whether she would be absolved from the penalties if chartered before the Queen's proclamation got out.

THE REBELLION IN CHINA.

Hong Kong, April 13

By the return of a private steamer to Shanghae from Ningpoo, we learn that Admiral Hope, with the fleet, was close to Hangkow on the 11th ult. The foreigners who visited Hankow were courteously received by the Chinese authorities. It does not appear that the insurgents have yet got possession of Kinghiang, but the places they have taken exhibit a sad state of destruction. We learn the following particulars of the journey to Hangkow and the places visited:—"Nankin is totally destroyed, as is also Chingkiang, the first of the open ports; both are a mass of ruins."

The rebels at Chinn proved civil, but appeared a degraded set. All trade is stopped and the people quite subdued, being forced to work without pay, getting only a little food. In moving about the place nothing was seen but misery and desolation. Nganking is the last port held by the rebels and the country as far as this presented the same features of destruction. Above this the appearance of the country is improved, but even there along the banks had all suffered in former attacks from the rebels, and, with the exception of Hankow, only small portions have been rebuilt.

THE MILITIA FORCE IN CANADA.

In the House of Commons on the 17th ult., Lord J. Manners asked whether troops had been moved from Montreal to the Canadas, and whether the [illegible] Canada and the St. Lawrence Canals are guarded by the military? Also whether a [illegible] trained [illegible] in-Chief in Canada had made a requisition for a large addition to the force in Canada, and if so, with what result?

Mr. T. C. Baring replied that the Secretary of State for War had received no official information with respect to the subject referred to in the first question of the noble lord, but he had received private information that a few men, about 100, had been sent to the locks of the canal. With respect to the second question, he had to say that the Commander-in-Chief in Canada had some time since represented that the military force in Canada was below the amount at which it stood some years since. It was intended to send one battalion, which would restore the military strength to what it had been.

DREADFUL SUFFERINGS AND LOSS OF LIFE AT SEA.

In the Montreal General Hospital at present is a Captain in the Merchant Service whose sufferings on the occasion of the recent loss of his vessel in the ice, presents an instance of the frightful dangers to which so many brave men are necessarily exposed while engaged in the arduous duties of a seafaring life.

On the 5th of March last, the brigantine Perseverance, 195 tons, Captain Wilson, belonging to Strangeford, near Belfast, Ireland, sailed from Hamburg for St. John's, Newfoundland, laden with a cargo consisting principally of bread in bags, consigned to Messrs. Bowring Brothers. The crew consisted of nine men besides the captain. Everything went on fairly until the night of Tuesday, the 9th of April, when the ship got suddenly among the ice at a distance of 150 miles from port. All hands were called upon deck, but nothing could be done to save the ship, which sank almost immediately, being literally broken in two by the immense pressure of the ice. The crew had but a quarter of an hour in which to lower the boat and throw in a small quantity of provisions. In the morning the ten men found themselves in the open boat, (which seems to have been preserved in a miraculous manner) with only twenty pounds weight of bread and the same quantity of meat. They had no fresh water with them, but this deficiency was supplied by the ice by which they were surrounded for several days. On Friday, the 12th, the first man died; no further deaths took place until the following Friday, when three of the unfortunate sailors, worn out by hunger and fatigue, were unable to bear up any longer against the privations to which they were exposed. The survivors, who were hourly expecting a similar fate, had barely strength to throw overboard the bodies of their ill-fated companions. After this day the remaining five seamen rapidly gave way under the combined effects of want of food and exposure, and dropped off one by one, in several instances madness seizing them before death took place. The Captain says that the most painful circumstances connected with the catastrophe was seeing several vessels at different times passing by out of hailing distance, and too far off to notice the small black speck upon the ocean presented by the small boat. On the 27th of April, however, the bark Lord Peter, Captain Brown, observed the boat, bore down towards it, and took off Captain Wilson, who was then the only survivor. When rescued from this horrible situation two of the crew were lying beside him, dead, and he himself appeared like a skeleton, not having tasted any kind of food for upwards of five days. When picked up by Captain Brown, the boat was in latitude 46 25 N., and longitude 46,06 W. Captain Wilson had been altogether 18 days in it. He received the greatest kindness and most judicious treatment from Captain Brown, whose hospitality he enjoyed for twenty-five day before the Lord Peter's arrival at this port, it having been found necessary to remain at Quebec several days. All that Captain Wilson now complains of is a partial paralysis in the feet, occasioned by their long soaking in sea water. This, however, will take but a few days to cure.

MIRAGE ON THE LAKE.

This beautiful and not unusual phenomenon in the lake region, at certain states of the atmosphere, threw in our remembrance came out more wonderfully beautiful and marvellous than on yesterday. The day was still, bright and clear. The lake lay with scarcely a ripple, and above and beyond it loomed the long sweep of yellow sand hills and heavy forests and undergrowth that characterise the curve of shore from near Michigan City north-easterly towards St. Joseph. The distance from Chicago to Michigan city is thirty-eight miles, to New Buffalo forty-five, and yet the shore at both these points and intervening, rose high and sharply defined as if not ten miles away. The forms of the taller trees were distinctly made out, little patches of dark shrubbery were strongly relieved against the golden yellow slopes. The effect was unreal and fairy-like, and even more so when one east of the city a fore and aft schooner, with every sail set to catch every breeze, was apparently sailing in the sky, though gradually, from her distance, sailed away and sank down beyond the horizon. This beautiful spectacle was enjoyed by multitudes who watched it for hours, until the fairy shores faded out, the airy schooner betook herself to a home-from lumber voyage, and the lake became again what it is in the view, practically, of the larger share of our citizens, a respectable adjunct to the prosperity of our city.—Western Paper.

He has now a farm of 600 acres, and pays taxes on $200,000 of personal property. He has never had any business but farming. I know another man whose father left him a farm of about 300 acres, [illegible] ago, with some encumbrance on it in the shape of legacies to other heirs, who has now over 400 acres of land, and $50,000 at interest. He has also done no business but farming. A young Scotchman worked for six or [illegible] ago, who had but 2 cents when he began, but who now has a good farm of 200 acres, well stocked, and free from debts. He knew how to do the mechanical part of farming thoroughly, but he knew nothing about speculation. I could name others who have acquired fortunes wholly by farming. A farmer of small means should be economical and still very liberal. He should be economical in dress for himself and family, and in his dwelling and furniture; he should be liberal in feeding his stock, manuring his land, and in supplying labor to work his land. I have seen many farmers who were kept always poor by trying to do too much work for the number of laborers employed, whereas, if they had hired double the labor it would have paid abundantly. This is a very common mistake.—Boston Cultivator.
